Your Horoscope

Sunday, Dec. 9

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Aries (March 21-April 19) Someone you'll be in contact with today has it in for you. It will take a cool head and sound judgment to handle this guy effectively.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) You could solve some problems today about money matters—or who owes what to whom. If you have an old obligation, try to work it out amicably.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) What you have planned for today and what your mate would like to do will have you pulling in opposite directions. Try to reach an agreement.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) If you permit ill-tempered people to try to pawn off some responsibilities on you today, Be firm in your refusal to be used.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) You may find yourself involved socially today with acquaintances who'll give you a pain in the neck. Some commitments be fore accepting.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Someone you have an obligation to is wondering why you haven't met it. If you want to keep this relationship intact, talk things over face-to-face.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Though you enjoy a good discussion now and then, be careful when you debate today. It could easily get out of hand.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) This is not a good day for you and your mate to work on your budget. Each will feel money is being spent foolishly by the other.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Don't try to make important decisions today. You'll be too easily influenced by factors that don't reveal the true picture.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) It will not be a wise move today to try to do something around the house a skilled professional should be doing.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You have a tendency today to over-indulge yourself, particularly if you're having a good time. Be temperate—think of tomorrow.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) For the next few days it would be wise not to overspend on household or family needs. Your budget can't handle the strain.

THAT FOUR LETTER WORD

HOME — means everything to the happy family. To have its fitted meaning it must be your own. There is security in rented accommodation, but to show you one of our models now awaiting completion on Dundas Boulevard. This house will attached carport has 1-bedroom living dining room, large kitchen, with ample cabinet area for average family and 2 bedrooms. Basement divided for future rec room.

A BAD FOUR LETTER WORD

MOVE — can you tell when circumstances in the part of your landlord will force him to utter this ominous word? When it happens it's not much fun. Preclude this happening with a home of your own. Why should your children have their schooling disrupted because your landlord can no longer look after your accommodation. For their sake here is the formula to own your own. For as little as $1,500.00 down we can offer a 3 bedroom townhouse accommodation that is your very own. Yes have a model suite to show you.

THE BEST FOUR LETTER WORD

GURS — not only is it pleasing to the ear but it is pleasing to the look. Once your payments are set they fluctuate very little for the term of the mortgage, not so, with rent ! It continues to climb and what it saves it leaves no equity for your family to look to in the years ahead. There is no way to accumulate money other than in owning a home. We have a model in West Belleville for as little as you would last year in the east end and has recently resold with a $13,000.00 profit. Who is to say it won't happen again. Ask to see our many houses in all parts of the city.

Lougheed Calm About Oil Move

EDMONTON (CP) — Premier Peter Lougheed reacted calmly Friday to Prime Minister Trudeau's sweeping new energy policies, saying the Alberta government will decide early next year whether to accept the federal price freeze on crude oil.

He told the legislature he was "not particularly surprised" that Ottawa did not live up to its commitment to lift the price freeze Feb. 1.

The premier said the prime minister's announcement of a continuation of the freeze and creation of a national petroleum corporation makes the legislation introduced this week by the provincial government "just that much more important in protecting the interests of Alberta."

He was referring to bills designed to give the province flexibility to respond to changes in federal energy policy, including provisions giving the provincial cabinet power to set prices for crude oil in Alberta despite any price freeze.

The Alberta government has said it is not willing to tolerate on a long-term basis the selling of Alberta oil below fair market value, meaning that the price must be higher than its current frozen level of $4 a barrel.

Grant Notley, leader of the New Democratic Party, asked Mr. Lougheed whether his government will respect his price freeze once the new Alberta legislation has been passed.

The premier replied:

"Certainly that would be something we'd assess in the early months of 1974, having regard to the condition that would exist at that time."

The premier said that except for the price freeze, Mr. Trudeau's energy announcement in the Commons Thursday contained nothing particularly new or different.

He noted that Alberta has already held discussions with Ottawa about an extension of the crude oil pipeline to Montreal, and said:

"I wish we'd end the conversation and start to construct the pipeline."

Mr. Trudeau said it is hoped such a pipeline could be constructed by 1975.

Mr. Lougheed said Alberta had been told of the federal announcement about the continuation of the price freeze in advance of the prime minister's statement. However, the premier said he could not call this consultation.

"The end result of the discussion was an agreement to disagree, but there was no question that the provincial government was apprised in advance."

Mr. Lougheed noted that Mr. Trudeau had said the price freeze will continue until the end of the "winter season," and was asked by Mr. Notley what definition Ottawa is using to determine the end of winter.

"I have the feeling, as many westerners do these days, that the definition with regard to winter might emanate out of Toronto," the premier said with a smile.

He told Mr. Notley that, before consultation of the freeze, Alberta had planned to implement oil-price increases gradually after Feb. 1, provided the legislature passed the new energy bills.

"We did envisage a staging process where there would be lower increases in terms of the winter months and accelerating as we reached the spring, to reduce the impact upon the consumers of Canada during the winter months."

Oilmen Predict Search Failure

CALGARY (CP) — The proposed national petroleum corporation is unlikely to succeed in oil and gas exploration off the East Coast or other areas of Canada, oil industry spokesmen said Friday.

Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau is asking Canadians to take unnecessary risks just because the Liberals want to stay in power, said Arne Nielsen, president of Mobil Oil Canada Ltd.

The industry has spent more than $300 million—$64 million this year alone—off the Atlantic provinces searching for energy. So far, there has been no return on the investment as not a single company has reported a commercial find.

For a Crown corporation supported by Canadian taxpayers to take such risks is unconscionable, Mr. Nielsen said.

Historically the private sector has been doing better than government, he said.

"The industry is perfectly capable of developing energy resources in this country without government intervention."

Worst of all, Mr. Trudeau's announcement creates uncertainties for the industry, Mr. Nielsen said.

"Risk investors will look at Canada in 1974 and decide to stay out," said Scotty Cameron, general manager of the Independent Petroleum Association of Canada.

This is particularly so in the Atlantic provinces where offshore wells carry a price tag of $3.5 million each, more than twice the cost in 1971.

Mobil and Texas Eastern Exploration of Canada Ltd., a subsidiary of Texas Eastern Transmission Corp. of Houston, have invested $75 million drilling 17 wells—nine on Sable Island, N.S., 165 miles southeast of Halifax, five near Sable Island, and three on the Grand Banks off Newfoundland.

Spokesmen for Shell Canada Ltd. and Amoco Canada Petroleum Co. Ltd. also expressed concern over Mr. Trudeau's announcement.

Shell has invested $125 million on offshore drilling off Nova Scotia and in the Gulf of St. Lawrence. It has drilled 38 wells without striking commercial find.

"I can't say we're pleased with the results," Shell President John Bookout said.

In a statement released in Calgary Friday, Shell said:

"Shell Canada accep's the establishment of a national petroleum company as it would any other competitor provided that the company operates under the same rules as any other company in the private sector and is not given special concessions which give it an competitive advantage."

The Amoco-Imperial group, consisting of Amoco, Imperial Oil Ltd., Shelly Oil of Canada Ltd. and Standard Oil Co. of British Columbia, has invested $70 million on 24 wells on the Grand Banks—and all it has reported are capped and abandoned wells.

"We have been unsuccessful off the east coast and I don't think the government can succeed," an Amoco spokesman said.

U. S. Tariff Changes Threaten Big Part of Canadian Exports

WASHINGTON (CP) — The United States customs service has proposed changes in an obscure tariff regulation which, if adopted, may bury a substantial part of Canadian exports to the U.S. in red tape and unpredictable sources said Friday.

Canada sent nearly $300 million worth of manufactured goods into the U.S. market last year which can be affected by the regulation.

J. M. McAvity, president of the Montreal-based Canadian Export Association, and representatives of individual Canadian manufacturers are scheduled to meet privately here Tuesday with senior customs officials to reinforce complaints they filed earlier in writing about the proposed changes.

Informants said the volume of protest and comment from Canadian and other foreign exports and from a variety of American interests is almost certain to have an impact before the customs service announce the final shape of the new regulations.

Steven Pinter, a customs service lawyer involved in the issue, would say only that the "ultimate form of the regulations has not yet been determined" and that the service is "trying to arrive at a solution which won't hamper importers unduly."

The regulations at issue cover cases in which goods manufactured in the U.S. are shipped abroad, incorporated into a larger product, and then shipped back for sale in the U.S.

Some examples include U.S.-made components sent to Canada for inclusion in aircraft engines or frames that are later shipped back to the United States, or yard goods sent to Latin America or Asia to be made into clothing for sale on the American market.

Under the regulation as it stands, the American-made segment of the imported product is exempt from customs duty and taxes if the work has been kept to a minimum.

However, the current regulations have permitted what one informed American source described as "a lot of razzle-dazzle." The customs service is understood to have imposed some $40 million in fines last year—mainly on importers from Mexico, the Far East and Puerto Rico—for abuses of the law.

Farmers Opposing Firms Owning Land

WINNIPEG (CP) — A strongly-worded statement on land use, calling for a virtual end to ownership of farm land by corporations or aliens, was approved Friday by delegates to the National Farmers Union (NFU) convention.

The statement says only Canadian citizens or landed immigrants should own or lease more than one acre of land in Canada. Aliens now owning land would be permitted to retain it, but should be able to sell their holdings only to a Canadian citizen or landed immigrant.

In addition, the group urged that the family farm be given priority in an overall agricultural land use policy. The statement says only farm families or cooperatives, not commercial corporations, should be allowed to operate farm enterprises.

Generally, the policy notes a growing concern about the encroachment of urban development on agricultural land, but it is aimed specifically at land speculators who, the statement says, cut large swaths out of farm land.

Used for non-farm uses.

"Thousand of acres of excellent farm land in Canada lie destined for such uses, much of it under the grip of profiteering land speculators who usually control, by ownership or options, ribbons of farm land around practically every urban area in Canada," the statement says.

The union suggested polling as end to speculation by restricting the sale of farm land needed for development to Crown agencies only.

Other sections of the statement call for:

—A freeze on development on farm land, especially around large urban centres;

—A total ban on development of farm land which is particularly suitable for growing specialized crops such as fruit;

—A more rational policy for the construction of highways, power lines and other public facilities which the statement says, cut large swaths out of farm land.

Lewis Wants Government To Take Over Big Oil Firm

EDMONTON (CP) — One of the large multi-national oil companies operating in Canada may be taken over by the federal government if the New Democratic Party has its way.

NDP leader David Lewis said Friday at least one of the major oil companies should be nationalized to form the basis of the national petroleum corporation that the government plans to set up early next year.

He did not make clear how hard his party will press the issue in the Commons where it has functioned for nearly a year as the effective balance of power behind the minority Liberal government.

But he said NDP will emphasize nationalization heavily when the next session of Parliament begins in late January or early in February.

"I don't think a national petroleum corporation will be of as much value as it should be unless one or perhaps more of the integrated major multi-nationals is taken over."

He said he does not know which of the companies would be easiest to nationalize. Stocks of holdings, investments, facilities, plants, licences and other factors would be needed first.

Prime Minister Trudeau announced in a major policy speech Thursday that legislation will be introduced next year to form a national petroleum corporation.

Mr. Lewis said details of the government's plans were shadowy and the NDP wants to see the legislation to determine "the holes that ought to be filled."

The NDP leader and about 15 of his 30 commons colleagues from industry, labor and environmental organizations.

The group also held private meetings with officials of Great Canadian Oil Sands Ltd." and Syncrude Canada Ltd., two companies with interests in the Athabasca oil sands about 300 miles north of here.

NDP officials said they were told by Syncrude President F. E. Spragins that the company will make "no profits" from the $300-million oil sands project it is currently planning.

Instead, Syncrude will divide the oil it produces among the five parties that control it. The owners will reimburse the company for its expenses.

"The big question is what happens to the profits," said Ed Broadbent, member of Parliament for Oshawa-Whitby.

The Alberta government has said 50 per cent of the profits will go to the province's interest in the venture.

"Maybe they will, but it's not clear from what we were told."

Besides the Alberta government, the partners in Syncrude include Gulf Oil Canada Ltd., Imperial Oil Ltd., Atlantic Richfield Canada Ltd. and Canada-Cities Service Ltd.

Earlier, party members heard a spokesman for the Canadian Association of Oilwell Drilling Contractors criticize the federal government's plan to continue the crude oil export tax and the national petroleum products price freeze. Both were scheduled to expire at the end of January.

J. D. Porter said the action damages the petroleum industry and could lead to less exploration, fewer jobs and an exodus of skilled, professional people from the country.

In another brief, the caucus was told by a spokesman for the Committee for an Independent Canada that oil and gas exports should be stopped.

Canada's known oil reserves will last only 18 years at current production rates and gas reserves will be gone within 14 years, said Dr. Jim Russell, former chairman of the committee's Edmonton branch.

Why It's Tough to Fool A Nikon F2

Ordinary meter systems are fine for ordinary lighting situations. But it takes the Nikon Photonic system to handle special lighting situations and give you the photograph you really wanted.

The F2 Photonic is a centre-weighted meter system that's far superior to averaging or spot metering systems. It measures the brightness of the entire scene but gets 60% of its exposure information from that 13% of the picture area (the centre). That's why it's so tough to fool the F2 Photonic system, even in back lighting situations. It's tough to fool a Nikon in other ways, too.

- The specially quilted titanium foil shutter curtain's unequalled for accuracy.
- The constant bright finder image is 100% accurate.
- The film takeup system winds the film in reverse to counteract its natural curl and keep it perfectly flat.
- Pick any of over 40 superb Nikkor lenses to handle any possible picture idea you have in mind.
- Interchangable motor drives let you shoot as many as five pictures a second.

Come in this week for a demonstration of the Nikon F2 — the photographic system that's as close to foolproof as possible.

NDP Held No Longer Party of Left

Ontario Waffle Votes to Become Separate Political Party

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Waffle movement, a radical splinter group expelled from the Ontario New Democratic Party, voted during the weekend to become a full-fledged political party in about a year.

The 135 delegates, by a vote of 105-14 with seven abstaining, Saturday reversed a decision made 18 months ago that they would pursue their goal of an independent socialist Canada only through organizing and educational programs.

At its weekend convention, the Waffle group wrote off the New Democrats as no longer a force of the left and decided to meet them head-on at the polls.

Mel Watkins, a University of Toronto economics professor and one of the convention's founders, said that as a political force, the Waffle starts small with 700 members in 16 local groups in Ontario.

Mr. Watkins said the provincial NDP was "even more bureaucratic and undemocratic" than when the Waffle left it for refusing to bow to party discipline.

Co-founder James Laxer criticized the federal NDP for "their latest gyration" in what he called the Liberal coalition in Ottawa—the NDP has expressed support for Liberal energy policy in a move that is expected to save the federal government in a Progressive Conservative non-confidence vote in the House of Commons today.

"The NDP has become an encumbrance around the necks of the workers . . . and it is time to create a new socialist party," he said.

Mr. Laxer presented a resolution calling for government takeover of all natural gas, coal, oil and uranium companies involved in production, refining, distribution and marketing. It won unanimous approval.

The resolution said the government takeover would involve no compensation to the companies.

But first he criticized federal government policy proposals for a national petroleum company to explore and develop Arctic supplies and the Athabasca oil sands in Alberta.

"Once we have paid the tab for finding the petroleum and making it extractable," multinational companies will make huge profits, he said.

The resolution also called for an end to exports of oil and gas to the United States. Failure to do so, Mr. Laxer said, would "cut in half" the life of Canadian conventional reserves and advance the day of reliance on the more costly oil sands reserves.

He urged the development of alternative fuels and other energy sources but demanded that environmental and social costs and native claims be considered in that development.

The convention also endorsed resolutions calling for:

—Establishment of a bi-monthly magazine, called North Country, to focus on problems of working people and social and cultural conditions in Ontario.

— A shorter work week a increase in the provincial minimum wage to $4 an hour from $2.

—24-hour day-care centres for shift workers.

—Organization of women workers and support for equal pay for equal work.

Arabs to Cut Oil Again

Embargo Stays Until Pullback

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Arab oil ministers say they won't lift their embargo against the United States "until Israel agrees to withdraw from all occupied territories and sets a timetable for the pullout.

The pledge to continue the boycott was issued during the weekend in Kuwait after a meeting of the 10 members of the Organization of Arab Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Resumption of Arab oil shipments to the U.S. will come only after Israel establishes "a fixed timetable" for withdrawal from all Arab lands captured since the 1967 war, including the Arab sector of Jerusalem, the ministers said Sunday.

The Israelis have vowed never to give up East Jerusalem, which they captured in the 1967 war and which contains some of the holiest shrines of the Moslem, Christian and Jewish religions. The return of East Jerusalem is a particular goal of King Faisal of Saudi Arabia, normally the chief supplier of Arab oil to the United States.

A November meeting stipulated that the embargo will not be lifted until Israel actually begins withdrawing from the occupied lands. But Saudi Arabia's oil minister, Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, appeared to retreat from this in a television appearance in Washington.

He said the Arabs will remove the embargo "when Israel agrees to withdraw and the United States guarantees the withdrawal."

In an effort to force a favorable Middle East peace settlement, the Arabs initially cut total oil production by 25 per cent, promised to reduce production by five per cent each month and stopped all oil shipments to the United States and the Netherlands because of their pro-Israeli policies.

The ministers meeting in Kuwait also announced that crude oil production in January will be reduced by five per cent of the December production.

A similar five-per-cent production cut was ordered for December, but Japan and all Common Market countries except the Netherlands were exempted because of pro-Arab statements they issued. But the Sunday announcement in Kuwait said the January cut will apply to them.

Meanwhile, in Washington, Israeli Defence Minister Moshe Dayan said in a television interview that despite the Arab oil squeeze, the U.S. government has put no pressure on him for concessions at the peace conference expected to begin Dec. 18 in Geneva.

U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger, a meeting of NATO foreign ministers in Brussels,is to visit the Middle East, including Saudi Arabia, later in the week in an attempt to convince the Arabs that Washington is working evenhandedly to bring peace to the region.

Japan's deputy premier Takeo Miki, on Sunday to visit seven Arab countries in an attempt to convince them that the Tokyo government will reverse its ita recent pro-Arab stand.

Nixon Leaves It to Congress Whether He Owes $300,000

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon, after an unprecedented disclosure of his finances, awaits the verdict of a congressional committee on whether he owes up to $300,000 in federal income taxes and interest.

Bearing his federal tax returns for his first four years in the White House—and more than 50 other documents—Nixon acknowledged that accountants and lawyers disagree on the propriety of his 1969-1972 federal tax payments. They totalled less than $80,000, on an income of more than $1 million.

Nixon's disclosures Saturday were the first in a promised series he hopes will clear him of any taint of wrongdoing in the Watergate scandal and other controversial areas. His first instalment went further than any president before him in revealing intimate details of personal finances.

Nixon said he has enlisted the Senate-House of representatives committee on internal revenue taxation to decide two tax questions that would cost him heavily if it rules against him:

—Did he act legally in claiming a more than $500,000 in deductions for donation of his vice-presidential papers to National Archivers? Some argue he acted too late to take advantage of a tax law Congress voided in mid-1969.

—Did he make a taxable capital gain of $117,000 on the 1970 sale of part of his San Clemente, Calif., estate? Nixon's tax accountant claimed at the time he built it, he had a rational ,auditing firm concluded recently that he made a taxable profit.

Nixon's release of financial statements and documents also disclosed he has paid no state income taxes in California, or anywhere else, since becoming president, although he claimed San Clemente as his principal residence in order to avoid payment of federal taxes on the profit from his 1969 sale of a New York City apartment.

White House officials acknowledged Nixon would be liable for sizable payments to California should state officials decide he should have filed tax returns there.

William Bennett, a Democratic member of the state's Franchise Tax Board says he'll challenge Nixon's state tax status.

The papers released by Nixon showed that his net worth increased to $988,000 last May 31 from $307,000 on Jan. 1, 1969.

Winter's First Bite Is Felt

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Travelers in Western Canada began to move again Sunday after being halted by a 24-hour storm of rain, snow and high winds in southern Manitoba.

But elsewhere, particularly in the East, residents were feeling the full severe bite of winter as snow, freezing rain and ice pellets struck parts of Ontario, Quebec and the Maritimes.

Only Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island, Alberta and Saskatchewan enjoyed a combination of sunshine and mild temperatures.

In Ontario, the ministry of transportation and communications, reported snow falling through most of the province, varying from wet in the South to light in the North and flurries in the northwest.

Freezing rain in the Ottawa Valley made highways slushy and slippery there.

Around Hamilton a heavy fog reduced visibility to poor at times. Near Kingston trees had fallen across hydro wires and road conditions described by police as treacherous.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Cold air is moving eastward and will cover the entire province by Tuesday morning. Temperatures in the extreme northwest are as low as -30 this morning. Occasional snow likely in all parts of the province except western James Bay region. Tuesday will be generally sunny and cold with snow flurries in the lee of the lakes.

At first glance it might seem Santa was toying with the idea of a new type of transport when he met this friendly burro at the Ontario Humane Society's Quinte shelter near Belleville Sunday. But, there's no chance he's trading in his reliable reindeer. For one thing, mules can't fly. And the jolly gent's visit was only to highlight the society's annual open house, coinciding this year with the Christmas season.

Financier Being Held In Jail

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — John C. Doyle, a Montreal financier with interests in Canada and Panama, is being held in custody here to await a decision Tuesday on a bail application made Saturday after he was charged with fraud and breaches of trust.

Oliver J. Vardy, a former Newfoundland deputy minister of economic development, was also charged but his whereabouts were unknown. He has been out of Canada for some time.

Jack L. Goodson, a Montreal businessman, was the third person charged Saturday as a result of a national investigation by the RCMP. Goodson was ordered held in custody until today when Magistrate Hugh O'Neil is to give a decision on his application for bail.

Doyle, 58, was charged with defrauding Canadian Javelin Ltd. of $1,000 conviion shares valued at $340,000 by having the company pay the shares to Eastern Services Ltd. "for the benefit of Oliver L. Vardy."

Doyle, chairman of the board of Canadian Javelin, also was charged with defrauding Javelin Forest Products Ltd. of $7,000 in commissions collected by Golden Eagle Canada Ltd., at one cent a gallon on petroleum products sold to the forest company.

He was further charged with committing breaches of trust in connection with the sale of two buildings owned by the Newfoundland government on a former United States air base near Stephenville, Nfld., to a company with the sale of petroleum products to Javelin Forest Industries.

Both breach-of-trust charges involved government sums committed in connection with the duties of Mr. Vardy's office.

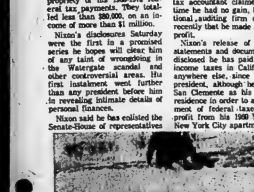
Vardy was charged with defrauding the Newfoundland government of $135,000 and $63,700.

Vardy also was charged with accepting the two amounts as well as unlawfully accepting the sole proprietorship of Hotel Printing Ltd., which was doing business with the government while he was a government official.

Council Of Ireland Opposed

BELFAST (AP) — Hardline Protestants in Northern Ireland vowed today to wreck an attempt to bring the two Irelands closer together.

A new Council of Ireland would bring the governments of Protestant Northern Ireland and the Roman Catholic-dominated Irish republic together for the first time to work toward a political partnership.



The militant Protestants accused Brian Faulkner, moderate leader of Northern Ireland's Protestant Unionist party, of jeopardizing Ulster's ties to Britain by joining in the agreement. It was reached Sunday night after four days of negotiations at a country mansion west of London.

John Taylor, a member of Faulkner's party, said the council is the first step toward the reunification of Ireland. The two leaders of the hardliners, Rev. Ian Paisley and William Craig, said they will hold nightly meetings to rally opposition to the agreement.

A group of Unionists said they will try to oust Faulkner from the leadership of the party.

Meanwhile, the men from London, Dublin and Belfast who forged the agreement expressed hope that it will help end the communal warfare in Northern Ireland in which at least 917 have died since 1969.

Prime Minister Edward Heath of Britain said the way now is clear for the British government to return Northern Ireland to home rule.

First Snowfall - ing

Where there's snow, there's youngsters . . . with toboggans. During this weekend's first major fall of the winter, Trenton youngsters dusted off their toboggans and made for the front lawn of St. George's Church, near Centennial Park. These youngsters fell off more than they stayed attached. However, all wasn't grim. Moose, the dog, dragged the wooden toboggan back up the slope each time.

The Tree Is Key To a Safe Yule

It always happens in December.

While people are humming Christmas carols to themselves and going about their festive chores, they almost always seem to forget the basic principles of fire safety.

Christmas is still three weeks away, but, as Belleville's Fire Chief, Les Calhoun points out, it is close enough that everyone should start to remind themselves of the special little things they should do to ensure that they have a fire free holiday.

"A happy Christmas can change in a few moments into a family tragedy," warns Chief Calhoun. "Christmas trees, decorations and gift wrappings all add up to a greater home fire danger. This is the time of year that people should take care to make sure their holiday won't be marred by a fire."

"Carelessness is what causes fires and it's carelessness in handling Christmas trees that presents the biggest problem," he continued. "If people use a little common sense and follow a few simple tips, then they should be able to enjoy their holidays without having to worry about a house fire."

Chief Calhoun recommends anyone who is contemplating buying a natural tree not to make their purchase until just before they are ready to set it up.

"If your plans call for a natural tree, it should be a 'bought fresh and green,' he said. "Keep it outdoors or in an unheated garage before you are ready to bring it into the house to be decorated. Then, when you go to set it up, make sure that it is immersed in water.

"Use of a fire retardant chemical spray is not a substitute for fast immersion. When you set your tree up you should recut the trunk diagonally and stand it in water. You should also make certain that you maintain a tree's water supply throughout the holidays. That way it will retain its moisture and freshness throughout Christmas.

The place where you set your Christmas tree is almost as important as making sure it is immersed in water, Chief Calhoun said. A Christmas tree should always be kept away from heat sources such as fireplaces, television sets and radiators.

The homeowner should also make certain that his tree does not block any exits from his home. Keep it away from doorways, staircases and windows.

While the firefighters recognize the fact that all trees must be decorated, they recommend that such house hold take special precautions in selecting their ornaments.

Strings of electric lights should be checked carefully for worn insulation, broken plugs or loose bulb sockets and CSA approved lights, sets and non-flammable decorations should be used.

The use of an artificial tree doesn't offset the potential fire dangers of Christmas. Metallic trees are conductors of electricity and should not be decorated with strings of lights. Instead, they should be illuminated with floodlights. Also householders should keep a wary eye open when buying plastic trees. Some plastic trees, made from styrene materials, are flammable, unlike those made from polyvinylchloride.

Another important point to remember is to declare the Christmas tree a no-smoking area. It doesn't take much to start a fire and a tree decked out with all the trimmings and surrounded by gifts provides a highly combustible kindling for a fire.

"Fire prevention is a year-round concern," said Chief Calhoun. "But I should take on a special meaning at Christmas time. If everyone exercises a a certain amount of care then they and their fire department will be sure of having a happy and safe holiday season.

Children Bearing Gifts

Young Bellevillians hand toys to Santa Claus in exchange for free cartoon show at Quinte Mall cinema Saturday. Anout 300 youngsters made donations which were turned over to city firefighters annual gift project for less-privileged children.

Postal Code Advice Available

Canada's spreading blanket of postal codes is one way of easing Christmas mail sorting pressure at postal authorities — and getting the mails out faster.

At least, more Quinte area residents seem to see the codes as a benefit.

As the Christmas rush neared, Belleville post office assigned two girls the task of answering inquiries on codes now in service.

Two telephone lines have been installed at the post office and Shirley Downey and Carol Whalen say they have answered as many as 100 calls in a day so far.

Some inquiries seek as many as 10 different codes.

But that's only part of it.

People with long Christmas card lists are being encouraged to write the service. The girls add the pertinent codes after each address and mail the lists back.

Highest number of names submitted by a single individual to date has totalled 223.

Numbers to call: 962-6001; 962-4422.

A two-car collision at the intersection of Highway 2 and Loyalist-Wallbridge Rd. sent three people to Belleville General Hospital Sunday to be treated and later released in satisfactory condition.

Mae Louise Ferguson, 45, of Coe Hill was treated for injuries to the chest, abdomen and neck. She was released from hospital as was her husband, Douglas Ferguson, who sustained injuries in his right shoulder and left knee.

George Phelps, of Belleville, one of five passengers in the Ferguson vehicle, was treated and released in satisfactory condition.

The Ferguson vehicle was proceeding westbound on Highway 2 when it came into collision with a Department of National Defence vehicle driven by Robert Poulin, 19, of Kingston. The Poulin car was travelling south on Loyalist-Wallbridge Rd. It was unable to stop at the intersection due to slippery road conditions said police, and slid into the path of the Ferguson vehicle. Mr. Poulin, and his passengers were uninjured.

Police estimated damage to the Poulin vehicle at $1,000, to the Ferguson car at $400.

Stalled Car Was Stolen

A Verdun, Quebec man was charged with possession of a stolen vehicle after Belleville provincial police came to the assistance of a car stopped with mechanical trouble on Highway 401 Saturday.

A routine check of the registration revealed the car, parked halfway off the highway's travelled portion, was stolen in Montreal at 8 a.m. Saturday morning. Police discovered the car Saturday at noon, just west of Sidney St.

Charged with possession of the vehicle is Michael Koreny, 18, of Verdun. Two passengers in the vehicle, 13 and 14-year-old girls, have been returned to their parents in Quebec.

12-year-old Hit by Car

A 12-year-old Belleville girl was rushed to Belleville General Hospital during the weekend after she was struck by a car on the Market Square.

Police report that Laurie Brohm, 12, of 203 Charles Street, was hit by a car driven by Colleen M. Pertaky, of 42 Charlotte Street, when she ran out from behind some parked cars around 10:47 p.m. Friday.

Police report that the young girl was treated for minor bruises and was released.

Collision In Slush

PLAINFIELD — A two-car collision on Highway 37 near Plainfield on Friday caused over $1,500 damage to the vehicles. The drivers escaped injury.

The vehicle Shirley Sedore, 35, of Actinolite was driving south came into collision with car driven north by Harold Ali, 35, of Ottawa.

Police estimate damage to the Sedore vehicle at $600, to the Ali vehicle at $1,000.

Provincial police said both drivers lost control of their vehicles due to the heavy slush and snow condition of the roadway.

Two Charges Follow Chase

Belleville provincial police have charged a 22-year-old Montreal man with excessive speed and possession of marijuana after a high-speed chase on Highway 401 east of here Saturday.

Police took up the chase at Brockville when Gravel and were able to stop the fleeing car 15 miles west of Kingston. Over the 21.8 mile course of the pursuit, a top speed of 110 miles per hour in a 70 m.p.h. zone was reached.

Norman Gravel, 22, of Montreal, has been charged on the two counts.

Mohawks' New Chief Brant, Upsets Hill

— A young reserve councillor Saturday night donned the feathered headdress symbolic of election victory as chief of the Quinte Mohawks for the next two years.

William J. Brant, 33, after one term on council, upset the bid of Earl Hill — a veteran of reserve government — for a fourth successive term as chief.

In an election that stimulated the heaviest polling in years — almost 80 per cent of the eligible vote — Councillor Brant defeated Chief Hill 204-148.

The chief-elect later admitted surprise at the strength of support for his candidacy.

At the campaign's start two weeks ago "I wasn't as confident as my supporters," said Councillor Brant, a reserve dairy farmer and industrial milk shipper.

Carl D. Brant, eight years on council, topped the polls in the election count that created three new councillors.

Mr. Brant, president of the Association of Iroquois and Allied Indians, drew 373 votes.

The only other incumbent, Willard Hill, lost his seat with 1118 votes.

The other three winners (votes in brackets) were:

Charles Bud Maracle (367), former councillor; Elwood Brant (167), in his second election bid Carl Maracle (156), active in recreation and senior citizens' projects.

It took almost three hours from poll closing to announce the results to Mohawk voters at the reserve council house. 305 votes had been cast from an eligible 475 — up more than 50 votes over the 1971 election.

After, chief-elect Brant said among his major concerns is to raise economic standards through support of reserve businessmen. In turn better economic conditions would develop more involvement in reserve affairs.

Other areas of attention he stressed were increased participation between Council and the people — and beyond the reserve.

"I'd like to see increased relations established — not only on the reserve but in surrounding communities. I like co-operation. The feel we are neighbors," said the new chief, who formally takes office in the New Year.

Chief Hill cautioned the new council to be prepared for future changes in the federal government involving native people.

"The worst, is yet to come," he said.

Observing Tyendinaga tradition, Chief Hill placed the headdress symbolic of leadership, on his successor.

Other council candidates and their votes were Wesley Bardy, 136; John R. Brant, 117; Andrew Maracle, 78.

The New Chief

In traditional ceremony, Tyendinaga Mohawk Chief Earl Hill places feathered headdress on his successor Councillor William Brant at end of voting in reserve election Saturday night. Chief Hill was unsuccessful in bid for fourth successive term as head of reserve's local government.

Plan for Bayfront To Be Prepared

A firm of planning consultants will be hired to prepare a bayfront conceptual plan for the area under the jurisdiction of the Moira River Conservation Authority.

The recommendation to hire consultants for the bayfront planning was placed before the authority by Belleville Alderman Meeks, who said the city was anxious that bayfront plans for recreational needs be proceeded with.

Although the proposed planning would include Sidney, Thurlow and Tyendinaga bayfront property under the jurisdiction of the Moira Authority, detailed plans for Belleville only will be asked.

Sixty-five per cent of the cost of the study would be paid by the province while the city of Belleville will pay 99 per cent of the authority's share of the costs.

With this year's enlargement of the Moira Authority to include all bayfront property between the Trent Authority and that of the Salmon River, a higher percentage of four municipalities is now within the authority; Belleville jumps from 38 to 100 per cent; Thurlow from 70 to 100 per cent; Sidney from 32 to 61 per cent and Tyendinaga from 27 to 40 per cent.

Near Miss On 401

A Toronto man, his wife and their 4-year-old twins escaped serious injury in a two car collision on Highway 401 4 mile east of Belleville Sunday.

Belleville detachment investigating officer Errol Johnston said yesterday, "The whole four of them were well stropped in, that's what saved them."

David Zee, 29, of Toronto, was taken to Belleville General Hospital and treated for a lacerated scalp. He was released. His wife, Cecilia, and the twins, escaped injury.

The Zee vehicle was eastbound on Highway 401 when it went out of control, flipped into the median and righted itself in the westbound lanes.

A car, driven by William McCully, 22, of Scarborough, hit the Zee vehicle.

Mr. McCully was unhjured. Police estimate damage to the Zee vehicle at $1,000, to the other vehicle at $400. The Zees returned to Toronto by train.

The Belleville Flying Club had its wings parade and Christmas party this weekend. The youngest among the five club members receiving their pilot's licences was 18-year-old David Billo. And at the other end of the spectrum was the oldest pilot present at the function at Sun Valley. He was 61-year-old Harry Oakwood who came to the event from the Peterborough Pilots Association.

Graduate Flyers Receive Awards

A glimpse into the future of glider flying and student pilot training was given to members of the Belleville Flying Club during their wings parade and Christmas party Saturday night.

Guest speaker, Kris Thorsteinson, manager of the Cessna Pilot Centre Department, told the group of about 100 members and guests at the Sun Valley Motor Inn of the psychological ways used to train student pilots.

Relying on the studies of Professor Skinner, Mr. Thorsteinson said that human behavior patterns figure prominently in training.

"We have to ask ourselves what makes people learn. We consulted with great authorities minds who knew what education was," he said.

"From this we came up with four principles used by Dr. Skinner in learning behavior: stimulus, response, reward and association.

"We asked how our pilots could get good judgment. They get this from experience. And how do they get experience? From bad judgment," said Mr. Thorsteinson.

"For stimulus the student pilot must want to learn something. For response he must be taught how to go about it. The reward comes in when the learner feels good about the new knowledge he has found.

And the association comes into play when the learner is exposed to new knowledge and can translate this into learning or acting out what he has learned."

"Learning depends on safety. A student pilot who has learned to pass an exam can learn all knowledge required of him to be a safe, confident pilot capable of total recall (of this new-found knowledge) at the time required," said Mr. Thorsteinson.

Mr. Thorsteinson, learning the topic of student training and turning to aviation in general said the biggest breakthrough in the aviation industry was the lessening of the weight per horse-power ration of the power plant (engines).

Anything that reduces the weight of an aircraft helps to develop a faster aircraft," said Mr. Thorsteinson.

Other recent developments that have resulted in changes in the aviation industry have been the rotary or wanked engine, new bonding materials and the use of computers.

Mr. Thorsteinson made note of a computer that could be designed so that a pilot leaving say Belleville, punches a card telling where he is and his destination.

Instantaneously the computer tells the pilot how many miles he will take to go to for his destination, how long it will take him, and what heading and drift direction to make.

After Mr. Thorsteinson's talk, the presentation of award and trophies was made.

Mayor Robin Jeffrey presented the Mayor's Trophy for the highest mark achieved on a written exam at the Belleville Flying Club to Dave Billo.

The Corby's Distilleries Trophy was presented to the most congenial member of the club. Bill Boeker received this award from Dick Simon.

The Belleville Airport Trophy is the all-around contributors at the airport was presented by Flying Club president Jim Marker to Don Wright.

Doctor J.N. Hartt presented the Dr. J.N. Hartt Trophy to the club member who has contributed the most to the flying club. Wendy Whelan received the award although she couldn't accept it personally.

A draw among club members for a holiday in Freeport was won by Glenn Lidstone, who also received his soloing certificate that night.

LIP Grants Show Bias, Hastings MP Claims

Jack Ellis, MP Hastings, has reiterated criticism that politics favors distribution of Local Initiative Programs funds.

Mr. Ellis first made the charge earlier this year after LIP grants had been allocated for last winter's programs.

The "bias still exists" in distribution of 1973-74 funding, says Mr. Ellis following an analysis of allocations by Conservative researchers.

The analysis report says that, on the average, ridings held by Conservatives, received the smallest allocation of any of the four parties outside Alberta — which elected all Conservatives.

The tendency, says the report, shows the highest allocations usually went to Liberals, the lowest to Conservatives.

All provinces were affected by cutbacks in LIP grants this year — and three of the four ridings involving Quinte-area electoral districts were sharply hit, the analysis shows.

The single exception seems to be Prince Edward-Hastings, represented by Conservative George Hees.

Mr. Hees constituency — including Prince Edward County, Trenton, Quinte Township and Northumberland — was allocated $70.00, compared to $71,415 last year.

Mr. Ellis' Hastings riding received $58,000 compared to $210,663 in 1972-73.

The sprawling Frontenac-Lennox and Addington riding, held by Conservative Douglas Alkenbrack got $78,000 — down from $214,580.

Victoria—Haliburton which includes the six northernmost townships of Hastings County, represented by Conservative William Scott, received $104,000 compared to $240,014.

Nationally, the biggest LIP allocation — $1,322,000 — went to the Liberal riding of Montreal St. Jacques and the lowest — $27,000 — to Hamilton—Wentworth represented by a Conservative.

On the other hand, notes the report, six of the provinces had a Conservative riding receive the largest amount, while the Liberals and New Democratic Party each had two of the biggest provincial allocations.

Books and Three Rs

Genius has been defined as "an infinite capacity for taking pains." Similarly, when it comes to achieving command of a language — English or otherwise — a thorough grounding in the basics, reinforced by plain old familiarity, helps enormously.

An interest in books is of great value in improving skill in spelling and sentence structure, while the greatness of the language itself shines through the centuries, as set down by philosophers and writers from Plato and Shakespeare to our own day and novelists such as Malcolm Lowry and recent Nobel prizewinner Patrick White from Australia.

Yet in our schools today we have the growing complaint that the three Rs are being neglected. It is reflected in sloppy and ungrammatical speech and in an inability to spell — a weakness that persists even through the teen years and later, as young people enter the work force and there come complaints from businessmen that the new secretary, for instance, cannot spell, and may even expect her boss to spell for her. We had a letter along these lines some time ago, so it is not simply fantasy.

The latest on the three Rs controversy is from Marmora where parents of children attending a public school there are reported to have taken a list of grievances to the Hastings board of education dealing in the main, it seems, with the quality of education. In addition to concern about the basics, mention is made of disciplinary problems, a situation also affecting youngsters in Deseronto, as witness a report of recent days.

Such matters do constitute something of a problem and about all that can be done is to try and evolve means of upgrading student performance and conduct. Some youngsters have more difficulty than others — it was ever thus — but as we have said much can be done by the young people themselves through applying themselves to their books and improving their manners.

Certainly Marmora and the area around about need not feel unusual in this respect — and where books are concerned it is not for want of interest. A picture in the community's newspaper recently showed half-a-dozen bright looking youngsters among a pile of books which they helped move into the public library facilities being established in the new town hall at Deloro.

Greenpeace Sequel

Remember David McTaggart? He is the Vancouver salt who took the Greenpeace III to the South Pacific and a confrontation with French naval elements in waters off an atoll where nuclear tests were being conducted.

Finally, the Greenpeace was boarded and Mr. McTaggart received a rather nasty beating from the French sailors, while other members of the crew, including some young women, were also roughed up.

McTaggart spent some time in hospital in Tahiti and subsequently there was pressure on Ottawa to protest to the French and demand compensation.

Then, just a few days ago came word that Ottawa had awarded McTaggart $12,000, not, it has been emphasized, as compensation for any injuries or damage sustained in sailing into prohibited waters, but to enable him to recover Greenpeace from Tahiti.

It is an odd arrangement, from any standpoint. The Greenpeace protests, it will be remembered, were financed by a public foundation, and its members for the most part are of left-wing political affiliation. It may be asked why the foundation which financed this most recent and previous protest voyages could not have come up with funds for recovering the vessel seized by the French?

Once again, it is the Canadian taxpayer whose contributions are being used — in effect being channelled into bailing out a project with which not everyone necessarily agrees, even though there can be no quarrel with the basic premise that nuclear testing should be halted.

Even Family Pet Victim of 'Hate' Campaign

Ex-Liberal Tom Cossitt Gets Under Government's Skin

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA—Very likely no one in Opposition, including the Old Warrior, former Conservative Leader John Diefenbaker, can get under the Government's sensitive minority skin as Thomas Charles Cossitt. For years and years and years the acknowledged Liberal power broker in Eastern Ontario's riding of Leeds, and now its Tory MP.

Of all the Opposition questions asked of the Government in the Commons, none seem to irritate and often enrage the Liberals to the point of visible fury as Tom Cossitt's.

He knows what questions to ask that most can wound, and how best to ask them, because, he has explained, as a former leading Liberal,"I know how their dirty tricks department operates and the slick ways they pull their fast ones on the taxpayers."

The measure of the damage his questions can inflict on the Government has been its consistent delay — just short of the point of refusal — in answering them.

They detest him — and this comes out loud and clear in their bristling and their blushing — and they fear him because he not only gets one of them, but one of their insiders, until 23 months ago.

It was then, in early January 1972, that he, as president of the Leeds Liberal Association, led 11 of the 28 members of the riding executive out of the party — in the heart of the old United Empire Loyalist country!

Ernie Millar, former warden of the United Counties of Leeds and Grenville, and Liberal kingpin for 40 years, was quoted as saying:

"In a lot of cases, Tom here had to do the work of the MP. Somebody would come to me wanting something done in Ottawa, and I would have to say 'see Tom.'

"But it's got so now that none of us can help because Ottawa doesn't answer our correspondence."

Tom Cossitt was described by the Toronto GLOBE AND MAIL as "the most influential and respected Liberal in the riding."

The wealthy 56-year-old insurance broker earned political science degree at the University of Toronto, studied European political history in the Netherlands, broke into politics as a Liberal poll captain 29 years ago in a Toronto by-election.

He managed seven federal Liberal campaigns — in Leeds, as vice-president of the Ontario Liberal Party, served seven years as president of the Eastern Ontario Liberal Association, was mentioned as a possible successor to former Ontario provincial Liberal Leader Andrew Thompson, and until last night, nearly two years ago, when he left the "Great Grit" fold, had been on the Leeds Liberal executive since 1947.

Explaining why he had left out of the Liberal executive he said: "I don't want to sound like something prehistoric, but my great-grandfather settled here and we've been Liberals ever since."

To which Ernie Miller added: "We're not deserting the Liberal Party, it's deserting us."

Came then "pressure" from Ottawa.. anonymous calls from Liberals in the capital and in the riding, some of them, Tom Cossitt claimed at the time, "extremely nasty."

One call came in to alert him that he would soon be burying the family's pet cat. And a few hours later, one of the Cossitt cats was found with a knife buried in its back.

It hurt the Liberals to lose such a strong and durable local leader. It hurt even worse when he won the Tory nomination and ended in the House of Commons it hurts worst of all when he asks those questions in the Commons.

Like, how much did Defence Minister Richardson's round-the-world junket cost and who were the free-riders?

And what are the details of that $3 million grant State Secretary Faulkner, after being "leaned on" by the Prime Minister, gave Mr. Trudeau's old Montreal buddy, Jacques Hebert, to send those 240 students abroad?

Or what is the explanation of having on the federal payroll a person "who allegedly faced a dozen charges of FLQ terrorism?"

How much public money has been spent on the Prime Minister's retreat at Harrington Lake in the Gatineau Hills and at the official Capital residence into which a self-contained apartment was built?

What happened in the Transport Investigation and "possible shut-down" of a government Local Initiatives Program on which $500,000 was spent?

And then there are those embarrassing Commons questions Tom Cossitt is pursuing about what he has called "the huge patronage pork barrel" for lawyers loyal to the Liberal Party..."

As a former Liberal "insider," as he was known in all the Conservative and Eastern Ontario power circle, who in all likelihood had an important say in dispensing some of the legal "pork," he's insisting on "full and competent disclosure."

Sunday Opening Question Remains a Moot Point

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Reporter
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — We now have our government's conclusions on store closing and Sunday sale.

The finite answer: let's please keep it out of our hair at least until after another election.

The government's answers were given in a two-page,"

And the answers: a number of proposals but no real conclusions.

Well, perhaps a bit wrong on this.

The store hour question breaks down into two parts.

One is whether retail stores should be permitted to open on Sundays.

The second is whether stores should have restricted closing hours during the week.

And the paper would appear to give the answer on the first.

It puts forward a volume of evidence which could warrant the province ordering there be no opening of major store chains on Sunday.

From the Lord's Day Act to opinion surveys it makes a pretty solid case that major business on Sunday should be outlawed.

And I think we may reasonably expect this very soon.

On store closing, however, the ball game is different.

There are various proposals in the green paper, but what they essentially boil down to is let the municipalities settle it.

Policy secretary George Kerr is going to order public hearings throughout the province and there will be "soundings" of public opinion.

Out of these the government may eventually act and legislate. But there will be uniform store closing hours in all municipalities in the province.

But don't take any bets on its happening soon.

It will probably be two years before our next election.

The government will hardly want store closing as one of the questions facing it in this vote.

So let say it will probably be 2½ years before it really faces up to the question.

And in the meantime you will be able to buy your meat when you want it.

Chilean Refugees Issue

OTTAWA JOURNAL

There has been a fine humanitarian row in External Affairs Minister Sharp's assertions that the same considerations which applied to Canada's admission of refugees from Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Tibet and Uganda will prevail in considering the case of Chileans who want to leave their country — or have been forced out — after the overthrow of the Allende socialist government. Mr. Sharp's motives are exemplary.

But let no one be naive. There is an essential difference between the refugees from Chile and the others. Some of them are what the Canadian government in Chile called, with a candor not intended for public hearing, the riff-raff of the Latin American left. The earlier refugees were seeking freedom from the very system that the Chilean extreme leftists were trying to impose on their country.

The important difference should not be lost, whatever the Liberal theorists would say. Canada does not need or want the riff-raff of the left any more than the riff-raff of the right. Canada does not want persons who would immediately dedicate themselves to the overthrow of its social system, or who would find the old FLQ a congenial cause.

Canada should not be softheaded in the name of being humanitarian. Only those who pass a rigorous screening process should be admitted. The dedicated, violent Marxists should be allowed to go off to some Marxist paradise.

The Energy Crisis

Why Did MacDonald Cancel Middle East Visit?

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

In its handling of the current oil shortage, the Federal government seems to be displaying some mysterious death wish.

It's clear enough that the shortage exists here and now, despite Energy Minister David Macdonald's contention that the real crunch is coming about 1980 and Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed's view that it is really only a problem of distribution.

Semantics aside, Canadians know that their government is imposing rationing ("mandatory allocation") of certain supplies and other petroleum-based products at the wholesale level.

And they also know, whatever the politicians may say, that the Arab oil producers' cartel has substantially reduced the supply of crude oil needed by Eastern Canada's refineries.

In the circumstances, the least that Mr. Macdonald should do is to make an all-out effort to re-instate those supplies. The Arabs' military difficulties with Israel have nothing to do with Canada.

And, in fact, our energy minister had a long-standing arrangement to visit the Arab oil-producing countries' just about now — a fortuitous opportunity to put forward Canada's interests.

Instead, Mr. Macdonald has made the incredible decision to cancel the visit, feeling somehow that it wouldn't be fitting because of the current Arab-Israeli situation. (Can anyone remember a time when the Arab-Israeli situation was not fraught with tension?)

That's not all. The energy minister told a parliamentary committee recently that Canada has a duty to share its reduced supply of crude oil with Sweden.

Not, let it be noted, with the Netherlands, a country with which Canada had close ties during the Second World War and which now faces a total Arab embargo—but rather with a country that professed to be neutral from 1939 to 1945, and in more recent years has missed no opportunity to badger the United States and fawn over the Hanoi regime.

Apparently to explain his generosity with our curtailed supplies, the energy minister said, "Canada will have to share not only in the direct cutback from Arab sources but in the general world shortfall."

Sharing with Sweden could be a political ploy to offset complaints about our maintaining our established trade in oil with the United States.

If it is, it typifies Ottawa's thoroughly political response to the energy crisis as it has been developing over the months and years.

The government has preferred to occupy itself with questions of foreign control, price stability, constitutional rights and the like, rather than to come to grips with the glaring need to encourage exploration and exploitation of new mineral reserves, the provision of adequate distribution facilities, and the development of new sources of energy.

It hoped that everything would come out right in the end. It still does.

But only a miracle—or, at least a very mild winter—could bring success out of Mr. Macdonald's combination of bureaucratic measures and appeals for self-denial.

By CY FOX

BRUSSELS (CP) — The oil crisis has developed to the point where it gives the appearance of threatening the unity and the future of the European Common Market.

Despite official Dutch denials of any intention to use her veto as a means of obtaining help from Common Market partners to ease Holland's oil famine, there are published predictions that the Netherlands will soon threaten to disrupt passage of various Community programs until it gets oil assistance.

A move along those lines already appears to have happened at the latest council of Common Market ministers in Brussels, which discussed, among other things, the Community's future program for helping its under-developed regions.

From Holland itself, where gasoline rationing becomes effective in January, there are reports of the disgruntled Dutch bitterly complaining that their country is useful to the Common Market only when resources are needed to help the backward regions.

But when an oil famine threatens Holland with economic breakdown, such charity in their behalf is not forthcoming from their partners, the Dutch complain.

Yes, Holland has expressed gratification at the verbal support given by West Germany and others to its plea for special consideration under current circumstances.

And while France and Britain manage to escape further Arab cutbacks affecting Western Europe, they still have expressed here that ultimately a spirit of solidarity among Community members will assert itself.

This line of reasoning asserts that, whatever indications to the contrary, the economies of Common Market countries are geared to the idea of solidarity by reason of their day-to-day interdependence.

For instance, thousands of residents from northern European countries across the border go into Holland to work.

If the Dutch economy sags into a deep recession as a result of the petroleum famine, a large number of these Belgians would lose their jobs.

Moreover, Holland is an important market for the products of its Common Market neighbors.

Thus, a Dutch economic disaster would mean big economic losses to Holland's partners—something they would presumably go all-out to avoid.

The British are insisting that there is far more to be gained by quiet diplomacy at this point than by resounding declarations of Common Market unity which the Arabs can construe as hostile.

This quiet diplomacy involves continuing discussions among Market members as well as efforts that the European might be able to make to promote a Middle East settlement.

But the secret Market meetings about this issue are taking place in an atmosphere of icy current suspicion.

" Jesus Christ the same yesterday, and today, and for ever." — Hebrews 13:8

Jesus came for the whole world, and to impart His whole person, power, and authority to all believers. He did not come to leave a part of Himself for one dispensation, denomination or generation but for all everywhere. Nothing has changed. When we believe it is a new door and a new day will be waiting for us. Why don't we let this be the day?

MPP: Plan Belongs To The Community

By MARGARET RAYLOCK

Staff Reporter

PICTON — The official county plan developed for Prince Edward must belong to the community, not to the pewinos of Ontario, says James Taylor, MPP Prince Edward-Lennox.

At a public meeting to discuss the county's draft official plan Mr. Taylor stressed the importance of independent thought Friday night. He urged Prince Edward planning board and county planner, Rizauddin Ahmed, to resist possible outside pressures.

"I know how easy it is to knuckle under to pressures from afar," he remarked.

Mr. Taylor observed that it is "easy to sit on Bay Street and envision rose gardens for outlying communities."

Prince Edward County warden Russell Thompson related the importance of the proposed county plan to recent events in his township of Ameliasburgh.

The warden noted that township council proposed rebuilding of the Hammondville Place road. The scenic route was to be widened 86 feet and the property purchase to be made was "out of this world."

Warden Thompson then a rookie councillor, suggested that the road be improved for traffic instead of rebuilt. This suggestion was followed and strip development continued in the area.

Today township council is confronted with two petitions regarding the speed limit on the road.

Through lack of planning, warden Thompson predicts the road one day will carry a 30 mph limit.

An official county plan will prevent such revisions said the warden.

Bloomfield reeve Allan Anderson said that it is imperative to visualize the future and recognize it through planning.

Hillier deputy-reeve Allan Pettingill termed the plan "a start in the right direction" and stressed that it must be viewed as an over-all concept.

Hallowell reeve Keith MacDonald remarked that the plan calls for broad-minded outlooks among farmers and person owning waterfront property. If these people are to accept certain plan policies they must sometimes bypass personal profits in favor of the general area good.

Reeve MacDonald supported development along the highway between Picton and Bloomfield and Bloomfield and Wellington as "prime building land" is involved. He agreed that there should not be clusters of separate entrances dotting the road and suggested sub-roads to the north and south.

Picton reeve James Bird termed the draft plan "a very conservative approach to the whole situation". He said unless the community plans for itself the government is likely to impose its own plan for the area.

Reeve Bird felt that residents of the county should make written submissions concerning their feelings toward the draft plan.

South Marysburgh reeve Clifford Walker said that public discussion of the plan has revealed two divergent points of view. One group of residents wants to retain the county as it is without thought to future development. Another segment is eager to have land sold at good prices. He said that there is much idle farmland of good quality in Prince Edward and he is not concerned by the thought of using some of it for development.

North Marysburgh deputy-reeve Avis Head observed that planning is "always complex" and she is very confused by the draft plan.

She objected to creating a surplus of public parks in the county as the plan indicates that tourists do not spend a great deal of money here.

She felt that there was conflict at the meeting regarding the types of roads needed. Some persons argued for scenic routes; others supported roads suitable for heavy traffic.

"How we put this together to keep everyone happy is beyond me," she said.

Jack Sterning, of the Prince Edward Region Conservation Authority, urged a voice from "the silent majority."

He suggested that often "the most eloquent people are the splinter groups that seek something for themselves rather than the common good.

Santa Arrives in Picton

PICTON — Santa Claus came to town Saturday greeted by crowds of children and holiday shoppers.

The welcoming parade, sponsored by the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce, was one of the largest ever organized and took more than an hour to pass through the streets.

Four trophies were awarded by the Chamber to parade entries in various divisions. Winners were: Best marching unit, Prince Edward High Steppers, best commercial entry, Picton Home Hardward; best community effort, Prince Edward County Home for the Aged; best entry by an organization, Picton Kinettes.

Several entries received honorable mention, among them floats by Kente School, The Picton Bay Snow Riders and the Picton Elks. A mounted entry by the Lennox and Addington County riders also was mentioned.

Seven bands provided music for the parade headed by municipal officials including Picton mayor Harvey McFarland, county warden Russell Thompson and James Taylor, MPP Prince Edward-Lennox.

At the close of the parade participants returned to the County Centre at Picton fairgrounds for hot chocolate. Youngsters who had lined the streets to see Santa received an opportunity to visit with him at the Picton Home Hardward Store following his rousing welcome from the town.

Livestock Lost In Blaze

MARMORA—Fire early today causing heavy livestock loss to a local farmer.

Scene of the blaze was the farm of Ross Kitcher, a mile north of here at RR 1 Marmora.

Lost in the fire were 68 cattle, 12 pigs and chickens. Three pigs were rescued from the blaze.

Mr. Kitcher, who also is a trucker, was away working in Toronto when the blaze broke out before 3 a.m.

The alarm was given by area resident Joe Davidson who spotted a glow in the sky five miles away and drove hurriedly to the scene.

An estimate of loss was not available and Mrs. Kitcher was not sure if the barn was insured.

Artificial Products Popular

Factory Trees Affect Prices

TRENTON — Instead of $5 and up its $8 and down for Christmas trees this year.

An upsurge in popularity for the artificial tree has forced live tree dealers to be more competitive.

As factory-made trees begin looking more like the real thing and less like a shredded role of tin foil, more and more families are making the switch from real to foktup trees.

Among the half dozen outlets selling real Christmas trees in Trenton $2 is an average starting price. From there on, it's wnat kind, how big and how good you haggle-prices.

Walter Thompson, owner of Thompson's Wholesale says he sells more artificial trees every year, many to people who said they'd never have anything but the real thing.

He says synthetic blue spruce, the big number last year is replaced this year by green trees.

And don't worry about not being able to smell the pine in the aluminum and plastic substitute - - - synthetic smell comes in spreydomb form.

Live tree dealers aren't running scared. They are plentiful in the area. But their prices reflect awareness that artificial trees are here to stay.

Sellers pick up their trees in a variety of communities further north from established Christmas tree plantations. Wholesale price is about a dollar and change. By the time the tree gets to Toronto it can cost upwards of $15, says one tree dealer here.

Al Hopkins, Trenton's largest operator, hopes to sell 2,000 trees this season.

One of his weapons to fight the artificial tree is the real thing painted. Trees are sprayed with green paint which enhances color, slows the drying out process and holds needles on longer. Sprayed trees cost a little more.

Rather than painting tree, paid another salesman a little sugar added to a tree's water supply will keep it green and healthy longer.

For the purchaser who wants the real thing, the best time to get a tree is right now. Supplies are plentiful and trees are not bound to dry out in the remaining two weeks before Christmas.

COLES JEWELLERS
RONALD KEEL Jeweller
. . . when quality, value and service are important to you — we are here to serve you better!

AL REID

Dear Friends, Customers and Consumers

The Jewellery picture is a fascinating one, naturally of special interest to we who have made our careers in this field. As Jewellers, our prime concern is providing a source where you the public can obtain precious items such as Gems, Gold and Silver, that suitably commemorate a special event. It's a rewarding business, if operated properly, with the best interests of everyone in mind at all times.

An independent jewellery business such as Coles Jewellers Limited, must rely on the loyalty of its customers to operate successfully. In this highly competitive field. The means by which this is accomplished includes offering consistently high quality merchandise to our customers; providing honest value in every sale; and giving service and guarantees that back up all merchandise sold.

In both of our stores, you will find merchandise selected for quality, in several price ranges, in comparison, the stock carried by most discounters for their jewellery lines is, by necessity, of lower quality, because these items can be reduced to a more "attractive-looking" price.

This leads to another comparison, that of value. On the surface, the discounter's price may appear to be lower for the same item. The consumer must be careful to get the quality which he believes he is buying. We take the time, at Coles, to explain to you the exact value of each item, and the difference between it and those in a different price range. When you make a purchase, you can be sure of good value for your money.

Aside from the actual merchandise, help I n making your selection, after-sale service, and protective guarantees are of great importance to most consumers. Little satisfaction can be obtained in these areas from an impersonal di stributor, an uninformed clerk or a manufacturer several hundred miles away.

It's reassuring to know that you are buying from a friendly and knowledgeable person who will stand behind the product he sells and handle any necessary adjustments or repairs.

Coles Jewellers Limited operate two stores in Belleville: Coles Jewellers in the Belleville Plaza and Ronald Keel Jeweller at 296 Front Street opposite Victoria Avenue. Mr. Murray Coles of Belleville is the owner of both outlets with Mr. Al Reid managing the downtown store. Both friendly locations are staffed with people who know the business and like to serve you. And both stores adhere to the previously mentioned policies in order to serve you better.

Sincerely,
Murray Coles

GM Pact Ratified By Auto Workers

DETROIT (AP) — The United Auto Workers reported Sunday night that its national contract with General Motors (GM) has been overwhelmingly ratified by GM workers.

The union said the three-year agreement, concluded Tuesday night, received approval in all reporting local bargaining units.

Among the 435,000 GM workers in the United States, the union said, 95 per cent voted to ratify and 30 per cent voted to reject.

UAW President Leonard Woodcock said of the signing: "We believe that never before in the history of the union's negotiations with GM has every unit voted to ratify a new national agreement."

The union reported tentative agreement of its Canadian GM contract Saturday, just a day after a similar settlement by 15,800 Ford of Canada workers in Toronto.

Skilled trades workers, whose Ford counterparts rejected their contract last month, voted approval by 80 per cent, the UAW said.

Major contract breakthroughs in the 1973 agreements include a curb on mandatory overtime assignments, retirement with full pension benefits for any workers with 30 years seniority, a company-subsidized dental care plan in the pact's second year and improved health and safety representation.

The economic package involves a three-per-cent a year pay increase, pension payments increasing to $700 a month by 1976 and an improved cost of living allowance formula.

In order to force a pattern contract, the union selected Chrysler as the target company in August. When the 1970 contract expired on Sept. 14, 127,000 Chrysler workers in the U.S. and Canada went on strike.

The walkout lasted nine days, and the contract accepted by Chrysler workers served as a model for some 700,000 autoworkers and thousands of others in related industries represented by the UAW.

The strike of Ford-Canada lasted about two weeks, resulting in current layoffs of about 20,000 U.S. workers when Ford was hit with a shortage of Canadian-produced parts. Many of the men won't be recalled for another week, when parts become available, Ford has indicated.

Socialists' Task Said 'Give Hope'

REGINA (CP) — T. C. Douglas returned during the weekend to the home of some of his greatest political victories for a rousing speech to 180 New Democratic Party supporters at a conference on democratic socialism.

Mr. Douglas, who headed the first socialist government in Canada as premier of Saskatchewan from 1944 to 1962, promised to make a brief statement Sunday at the end of the three-day conference.

But he turned into an extemporaneous 35-minute presentation, similar to a speech that might be given at a party convention.

"Of course we're not going to transform the world over night," said the former national party leader who now is NDP energy critic in Parliament.

"But to give people hope that it can be a better world . . . that's what we can do. Many lives by hope.

"One task of the socialist movement is to give hope and out of hope will come the dynamics to bring about the type of world we're working for."

The NDP's predecessor, the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, "Started 40 years ago with no money, no press, no knowledge of organizational techniques.

"We've come to the place today where we have three provincial premiers, 31 members in Parliament, and by the future of history . . . the balance of power (in Parliament)."

Mr. Douglas said the party's influence never was more noticeable than recently, when, faced with the loss of NDP support, the Liberal government announced a national energy policy combining reforms the NDP had been advocating.

The conference was the first sponsored by the Douglas-Coldwell Foundation, named after Mr. Douglas and M. J. Coldwell, another long time leader in the Canadian socialist movement. Mr. Coldwell, 85, was not able to attend the session.

CLC Chiefs To Confer

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian Labor Congress leaders meet today for a regular executive council meeting in what one congress observer termed "a strained atmosphere."

Among those present for the meeting are leaders of a group pledged to reform the congress and overhaul its leadership.

But the question of the congress presidency might surface at the meeting. President Donald MacDonald is due to retire at the May congress convention and the only declared candidate so far is William Dodge, congress secretary-treasurer.

Mr. Dodge—or others—might ask for the endorsement of the 30-member council.

Previously, the congress council has endorsed an official slate of candidates before conventions.

The reform group, however, including Stan Little of the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE), has promised to run a slate of candidates committed to change.

CUPE is committed to departure from the congress if a reform program they proposed in November is not adopted by the congress in May.

PM Rides in Santa Claus Parade

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau's British Columbia visit wound up a festive Christmas note Saturday after a hard-hitting attack on critics of his government's energy policy.

Visibly relaxed after his speech Friday night to a Liberal fund-raising dinner here, the prime minister mingled with local residents at a civic reception following his participation in a Santa Claus parade in Chilliwack, 60 miles east of here.

Police estimated that up to 20,000 people lined the 1.6-mile parade route as Mr. Trudeau rode through the centre of Chilliwack in an open car.

The low-key atmosphere was in marked contrast to the mood at Friday night's dinner where the prime minister singled out Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed for particular criticism on energy matters.

Using his first appearance in the West since the energy debate erupted to "set the record straight," Mr. Trudeau called Premier Lougheed inadequate in international oil marketing and accused him of reacting petulantly to the federal oil export tax.

The 620 guests at the $100-a-plate dinner showed little reaction during the criticism of the Alberta premier and the prime minister's later comments that he hopes the federal and Alberta governments now "will progress co-operatively toward an energy policy of benefit to all Canadians."

"It's not in my interests to quarrel with provincial premiers, but, as you know, it's not in my nature to be pushed around by them either," he said.

Asked about the reaction to Mr. Trudeau's speech, a former Liberal MP said Saturday he thinks the comments were received well despite the lack of spontaneous applause.

Gretta Pringle, former MP for Fraser Valley East, said in Chilliwack the response was normal from people who are "not too demonstrative."

"I was a little surprised that he attacked Lougheed because I felt he's been a little too generous in the past."

With Mr. Trudeau at the helm, the Liberals have a good chance of recapping some of their British Columbia losses in the next election, Mr. Pringle said. The party was only four British Columbia seats in the 1968 election, compared with 14 in the 1972 federal vote.

The prime minister allowed the Christmas spirit to predominate during his visit to Chilliwack.

He told youngsters at a post-parade reception that one of the advantages of being prime minister "is that you can realize the childhood dream of riding in a Santa Claus parade."

However, he cautioned against believing that Santa is always receptive to prime ministerial requests.

"Last year I asked him for a majority government and didn't get it."

However, he did have Santa Claus to blame for "a perfect wife—she liked you find only in British Columbia."

Margaret Trudeau expecting her second child by the end of the year, did not accompany her husband on his trip to her native province.

Prorogation Appears Possible by Christmas

OTTAWA (CP) — With tonight's non-confidence motion apparently defused and the government's legislative schedule almost completed, the Commons might be headed towards a pre-Christmas prorogation—although the exact date remains indefinite.

The two major bills still before the House are the emergency oil legislation, already under debate for three days, and the election expenses bill. Both might pose serious obstacles to hopes for early prorogation.

The oil legislation still has to go through committee consideration and the election expenses bill, already under committee scrutiny, faces a long series of amendments. Normally it would require several weeks for each to complete full examination and debate.

But the Commons showed once again Friday hpw fast it can work when all parties agree to get something done. In the one day approval was given four major pieces of social legislation, including an act approving family allowances averaging $20 a child a month starting Jan. 1.

Oil Tax Defended

PITTSBURGH, Pa. (AP) — The House leader in the Canadian Parliament assured the United States Saturday of his country's continuing help in the current energy shortage, but not at the expense of Canada's own needs.

"We have no wish whatsoever to make life more difficult than it already is for Americans," Allan MacEachen said.

However, he defended Canada's oil export tax, which makes Canadian oil more expensive for American buyers.

"It did not make sense for us to be importing half our oil requirements from foreign countries, at high world prices, and at the same time selling western Candian oil to you at lower prices," MacEachen told the United Mine Workers convention.

But Canada continues to supply the United States with about one million barrels of oil daily, more than ever before, he said.

Theft Charged

NAPANEE, Ont. (CP) — Kenneth Bowley, 31, organizer of Kingston's Crime Watchers Committee, and two others have been charged with theft under $200.

Police said boards valued at $75 were torn off a barn and placed in a truck near Tamworth, about 10 miles north of this community just west of Kingston.

Ads Deceptive

WASHINGTON (AP) — A law judge ruled that Bristol-Myers Co. designed deceptive and misleading advertisements, although company executives knew or should have known the ads were dishonest, the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) announced Sunday.

Bristol-Myers and the agency that prepared the ads for Dry Ban anti-perspirant are prohibited in an order accompanying the ruling from using without substantiation demonstrations or evidence to advertise any product subject to FTC supervision.

Bristol-Myers and the agency, Ogilvy and Mather, Inc., said they would appeal.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) — A spokesman for Local 71000 of the International Woodworkers Union said Sunday night no talks are planned between Weyerhaeuser (Ontario) Ltd. officials and negotiators for the 350 workers who left their jobs at the local mill at midnight Friday night.

He said picket lines are being maintained round-the-clock at the wood veneer manufacturing plant.

Revenue Minister Robert Stanbury shows new 1973 income tax forms at news conference in Ottawa. One of the most important changes is that tax tables have been expanded from $12,000 to $24,000 salary ranges, enabling more people to avoid having to calculate their taxes by arithmetic. (CP Photo)

Food Shortage Predicted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is headed toward a food shortage similar to the current energy crisis, a critic of the agriculture industry says.

In testimony prepared for a Senate hearing today, Jim Hightower, co-ediator of the Food Action Campaign, a consumers group, said monopolistic trends in the food industry are leading to a shortage of crisis proportions.

"If we are caught unaware by the fuel crisis, and if we are chagrined by the lack of competition in the oil industry, then we ought to know the same phenomenon is occurring now in the food industry.

"Monopolistic food corporations are steadily taking charge of the food supply.

"The question is whether we will draw any lessons from the oil experience, or whether we will stand idly as that same way of doing business dominates the food industry as well, leading inevitably to food crises even greater than the ones we experienced this year."

Quebec Creditistes Vote to Oust Leader

QUEBEC (CP) — His name is Yvon Dupuis but what he is does not seem clear today.

Last February, the former federal LIberal cabinet minister was elected as the bright, new image-making leader of the Quebec Parti Crediste.

But, Sunday, a convention of party militants, called illegal by Mr. Dupuis, abolished the position of party leader for at least two years and even changed the party name. The 700 delegates stopped short of officially denouncing Mr. Dupuis personally.

The convention, controversial since it was called Nov.-18 by the party executive, reflected a rift in the party which has deepened since its disastrous showing in the Oct. 29 Quebec election, under Mr. Dupuis' leadership.

Only two Creditiste candidates, Camil Samson and Fabien Roy, survived the Liberal electoral sweep of 102 out of the 110 seats in the Quebec national assembly.

Those two men joined forces Sunday with the avowed intention of helping to rebuild the party through strong local organization.

Mr. Dupuis was reported to be in the Quebec City area Sunday but kept away from the convention. He could not be reached by reporters.

The 700 delegates resolved that Mr. Roy and Mr. Samson would be the party's political spokesman during the two-year suspension of the post of party leader. Mr. Roy was elected president of the party's executive committee, a position considered by Dupuis supporters earlier to be held by Phil Cossette.

Mr. Dupuis and Mr. Cossette appointed a decision last month to hold the party's annual convention in December. Mr. Dupuis later summoned the Creditiste provincial council which cancelled the December convention, scheduled an "official" one for next May and recalled Mr. Samson from the party for "unacceptable" behavior.

However, Mr. Roy and Mr. Samson claim their was the official annual meeting and its decisions stand.

Policemen Convicted

CHICAGO (Reuter) — Twenty-four Chicago policemen and former policemen will be sentenced this week on extortion and conspiracy charges in a series of scandals that has shaken the 14,000-man force.

The Chicago Daily News says "revelations of police brutality, along with federal trials that have convicted dozens of policemen of corruption, have driven public esteem for the force to its lowest point in more than a decade."

People and Events

The fireman's toy drive always does especially well collecting toys for young children, but has a little trouble finding gifts for the teenagers. There are 50 boys and girls between the ages of 13 and 17 for whom the firemen want Christmas donations, and a little help from ladies in the community.

If you have a sewing machine, some scraps of material and a little free time, you could make a shoe-sized tote bag for the firemen to put the teenagers' gifts in. Any women's groups who would like to take this on as a project or individuals who could make a bag or two, are asked to bring their finished tote bags to either city fire hall.

As for donations to this age group, here are a few suggestions for ladies to fill the tote bags: for girls, panty hose, cologne, hand lotion, mitts, scarves, wallets, and toilet articles; for boys, socks, mitts, scarves, razor and blades, toilet articles, wallets, pens and any other items you know that would please this age group. Donations of this nature can also be taken to the fire halls.

The St. Julien IODE Christmas tea was held recently at the home of Elva Safe. The many guests were received at the door by Mrs. Safe, the Regent, and the tea convenors, Barbara Lenk and Thelma Bailey.

Vera Slade collected tickets while Marie Kvarda, Eva Doolittle and Peggie Hannah invited the guests into the various rooms.

Pouring tea in the decorated dining room were Edna Hume, Laura Bishop, Carm Mott and Cleta Gilbert. Helping to serve refreshments were Betty Gorsline, Kay Lack, Daina Honeyman, Lee Duff and Grace Pearce.

In the recreation room the guests were able to purchase many Christmas novelties, shortbread cookies and the 1974 IODE calenders. Members who assisted in the sale of these articles included Loreen Ellis, Gerry Carscallen, Ann Gajdicar, Margaret McKay and Zetta Harris.

MR. AND MRS. ROGER DALE COPELAND

Copeland — Debison

Sandra Louise Debison and Roger Dale Copeland exchanged wedding vows late in October at Grace United Church, Trenton.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Debison, Trenton. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Copeland, Carrying Place.

Rev. Neil McLean, the bride's uncle, officiated.

The bride's cousin, Jane Bruns, sang at the wedding.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white gown with angel sleeves and a chapel veil of fluted tiered tulle trimmed in matching lace. She carried white shasta daisies and mums.

Denise Copeland, the groom's sister, attended the bride in an emerald green velvet gown. She wore a picture hat and carried bronze and gold mums.

Larry Lloyd attended the groom assisted by John Debison, the bride's brother, and Don Copeland, the groom's brother.

A reception was held at Trenton CFB Yacht Club.

After a wedding trip to Ottawa, the couple took up residence in Trenton.

Greatrix — Bird

Rev. Ralph Jackson officiated at the wedding at Wellington United Church when Joyce Muriel Bird and Herbert John Greatrix were joined in marriage this autumn.

The bride is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Bird, RR1, Bloomfield, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Oran Greatrix of Picton.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a gown of organza and Venice lace with full bishop sleeves and daisy appliqué. She wore a matching lace headpiece from which a four-tier veil fell. Her bouquet was pink roses, lily of the valley and orchids.

Matron of honor was Linda Osterhout of Consecon, and bridesmaids Isabel Johnson of Picton, the groom's sister, and Darlene Harrison of Kingston, the bride's niece. They all wore blue empire - waisted double knit gowns with matching blue picture hats, and carried baskets of daisies and pink carnations.

The groom's best man was Joseph Harvey of Picton, and the ushers were Paul Johnson, the groom's brother-in-law, and Doug Deacon of Picton.

The reception was held in the church parlors in Wellington.

After their honeymoon in New York State, Mr. and Mrs. Greatrix have made their home at RR1, Bloomfield.

Do - It - Yourself Toys

TORONTO (CP) — What would happen in your house if under the Christmas tree the youngsters found cardboard tubes, wooden spoons, scraps of cloth, paper plates, bits of plastic and other household discards?

Would they consider them do-it-yourself toys?

To Steve Caney they are.

A designer for the Boston Children's Museum, he believes toys should cost little or nothing to make and should involve both parent and child in their construction.

"Toy-making is total fun," Mr. Caney said during a visit here and displayed his portable toy shop—a huge suitcase filled with scraps that he makes into playthings.

He gave a demonstration, building an elaborate geometric object using toothpicks and peas.

"A child doesn't really care how much his toys cost," he said. "It should be simple and designed so that it always works."

If it should break, a homemade toy can be easily repaired. "You built it so you know how to fix it. Children who fix things feel important."

Guilty Parent Syndrome is what Mr. Caney calls the situation when parents bring home a toy as a peace offering for a child.

"It's not a good idea," he said. "What the child wants is the parent to play with, and what the parent wants is to be appreciated for himself."

"The toy is to be succesful should get both involved," he said, and the most successful toy is made by parent and child from scraps.

Woman Fixes Shoes

MONTREAL (CP) — Eglantine Livernois of Laprairie, Que., may be the most unlikely person to be found working as a cobbler, but for the past 24 years the 70-year-old widow has been repairing shoes in a small Montreal suburb—and she has no plans to retire.

Wager — Reid

MR. AND MRS. RUSSELL WAGER

The Wesleyan Methodist Church was the scene for the fall wedding of Cheryl Ann Reid, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Reid of Corbyville and Russell Robin Wager, son of Mr. and Mrs. Borden Wager of Big Island.

Rev. Red Irish officiated at the double ring ceremony assisted by the groom's brother Rev. Wayne Wager of Syracuse, New York.

A cousin of the groom, Judith Sutherland, provided organ music.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white gown of organza over satin which featured a roled neckline, sheer sleeves ending in a cuff, a fitted waistline and a full skirt. Ruffles down the front of the fitted bodice were trimmed with lace, and tideutical lace accented the waist and cuffs. The Juliette headdress held a circle veil edged with lace.

Helen Treverton was the maid of honor in a deep rose gown with an empire waist, high neckline, long full sleeves with cuffs and ruffles down the front of the bodice.

Bridesmaids Cheryl Robinson and Carol-Lyn Thompson wore dresses in a similar style but in dark green. The junior bridesmaid, Kimberly Palmer wore a deep rose dress like the maid of honor's, but with short sleeves, a round neck and a tied bow at the waist. All the attendants were white ribbons in their hair.

The bouquets of the bride and her attendants were made of pink roses, white carnations, baby's breath and ivy.

Douglas Thompson, a cousin of the groom, was his best man. The ushers were Allan Thompson and Loris Wager, also the groom's cousins, and Brian Chard, the bride's cousin.

After the reception at the Four Seasons Hotel, the guests were invited to the bride's parents' home.

Ann Landers

Christmas Is Dead

Dear Ann Landers: Please print this for your column, although I won't be around to read it. I will have left for Bangkok, Thailand.

Someone circulated an essay around the office—written by a man named William Kirchoff, whom I don't know. He's a friend of someone who works here. I can't quote the essay verbatim because I don't have it, but it expressed my views perfectly.

Mr. Kirchoff says Christmas is dead. The American people have stood it up against the wall and executed it. From its grave, a ghost has risen. The ghost calls itself Christmas, but it's a poor imitation of the real thing.

The change that hit me first was the tree. When I was a boy a Christmas tree was green and it smelled like a tree. The ornaments were pretty—some were home-made. Today, a green Christmas tree is five one—it's rare. The "in" tree is white, silver or gold. It sparkles with sprayed-on stuff. The lights blink in time with a hidden stereo that plays Christmas music.

And this brings me to the next big change. Silent Night just doesn't make it anymore. It has to be sexy, like, I Saw Mommy Kissing Santa Claus. The worst indignity is Sant himself. It comes back ever, year, like an itch.

Poor old Santa is no longer the jovial gentleman who puts presents and cash in the children's stockings. Ho, ho, ho. He is the guy from Central Casting in the giant, dent tells them where to drag their parents to buy these goodies. Santa has gone slightly commercial.

Worst of all, the spirit of Christmas is gone. Family get-togethers now are out of the question because people are busy with office parties. And that's another story. Boom flows like it's being piped in from the city reservoir. Stenographers smooch behind water coolers and filing cabinets with men from first comers who wouldn't dare use any other day of the year. All this in the name of Christmas.

Christmas, the one day of the year set aside by all Earth, Good Will Toward Men. They couldn't leave it alone. They had to go and kill it. Make Reader

Dear Reader: Thanks for sharing. And now I have some news for you. My column appears in the Bangkok World. (Yes, it's in English.) See you in Thailand!

Dear Ann Landers: I need to know what to do. I don't trust my own judgment. Too much emotion involved.

For years I have been giving my nieces had nephews a Christmas cheque. No big deal when I started but the number has grown from three to 27. Last year it was very difficult, but I made it. Through alimo I had to do without things I needed. This year, what with inflation and four new babies, I just can't manage those cheques.

Should I write a note of apology or would it be better to remain silent? I want to do what's right.—Florida Wee

Dear F. W.: Write a note expressing some warm sentiment. Say you regret that there will be no cheque this year but you send your love, as always.

Few Jobs For Women Architects

TORONTO (CP) — Women architects have the hardest time of all in North America—in the classroom, on the job and even in finding work, says Diane Lee-Smith, first and only woman on the university of Toronto faculty of architecture staff.

Miss Lee-Smith, who trained in London, worked and travelled in a number of countries, including Poland, before becoming part-time lecturer in Toronto last year.

England isn't particularly favorable to women architects, either, she said, but it has at least twice as many registered professionals as the United States or Canada.

In Canada, of 3,300 registered architects, only 63 are women. Forty of these work in Ontario.

Miss Lee-Smith graduated nine years ago from a school in England where people got lasting her how young she looked to be in architecture.

In Poland, however, nobody made comments about her youth, she said. "When I'd tell them I was an architect the first thing they always wanted to know was what I'd built."

There aren't any ready figures on the number of women architects in Eastern Europe, but the numbers must be sizable because they are greeted without comment on their being exceptional, she said.

In Kenya, Tanzania and Uganda, she found about six per cent of the students in architecture were women, the same number as at the University of Southern California or Berkeley, where she was formerly on staff.

In Tanzania, the first chief architect in the government is a woman, Miss Lee-Smith said. And in Canada, the recent election of Blanche Van Ginkel as a fellow of the Royal Architectural Institute of Canada, is at least an encouraging development.

But in the classrooms, female students find they are at a disadvantage.

"You don't know the language and the technicalities," said third-year student Asia Malik. "Take shop, for instance—you've given a five-minute explanation, whereas the boys have had manual training in high school."

And after graduation, prospects often aren't bright.

Jan Burt, another Toronto architect, said having a husband who is an architect helps a bit when the client is a large board of directors.

When the client is an individual, there is no problem, she said, but the large boards seem to find it difficult psychologically to cope with women architects.

Successful Living

Parenthood Requires Effort

A reader in Winnipeg has written to tell us about the Parent Effectiveness Training course which she has been taking. She and her family are finding it helpful in coping with everyday problems. She says that it would be useful for any parent who feels that he or she is not quite as effective as desirable.

P.E.T. courses are springing up all over North America. They are based on the theories presented in Thomas Gordon's 1970 book entitled "Parent Effectiveness Training". This best selling book is available in book stores or by writing direct to the distributor, Musson Book Co., 30 Lesmill Road, Don Mills, Ontario M3B 2T6.The price is $6.95.

Ask around in your community to see if a P.E.T. course is available. You may find it the answer to your prayers.—Dorothy Durrell

Dear Doris: My brother had a nervous breakdown, all due to some trouble over a woman. Now he has a divorce from this woman. He pays alimony for her and two teen-age children.

Since his divorce he imagines everyone is against him. The doctor said he had paranoia. He told me to ignore him when he flips into a rage. But every time he does it I get such a shock!

One morning he forgot he had had his breakfast and was he ever mad when my mother (87) and I tried to tell him he had. Then he started to throw things; he went after me and told me to pack my things and get out.

I feel he is awful made at me for some reason and is hard to keep from resenting him.

He is mad if I pet up the kitten. Then sometimes he sits and looks at TV and laughs to himself when there is nothing funny on.

The doctor said he could be helped with treatment, had how would you get him to go?

—Sister of the Sick

Dear Sister: If you can keep on an even keel with a sickness like that in your house, you deserve a medal.

Paranoia is the name given to a type of personality "and a whole range of mental illnesses. A person may start out with a touchy, suspicious personality — an gradually the symptoms become more pronounced, with brooding and real delusions of persecution.

Neither you nor your doctor can predict what will happen next. Paranoia is hard to treat. You have learned to live with the unexpected and this will continue. You are doing all you can.

But keep in close touch with your doctor. The time may come when your brother's behavior will deteriorate to the point where he will become violent and have to be placed in hospital for treatment.

Confidential to Latvian Girl: Feeling like a foundling is no reason for it to so — can give a girl a mixed-up idea about her own worth. Hence you draw back into your shell for many years later.

But your young man is shy too. Why not think about how he feels and forget yourself in courting him a little? He has shown he really cares. Do thoughtful things, like making homemade cookies or knitting him socks. Or handing him a fresh cup of coffee when he walks in the door. And good luck!

(Leaflets mentioned by Doris are available to readers for 20 cents and a large, stamped, self-addressed envelope. If you have not received a leaflet requested, it may be that you have neglected to include the necessary eight-cent stamp. Write to Doris in care of this newspaper.)

Kawartha Lakes School Salvages Girls' Lives

LINDSAY, Ont. (CP) — Mindy is a lively 14-year-old girl who likes to play with dogs.

She is also a speed freak and has a 35-year-old boyfriend.

"The child is a bundle of energy," said Cheryl Ward, assistant superintendent at Kawartha Lakes School, one of 13 training schools operated by the Ontario ministry of correctional services.

"She is a character; the only crime she has committed is that all that energy has been misdirected."

Kawartha, set up under the Juvenile Deliquents Act, to salvage the future of "misguided and-misdirected" children, belies the Victorian tone of its terms of reference. It houses girls between the ages of 12 and 18.

"One of the failures of the correctional services over the years was to try to force the children to accept middle-class values," superintendent Bob Cannon said in an interview.

"The thought that they can get a job like everyone else is sometimes foreign to them, even though we try to give them a skill that seems very basic to us," he said. "It's like asking a kid why she doesn't become a neurosurgeon when she can't even board a bus.

The girls, coming from broken homes, foster homes and training schools, trust no one. Indifference usually masks their feelings and the child rarely shows through.

"We'll never complain of being overstaffed here," Mr. Cannon said.

"Even if we doubled the staff we wouldn't have enough to deal with all the different kinds of problems."

There are 88 paid staff members plus summer volunteers, ranging from supervisors to kitchen staff, to deal with a capacity group of 120.

The provincial government allots more than $1 million a year to Kawartha from its $17 million training school budget.

The training school program, characterized in the 1950s by strict discipline, isolation and reward and punishment, now is more informal and relaxed.

Kawartha has no chain-link fences and no isolation ward. Overnight canoe trips, hikes, picnics and field trips to Toronto and nearby towns are a regular part of the school's program.

With all the amenities, Mr. Cannon still worries about the effectiveness of the program. The problem, he says, lies in the girls' attitude.

"No matter which way we arrange it, the child still believes she is being punished," he said. "Ask any girl. She'll tell you she'd rather be with where else, even if it's back home.

Despite the problems, the school is pleased with a new program initiated a year and a half ago that sends girls out to jobs. So far, it has involved more than 150 girls. The demand is so great from employers there is a waiting list.

"From having to beg for the first job for a child, it's quite a mind-blower," Mr. Cannon said.

The girls work in restaurants, day-camps and factories, with the elderly, in hospitals, department stores and nursery schools. The "pinnacle of success" is one girl who is working as an information officer in the local chamber of commerce, Mr. Cannon said.

Hat Designer Talks About Her Success

NEW YORK (AP) — Arleen Meyer designs up to 90 hats in a single season but she keeps only half a dozen in her own closet.

The attractive, dark-haired woman has been successful for 30 years in crowning young heads with inexpensive, high-style, fun headgear.

"I started out to be a fashion illustrator," she said in an interview. "I studied at Traphagen and the Art Students' League and supported myself selling hats at a Manhatan department store, one day I had a chance for a job, took it and have been there ever since. It was accidental and coincidental, but not strange. My whole family has been in the millinery industry.

To many women millinery is a dirty word, Mrs. Meyer said. It's hats today as the industry is strong after several weak years.

For her young, bouncy, line of inexpensive items, she is influenced by fashion magazines, people on the street, department stores and fashion shows. Everything goes into a big melting pot.

"What is strong one season may carry over to the next with a slightly different look," she said.

"Color is always changing. Even basic colors may change, though you think they are the same year in and year out. The textile markets are a tremendous help because they evolve colors. They do research and develop new things. Really they create fashion because they tell us what colors and fabrics are available."

"We try to keep a line to a minimum," the designer said. "I bring ideas and things I think will be good to a meeting with everybody in the company and we talk about it and decisions are made, considering all the factors.

"I always have successes—there are very few duds in each line—and a few items are very, very hot. We can't afford to gamble on something bad."

Wire-winder

Up to 180 strands of brass - coated steel wire can be wound around a hose core by this new spiral winder at Goodyear's Collingwood, Ont., plant. Four layers of wire running in opposing directions can be applied at once to reinforce high - pressure hydraulic hose so that it will withstand pressures up to 10,000 pounds per square inch. Installation of the winder was part of a recently - completed $1.5 million expansion at the Collingwood plant. (CP Photo)

Defence Contractors Gave Millions to Re-elect Nixon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Officials of the 100 biggest defence contractors in the United States gave more than $3.4 million to President Nixon's re-election campaign last year, Representative Les Aspin said Sunday.

Aspin said the figure represents only the known contributions, but he suggested there may be more still unreported. He said he is asking the Senate Watergate committee to look into the possibility of still secret gifts.

The Wisconsin Democrat also said a pattern to some gifts suggested that some money may have been from corporate funds, illegal under federal law.

Aspin said his study is "solid evidence of the endless trade-off between big business and the Pentagon. It shows unmistakably the stake big business has in maintaining a bloated military budget."

"When you get right down to it, many defence contracts are nothing more than political patronage, and here's the proof," he said.

Alleged Robbers Quickly Caught

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — The sharp eyes of a local police sergeant led to two arrests Sunday in connection with a service station robbery in which two bandits used a double-barrelled shotgun to get $650.

The policeman, Sgt. David Gittings of the Niagara regional police, St. Catharines' division, was on his way to the scene of the robbery with only a brief description of the car used by the thieves.

He spotted a similar vehicle just as it pulled into the driveway of a house about a mile from the service station.

A veteran on the force, Sgt. Gittings radioed headquarters for a surveillance team to watch the car while he continued to the robbery scene.

After the surveillance party arrived, a man came from the house and was arrested as he entered the vehicle. Another man was taken into custody.

Charged with armed robbery are Craig Mulligan, 23, of St. Catharines and Robert McLaughlin, 24, of no fixed address.

Russian Poet Minus Bottle

TORONTO (CP) — Yevgeny Yevtushenko, Russia's internationally - acclaimed poet, was feted by the Toronto Poets' League and the Toronto Writers' Union Saturday, but was not told that the party was B.Y.O.B.

The two Toronto groups sent invitations to Canada's top poets and authors, many of whom appeared at the party in Toronto's posh Forest Hill district clutching brown paper bags.

The invitations were worded in formal style, requesting the "honor of your presence," but at the end of the card was inscribed the letters B.Y.O.B.— Bring Your Own Bottle.

Canadian author Graeme Gibson, one of the founders of the writers' union and a guest at the party, said the unusual terms of the invitation proved embarrassing.

"The department of external affairs asked us to organize a reception because Yevgeny is on his first Russia-Canada cultural exchange visit," Mr. Gibson said.

"The trouble is they didn't give us any money to pay for it. The writers' union is a new we don't have any money. Nor do the poets' league. So it just had to be B.Y.O.B. party."

The Russian poet, unaware of the hushed chatter, sipped happily at a glass of dry red wine—imported from Hungary.

Man Badly Burned For Second Time

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — "Why does God hate me?" asked Alan McDonald after gunpowder exploded in his face and hands, burning him severely for the second time in his life.

"I didn't realize what had happened first," McDonald, 23, said from the burn ward at a local hospital. "I was burning. I rolled to put the fire out and I thought: 'Oh God, not again.'"

In February, 1969, McDonald was massively burned and disfigured when a playmate doused him with flaming gasoline. He required skin grafts from an older brother and years of plastic surgery to restore his fractured jaw.

McDonald, on a hunting trip last week with friends, was making bullets near a smouldering campfire when a spark set off a bowl of gunpowder.

"If my friend hadn't been there, I would have jumped into a canal with a rock around my neck," said McDonald, who was reported in fair condition after suffering first-and second-degree burns on his face and hands.

Bonnie McDonald, who had met her husband-to-be in high school and fell in love with him before surgeons restored his destroyed jaw, said:

"Alan was really looking good after all those years and now this. Man, it just isn't fair."

Israelis Say 70 Murdered

JERUSALEM (Reuter) — Israel has lodged complaints with the International Red Cross (IRC) about what it said was the murder, torture and maltreatment of more than 70 Israeli prisoners of war.

An Israeli announcement said Sunday a complaint was lodged by Mordecai Kidron, political adviser to Foreign Minister Abba Eban. The complaint asked Michel Conver, the IRC representative in Israel, to transmit to the IRC headquarters in Geneva, the preliminary Israeli charge that at least 29 Israeli prisoners had been murdered while on their way to Egyptian camps or inside the camps.

Earlier, the Israelis complained that 42 Israeli prisoners had been murdered by Syrian, Moroccan and other soldiers on the Syrian front.

Meier Granted Immunity

WASHINGTON (AP) — John H. Meier, a former aide to billionaire Howard Hughes and a resident of Delta, B.C., has been granted immunity to return to the United States and testify before the Senate Watergate committee.

The immunity granted by U.S. District Court followed a request by the committee.

Meier was called by the investigating committee in hopes he can provide information about a $100,000 cash gift Hughes gave C. G. (Bebe) Rebozo, a close friend of President Nixon. Rebozo has said he considered the money a contribution to Nixon's re-election campaign, but it was later returned to Hughes.

Cocaine Found in Bags

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Federal agents said they discovered cocaine in the luggage of a South American when he tried to enter the United States from Canada early Saturday.

Jaime Restrepo-Bedoya, 24, of Medeloin, Colombia, was charged with possession of a dangerous drug with intent to sell, smuggling, presenting a false document, and making false statements to immigration officials.

He was arraigned before Magistrate Edmund Maxwell and held in lieu of $75,000 bond pending a preliminary hearing Dec. 18.

Authorities said they found 1¼ pounds of cocaine, worth an estimated $75,000 on the illicit market, concealed in seven stereo tape cassettes in Restrepo-Bedoya's luggage.

Close Doesn't Count

CAMBRIDGE (Special) — Two goals by Ron Smith led Cambridge Hornets to a 3-2 win over Belleville Eagles in Ontario Hockey Association Senior A League play here Saturday.

It was the third time in a row the Belleville club has dropped a league game by a one goal margin.

John Beechy had the other goal for Hornets.

Eagles' marksmen were defenceman Tom Goodfellow and centre Les Collignon.

In Sunday games, Branford Foresters shaded Welland Merchants 5-4 and Barrie Flyers crushed Orillia Terriers 7-1.

Mike Corbett's goal with 19 seconds left in regulation time boosted Branford over Welland.

Dunc MacDonald, Bill Gration, Bob Cunningham and Terry McKnight had earlier goals for Foresters.

Counting for Welland were Bob Greene, Pete Skoudenburg, Bill Simpleil and Bryan Welch.

Seven players shared the goals in Barrie's lopsided win as the club climbed into a share of first place with Orillia.

The scorers were Bob Baird, Doug Grandy, Dave Nicholishen, Corby Adams, Ron Robinson, Jack Smith and Darryl Sly.

Lone marksman for Terriers was Danny Lutes.

The league is idle until Friday when all six teams are in action. Eagles will entertain Orillia while Welland is in Barrie and Branford is at home to Cambridge.

Top Notch Goalie Under Pressure

Barrie Oakes, goalie for Bramalea Blues of the Metro Toronto Junior B League, sprawls out on the ice to check Belleville Bobcats' Andy Rickesta in last night's encounter at the Belleville Memorial Arena. Oakes found himself doing a lot of extra work like this during the game as his defence fell apart in front of him. Gary Evans (15), of th Blues, attempts to check Ricketts from behind, but as in many incidents during the game Bobcats couldn't be pushed off the puck. Despite this fact that his team dropped into third place by way of the Cats' 4-2 win, Oakes was a standout in the Bramalea goal.

Bobcats Are All Alone in First Place

By MIKE BRAUSHAW
Sports Staff

Belleville Bobcats killed any doubts as to their ability to hold first place in the Metro Junior B League last night.

The Bobcats sent Bramalea home from the Memorial Arena on the short end of a 4-2 score. The victory gave Belleville a total of 35 points for the season, two more than Bramalea, and kept them on top of the Metro standings.

It wasn't the type of game you would have expected from two teams battling for first place," said Cats coach, Moe Hunter. "We didn't play as well as we could have, and they (Bramalea) didnt play very well either."

Nevertheless, Belleville did win.

Barrie Oakes, the Bramalea ne-minder, explained through his goaltending prowess why his team is in contention. Oakes was definitely the most impressive player on the ice and demonstrated, time and time again, that his abilities were more than good fortune.

Oakes had a total of 44 Bobcat shots fired at him, two of which were irrepressible goals, one a disputed goal and had another, which was also a goal, turn out to be his only mistake of the night. On one of the many occasions where he was forced to clear the puck from the area of the net, he lost track of it and pushed it in his own goal. Rather an expensive error.

Besides that one mistake, and breaking his stick on the ice in a fit of temper over the disputed Bobcat tally, Oakes was flawless in the Bramalea net. Without Oakes, Bramalea would have been bombed.

From what was seen of the Bramalea team — consistently loose offence and little, if any, defence — they may not be in contention for first place much longer.

Belleville held a 2-1 lead at the end of the first period on goals by Mark Coates and Kevin Joudrey.

Doug Evans tallied for Bramalea.

The only scoring in the second period was done by Paul King to put the Cats on top 3-1.

The visitors closed to within one goal, when Doug Cranford scored half-way through the final 20 minutes.

Joudwa, who was selected the first star of the game, put things out of reach for the Bobcats when he tallied with less than two minutes remaining.

Alan Hayes, of Bramalea, was picked as the second star and Belleville's Tim Yohn got the third star choice.

For the Bobcats it was rather a strange game.

Defensively, the locals came up with their usual hard hitting, Detailed effort was lavisely however, the Cats took on a new look. For the first time this season they did not operate as an offensive unit. Individual efforts were prevalent in the Bobcat attack.

The game itself was rather sloppy for both teams' offences, but the Cats appeared to ignore each other while they were in possession of the puck.

Are some of the Bobcats on cgo trips?

They should provide the answers in league games Friday (an Oshawa) and a home to Pickering, Sunday.

First Goal of Game Turns Tie into Win

How can a team lose a game 4-4? Ask the Rollins' Construction Peewees how. They did R, Saturday during the Oshawa Kinsmen Peewee tournament bowing to the Hamilton Peewees.

After going into the overtime period tied at three goals each, each team received penalty shots as a result of infractions incurred during the overtime period.

Clarence Broekma scored on his penalty shot to mark his third goal of the game, to put Rollins' on top.

However, Jim McGeachy on a penalty shot scored for Hamilton after being pulled down from behind, to tie the game up once again.

The game being tied at the end of the overtime, the match was awarded to Hamilton because the team had scored the first goal of the game.

Broekman, with three, led the Belleville team, with Shawn Mulroney adding the other marker.

For Hamilton, it was Dave Hacking with two, and Phil Richard and McGeachy with one.

In their second game, the Construction men were eliminated from further play, by Brampton 4-1.

Kevin Meagher scored the only goal for Belleville.

In other action on the weekend, the McInroy-Maines' Minor Bantams travelled to Stirling to defeat the hometowners 7-3. Danny Vance fired three goals to lead the winners, with Danny Duffy, Danny Jacques, Mike Bryant, and Steve Pearce adding the others.

Darrell Rush, Mark Dobson and Wayne Andrews replied for Stirling.

The Western Tire Juveniles lost three out of a possible four points on the weekend, dropping an 8-4 decision to Kingston Saturday night, but earning a 3-3 tie with Thurlow Ridge Handy Stand Sunday night.

Joey Edwards, Larry Woodley, Ken Just, and Steve Cowan scored in Saturday's loss to Kingston.

Grant Geegan and Dave England scored in the tie Sunday night, while Don Armstrong handled the scoring for Birt's, potting both goals.

It's His to Keep

Eight-year-old Rick Bashall was somewhat bewildered Friday night when he turned in his winning ticket and found he was the owner of new television set. Rick couldn't quite comprehend the fact that the television was actually his and found it a little difficult to smile. To get him to do so he was asked how often he had won a TV set. He quietly responded, "Well, it is my first time." Once he was told he could take the set home, Rick was much happier about the whole affair. The youngster won the TV at Kiddies' Night at the Belleville Memorial Arena during the Junior B hockey game.

Quinte Shades BCI Seniors

In an effort to raise funds for the annual Christmas sharing program, the Quinte and BCI senior basketball teams staged an exhibition game Saturday night, with Quinte coming out on top by a whisker, 49-47.

Mark Gallupe scored the winning basket for Quinte as the final buzzer sounded after taking a pass from Ron McTaggart.

Quinte held an edge in the first period play, and also in the score, 25-19.

The second half was a more wide open game, with fouls playing a big part in the BCI scoring.

BCI had a total of 15 points on 23 attempts from the foul line, while Quinte was good on one of three chances. Included in the Quinte total were six points from technical fouls.

Gallupe led all Quinte scorers with 18 points, and he executed some good passing plays. Don McTaggart was next with 13.

BCI's Larry Wilson was the top scorer in the game with 22 points, with Russ Simonds adding eight.

Lancers Taste Defeat

Loyalist Lancers Men's Hockey and Basketball teams weren't as successful as they hoped they would be over the weekend. In basketball Saturday, the Lancers dropped a 92-77 decision to Sir Sandford Fleming in Peterborough while the hockey team lost to Brockville on Sunday 8-4.

Rob Stinson, Loyalist coach, described the basketball game as "a shooting gallery and they had the highest percentage of hits."

Dave Culmer, of Loyalist, and Jerry Hiks of Peterborough tied for high scores of the game with 27 points each.

Harvey Sharpe had 19 for the Lancers and Bill Kyle 14.

For Sir Sandford Herm Jansen hooped 24, Joe Canavan got 15 and Robert Babcock had 12.

On Sunday, the hockey Lancers found themselves coming home on the short end of the score.

"We just didn't play 60 minutes of hockey," said Loyalist hockey coach, Bruce Cameron.

Brockville had a 3-0 lead by end of the first period and advanced their lead to 4-2 by the end of the middle frame. With the score 5-4 near the end of the third period Loyalist pulled their goalie and Brockville scored on the open net.

Jeff Dukel had a pair of goals for Brockville as did Reid Mallory for Loyalist.

Jeff Brownell, the Brockville goalie, had a rough game in net as Loyalist peppered 59 shots at him.

Also scoring for Brockville were Bob Bennett, Jeff Fleming, Wayne Clement and Chuck Willard.

Floyd Crawford and Barry Rountree fired singles for the Lancers.

I remember one year we were both tied for high average in the Men's League so they began checking our pin counters and total games for the season to decide who would finish first. As it turned out we were still tied when they finished checking everything because we both had bowled the same number of games and we both had exactly the same number of pins over the entire season. Three-goal Weekend For Sizzling Esposito

By IAN MacLAINE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

These human computers who thrive on statistics can take out their alide rules and focus on Phil Esposito.

The lanky Boston centre continued his goal-a-game clip during the weekend and the Bruins benefitted, extending their unbeaten National Hockey League string to 23 games.

Esposito scored once Saturday in a 5-2 win over Buffalo Sabres and followed with two more Sunday to produce a 3-3 tie with Philadelphia Flyers.

That gave him 28 goals and 57 points in 25 games and the experts are already speculating a record production for the 31-year-old from Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., who already holds the NHL season records for most goals (76) and points (152).

The Bruins came from a 3-1 deficit with two goals in the final two minutes of the game to salvage the tie at Philadelphia. Hunter's one-two punch of Esposito and Bobby Orr supplied the needed armament.

Orr, No. 2 in the scoring race with 45 points, blasted a shot from the right point past Bernie Parent at 18:38 of the third period. The Flyers' goalie stopped a similar Orr shot with 31 seconds to be but couldn't control the rebound which Esposito whipped home.

"There's nothing you can do about two pucks from the same going in," Flyers' coach Fred Shero observed later.

Ken Hodge, Boston's robust winger, admitted "tying this game was at least remote."

"But anything can happen with Orr and Esposito on your team," he said of the frantic finish.

Boston coach Bep Guidolin said two key faceoffs in the Philadelphia end worked to Boston's advantage in the Bruins tried to direct the puck to ORR, Philadelphia defenceman Barry Clarke won the second but it still wound up in Boston's possession, clearing the way for Orr's shot.

"Some times you get lucky and sometimes you don't get lucky," said Esposito.

Boston got on the scoreboard at 15:22 of the second period on a goal initially awarded to Gerry Vadnais.

But Esposito complained after the game and after a check of the TV films, the goal was awarded to Esposito.

Buffalo Sabres closed to within two points of fourth-place Toronto in the East by posting a 5-3 home ice win over the Pittsburgh Penguins. Maple Leaf's wilts New York Rangers' reeped 6-3 over California Golden Seals and Chicago Black Hawks stopped Minnesota North Stars 3-3 in Sunday night games.

In other Saturday games, Montreal Canadiens stopped New York Islanders 3-1, Philadelphia beat Toronto 2-1, Minnesota blanked Detroit Red Wings 3-0, Vancouver Canucks edged Pittsburgh Penguins 3-2 and Los Angeles Kings upset Atlanta Flames 3-0.

The tie at Philadelphia lifted the Bruins five points alop the East, but Montreal gets a chance to close the gap at Vancouver on Tuesday night. Toronto is at St. Louis against the Blues. California visits the Islanders and Los Angeles is at Minnesota in other contests.

Buffalo 5 Toronto 2

Rick Martin continued his prolific scoring at the expense of the Leafs in only his third NHL season, the Sabres winger collected his 18th and 19th of the season and Nos. 39 and 40 of his career.

Buffalo was never in trouble against the normally Toronto club and had opened a 4-0 lead before the Leafs could counter.

NY Rangers 6 California 3

Defenceman Larry Sachuk's 40-foot blast that eluded Gary Champoux highlighted the Ranger offence that lifted the New Yorkers into third place in the East.

The Ranger defence took 11 of the club's 34 shots at Champoux, a journeyman goaltender who arrived in New York less than two hours before game time to replace veteran Marv Edwards, out with an injured knee.

Coach Larry Popien, however, is worried that his offensive-minded defencemen may be picking up some bad habits and Sacharuk tends to agree.

"Now that I think of it, we may be doing it (shooting) too much. But we're scoring goals."

Popien, however, can take solace in his old GAG (Goal-a-Game) line—Jean Ratelle, Rod Gilbert and Vic Hadfield. The trio has been jelling again recently and against the Seals Hadfield scored twice and Gilbert added another on a breakaway engineered by Ratelle.

"It's just full gear now," Popein said of the line which picked up six scoring points Sunday.

Chicago 5 Minnesota 3

The Black Hawks continued to close ranks with leading Philadelphia in the West, Dennis Hull providing the momentum against the Stars with two goals and an assist.

The Stars held 1-0 and 2-1 leads off scores by rookie Gary Gambucci and veteran Bill Goldsworthy, both resulting from loose defensive play by Chicago, but were unable to regain the advantage after Hull's two scores had sent the Hawks into the lead.

12-point Edge For Bruin Star

Centre Phil Esposito of Boston Bruins picked up two goals and an assist Sunday night with Philadelphia Flyers to increase his lead in the National Hockey League scoring race.

Esposito has 28 goals and 29 assists for 57 points, 12 ahead of team-mate Bobby Orr, who has 16 goals and 30 assists.

YOUNGSTER SETS MARK

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Jenny Turrall, 13, of Sydney set a world women's swimming record Sunday night when she swam the 1,500-metre freestyle in 16 minutes, 40.9 seconds. Miss Turrall is believed to be the youngest swimmer ever to hold a world record.

Giants' Mainstay Sold to Boston

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Juan Marichal, one of the premier right-handers in baseball was sold Saturday for a undisclosed amount of cash to Boston Red Sox by San Francisco Giants.

Marichal has won 238 games in his 14-year major league career—the most victories by any active pitcher.

The 35-year-old Marichal with the Giants since 1960, had six seasons of 20 or more victories as a mainstay of the San Francisco pitching staff.

San Francisco owner Horace Stoneham and Boston general manager Dick O'Connell obtained Marichal's approval for the transaction. As a 10-year player who has been with the same team for more than five years, Marichal could have vetoed the deal.

Marichal earned an estimated $140,000 last year with the Giants.

Marichal's lifetime record is 238-140 and his career earned-run average is an impressive 2.78. He was 11-13 last season following a back operation the previous October.

His best seasons were 1963 when he posted a 25-8 record and 1968 when he was 26-9 and 1968 when he was 26-9.

3rd Title For Ilie

BOSTON (AP) — Ilie Nastase of Romania defeated Tom Okker of the Netherlands 6-3, 7-5, 6-4, 6-3 Saturday for his third Grand Prix Masters title.

The $15,000 first prize increased Nastase's earnings for the year to $228,750, best-in the game, and the triumph was his 19th in 21 tournaments in 1973.

The final was marked by bickering between the two players and controversial line calls. Okker was fuming at the finish.

In gaining second place, Okker picked up $10,000 for a year's total of $173,500, which left him in third place behind Stan Smith of Sea Pines, S.C., who earned slightly over $200,000.

Toros Pump 10 Behind Garrett

By IN Mc&LAINE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Pat Hickey had reason to remember John Garrett at Toronto's Varsity Arena Sunday night.

Hickey, the rookie, tripped the red light behind veteran Garrett, the goalminder, four times as the Toros crushed Minnesota Fighting Saints 10-1.

The Toros's rookie had more than one reason to recall the Saints goalie after the weekend's World Hockey Association action.

Going into the contest, the highly-touted newcomer to the pro ranks from Hamilton Red Wings of the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A league had scored just two goals.

"It's a great relief to start scoring," Hickey said. "I've been having tough luck around the net. . . .

"As far as I'm concerned, prior to tonight's game, he (Garrett) was one of the best in the World Hockey Association. When I broke into Junior A in Hamilton, he was in his last year with Peterborough Petes.

"I had a couple of breakaways in one game and he robbed me twice. I guess I got some sweet revenge."

Rick Smites and Tom Simpson added two apiece for the Toros, who score eight goals in the third period, after Wayne Carleton picked up three assists to move into the WHA scoring lead with 41 points, including 16 goals.

Elsewhere Sunday, Houston Aeros held off Vancouver Blazers 5-3, New England Whalers hung on for a 3-2 win over Cleveland Crusaders, Winnipeg Jets beat New Jersey Knights 3-1 and Quebec Nordiques brushed Chicago Cougars 6-1.

The Knights downed Chicago 3-1 Saturday night, Cleveland edged the Whalers 2-1 and Minnesota turned back Quebec 4-1 at St. Paul where the owners were grumbling about fan support.

The Fighting Saints are in Chicago for the lone Tuesday night game.

Houston 5 Vancouver 3

Frank Hughes' three goals, making him the top goal-scorer in the WHA with 22, paced the Aeros. George Gardner, beaten for three goals in the first period, was replaced in the Blazer goal by Pete Donnelly.

Hughes credited the revival of a minor pro line that included himself, Andre Hinse and Larry Land, with the trio's spectacular scoring feats this year.

The line was first formed five years ago with Phoenix Roadrunners and led the Western Hockey League in scoring three successive years.

"When we got Hinde at the start of this season I felt that our old minor league line could be just as good in the major league," Hughes said. "I think I've proved that's true.

New England 3 Cleveland 2

The Whalers reversed the outcome of their previous night's game at Cleveland on the strength of Gerry Byers' two goals. The loss left the Crusaders four points behind in the Eastern Division race.

The Whalers totally dominated the game for two periods outshooting the visitors 29-12 en route to a 3-0 lead. But Cleveland took control in the final 20 minutes and drew within range of tying on scores by Gerry Pinder and Paul Shmyr.

Winnipeg 3 New Jersey 1

Goals by Danny Johnson and rookie Danny Sertel came 54 seconds apart in the second period as the Jets came from a 1-0 deficit and move into a second-place tie in the West with Houston and Minnesota.

Quebec 6 Chicago 1

Jean Payette, back off a leg injury, scored twice to lead the Nordiques in a penalty-marred contest with the Cougars at Quebec City.

Simpson Gains 219 Yards in Bills' Romp

Broncos Set Up Showdown with the Raiders

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Denver Broncos can't wait to get their shot at Oakland Raiders. Washington Redskins can't wait to get another shot at Dallas, Cowboys, and O. J. Simpson can't wait—period.

"We're gonna beat 'em. You better believe it!" coach John Madden ignored almost the din of the Denver locker room Sunday after his Broncos set up a showdown next Sunday with the Raiders in Oakland by battering San Diego Chargers 42-38. The Raiders fell knocked their arch rivals, Kansas City Chiefs, out of the playoff picture Saturday, 37-20.

Charley Johnson kept Denver within half a game of Oakland in the American Conference West by firing two touchdown passes.

In Sunday's other games, Dallas whipped Washington 27-7, Buffalo Bills belted New England Patriots, 31-13, Cincinnati Bengals shelled Cleveland Browns 34-17, Pittsburgh Steelers punched Boston Oilers 35-7, St. Louis Cardinals stung Atlanta Falcons 32-10, Baltimore Colts surprised Miami Dolphins 20-13, Detroit Lions drubbed Chicago Bears 49-7, New Orleans Saints beat San Francisco 49ers 24 and Philadelphia Eagles nipped New York Jets 34-13.

In Saturday's other game, Minnesota Vikings defeated Green Bay Packers 31-7.

Los Angeles entertains New York Giants tonight.

Cowboys 27, Redskins 7

"We've been down before," said Washington coach George Allen. Both teams are in the running, not only for the division crown but for the conference's wild-card berth.

"The Cowboys not only had to win but to do it by at least eight points in order to keep alive their division title hopes. Roger Staubach passed and scrambled Dallas to victory. He completed 16 of 25 attempts for 222 yards, bootlegged the ball five yards for a touchdown and handed off twice to Calvin Hill, who plunged in from one and two yards out.

Bills 37, Patriots 13

The frozen turf in Buffalo was anything but unfriendly as far as Simpson was concerned. He went into Sunday's game against New England knowing he had to amass 260 yards in his final two games to surpass Jim Brown's once-seemingly unsurpassable record of 1,863 yards in a single campaign.

So he ran for 219 yards and a touchdown in the Bills' 37-13 romp.

Bengals 34, Browns 17

Cincinnati led by quarterback Ken Anderson's three-touchdown passes to rookie receiver Isaac Curtis, whipped Cleveland 34-17.

Steelers 35, Oilers 7

Pittsburgh snapped a three-game tailspin by forcing nine Houston turnovers and holding the Oilers to 82 yards on offense en route to a 27-7 romp. Terry Bradshaw threw touchdown passes of 31 yards to Frenchy Fuqua and Fuqua and three yards to Steve Davis in a turn-around second period.

Cards 32, Falcons 10

Terry Metcalf rushed for 109 yards in a ball-control offense and Jim Bakken kicked six field goals in the Cards' 22-10 upset that all but killed the Falcons' playoff hopes.

Baltimore wasn't only trying for a touchdown. It was trying to save Howard Schnellenberger's job as head coach. It got one, and perhaps the other, too.

The Colts' fourth successive fourth-down situations, went for the yards needed at a punt or field goal. They made all four, the last on a Marty Domres-to-Tom Mitchell touchdown pass in the final minute.

Eagles 34, Jets 13

John Outlaw's 46-yard touchdown return of an intercepted pass capped a rally that wiped out a 13-point New York lead and sparked Philadelphia over the Jets 34-13.

Selects' Coach Hopes His Team Is Learning

CHICOUTIMI, Que. (CP) — Boris Maisorov, coach of the touring Moscow Selects hockey team, figures his players may have learned something despite two one-sided victories during the weekend against Canadian junior competition.

Maisorov brought the Selects, rated the No. 2 all-star team in the Soviet Union, here Sunday and left with a 13-4 win over the reinforced Chicoutimi Saguenens of the Quebec Major Junior A Hockey League. Friday night, the Selects crushed league Remparts of the QMJHL 13-3.

Speaking through an interpreter, Maisorov said he tried to learn something from every game and hoped his players did the same.

"You are all thinking about the scores," he said. "Just because you lose the game doesn't mean your players are not good.

"I learned from the juniors—their desire to play from beginning to end—even though they are losing."

He said he felt his club had performed better against the Remparts, where it allowed fewer two power-play goals in the first 10 minutes, but totally dominated the game thereafter.

The Selects got three-goal performances from Vladimir Petrov and Vladimir Rogov and a pair from Sergei Kapustin. For left winger Kapustin it was his sixth and seventh goals in two games.

Boris Veregin, Valentin Markov, Sergei Korolov, Sergei Kolov and Anatoli Kortsev got the other Moscow goals.

The Saguenens, who were reinforced by players from their league as well as from two universities, got goals from Jean-Guy Dufour, Marc Dorfman, Gilles Gougeon and Robert Geoffrion.

Gougeon is from University of Sherbrooke and Geoffrion plays for Cornwall Royals of the QMJHL.

A crowd of 4,071 saw the visitors take a 4-1 lead in the first period and a 9-3 margin after two. Moscow outshot Chicoutimi 56-31 and held a good edge in every period.

Vladimir Shepovalov went all the way in the Selects' net with Richard Guay, the regular Chicoutimi goalie and Robert Sauvee, added from Laval Nationals, split goaltending duties.

MARLBOROS ADVANCE

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Marlboros will represent the Metropolitan Toronto Hockey League in an all Ontario round-robin tournament at Peterborough Dec. 14-15 to determine a provincial representative for the all-Canada midget hockey tournament in Oshawa next month. The Marlboros downed Don Mills Flyers 4-2 Sunday to take their best-of-three series 2-0 win with one game tied.

An Old Team Record Equalled by Hawks

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

St. Catharines Black Hawks ran their unbeaten streak to 14 games Sunday with a 9-5 decision over Hamilton Red Wings in Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A action.

The unbeaten streak matches a club record set in the 1953-54 season.

Then, the club won 13 games in the 14 game stretch, while the present team has 11 wins and three ties in the same streak.

The loss was Hamilton's 10th in their last 13 games, with two ties.

The Black Hawks led 2-1 after the first period and 4-3 at the end of the second.

Centre Rick Addonno and Dave Gorman scored two goals each for the winners.

Bill Hamilton also had two goals. Greg Craig, Wilf Paiement and Rick Hampson scored single goals for the Black Hawks.

Hamilton scorers were Dale McCourt, Mike Hobin, Ron Stackhouse, Mike Cossentino and Art Evans.

In other league games Sunday, Ottawa 67s defeated Kitchener Rangers 5-3, Kingston Canadians edged first-place Peterborough Petes 4-3, Sudbury Wolves downed London Knights 6-3, and Toronto Marlboros beat Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds 7-5.

Saturday, Oshawa Generals topped the Petes 5-2, and Sudbury defeated Toronto 9-3.

No. 491 For Hawley

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sandy Hawley, on the way to becoming the first jockey to win 500 races in a single year, posted victory No. 491 Sunday in taking the $10,000 winner-take-all North American riding championship at Bowie Race Track in Boston.

Hawley, a 24-year-old Whitby, Ont., native, finished third aboard Far Fetched in the fourth race, won with Blue Mountain Boy ($5.80) in the sixth and was second on Running Bear in the featured $10,000 riding championship handicap.

The invited jockeys drew blind for mounts in the fourth, sixth and eighth races. Hawley finished with $5 points, with Boston-rider Paul Caputo a surprise second with 64. Caputo substituted for Angel Cordero, who arrived at the track late.

Despite a heavy rain and a sloppy track, the program attracted a crowd of 11,394, who wagered $946,005.

Asked if the so-called riding championship had any special meaning, Hawley replied: "Yes, it was significant to me."

He added that top jockeys try just as hard "in a claiming race as in the Kentucky Derby."

European Unity Drive Extended to Medicine

BRUSSELS (CP) — The tortuous process of transforming European unity from a mere political or economic abstraction into an everyday reality now is being extended into a fresh field—medical education.

Some 118 delegates representing doctors, medical students, hospitals, unions and patients have just finished intensive talks in Brussels about how member states of the European Common Market can arrange mutual recognition of one another's medical degrees.

This would be the prerequisite of any new plan for freer circulation of doctors among the nine countries.

The sessions served as a form of public hearing prior to the preparation of proposals on the mutual recognition issue which are expected to be considered by the market's council of ministers next year.

But achieving mutual recognition implies some harmonization of training practices in the nine states.

The differences in these techniques from country to country are considerable—especially between British and Continental members of the market.

For instance, the period of study for specialists in Britain is longer than in some of the other market countries.

And there is a general fear that moves towards harmonizing training on a community-wide basis might undermine the quality of medical education and hinder the reforms planned for it in particular member states.

Thus any plan for harmonizing the education of doctors must be flexible, said Ralf Dahrendorf, the market's commissioner for research, science and education, who himself is soon leaving Brussels to become head of the London School of Economics.

He cited "a feeling of misunderstanding and suspiciousness that has existed for some time" between the medical professions of various market states.

The meeting in Brussels, headquarters city of the European community, has dispelled this feeling, Dahrendorf said.

And he looked forward to a council decision some time in the first six months of 1974 on the mutual recognition issue. Before the council acts, the recognition proposals have to be finally drafted by the market's policy-planning commission.

Moreover, just as there are reservations about harmonizing training methods, so there is a limit to enthusiasm about ultimate free circulation of doctors.

Surprisingly Dahrendorf found this most pronounced among student representatives at the three-day Brussels meeting—despite the supposed scorn among modern youth for rootedness.

The commissioner, a West German, found it an example of "good old nostalgia for being back in the home town and staying there."

Free movement of doctors within the European community is a principle that derives from the Common Market's founding treaty.

Resistance to harmonization of training may, in part, reflect the general reluctance of member states to see their educational systems merged in o a single mould.

In Britain, with its longer period of medical training, there has been opposition to any unrestricted influx of doctors from other Common Market nations.

Killaloe Farmer Improves on Axe

KILLALOE, Ont. (CP) — A 55-year-old Killaloe farmer, Harold Lisk, knows how to make life easier when it comes to wood splitting. He has invented a contraption that splits wood by the flick of a switch.

Mr. Lisk built the wood-splitter about 13 years ago, using parts from other machines. A 1939 Massey-Harris tractor and a 1926 Chevrolet engine provide the power. A pulley runs from the tractor to a wheel that once belonged to one of the first McCormick binders. An axe head is welded onto the blader wheel, which sits on a wooden frame.

Mr. Lisk turns on the motor and sets a piece of wood in front of the axe. The pulley and wheel go into motion. The axe head revolves and usually splits the block in one blow. "It saves a lot of work," said Mr. Lisk. "I'll look about a week to build it."

300 Wild Birds Tended

Roy Iver, 70, keeps an eye on Rajah II, a golden eagle, being offered fied by Bernice Inman at Wildingtame Sanctuary near Toronto. They tend 300 wild birds which, injured in accidents and victims of the hunter's gun, without the sanctuary's care and attention, would otherwise be dead. (CP Photo)

Naturalist, 91, Tends 300 Injured Birds

TORONTO (CP) — Ninety-one is a hard age at which to rebuild your life's dreams. But naturalist Roy Iver, with the help of public donations, today shuffles through Wildingtame Sanctuary where he and his protege Bernice Inman tend to 300 wild birds which, without the sanctuary's care and attention, would otherwise be dead.

Almost two years ago, a predawn fire destroyed Roy's cottage and 100 birds he had hoarded. He fled in his nightshirt and stood barefoot in the December snow watching his dreams go up in smoke.

However, a public donation of $25,000 secured the renovation of Roy's sanctuary. Mrs. Inman, who first visited the old man in 1964 with her injured cow, had la er come back to visit and decided to stay to work with the white-haired naturalist.

Her efforts to reorganize the sanctuary since the fire have been invaluable. Today, she does most of the leg-work around the sanctuary, caring for the birds under Roy's supervision.

Two years ago the sanctuary tended 600 birds; last year, 1,000 and this year about 1,500 birds have been brought in. The flow is heavy during the birds' migration and space on the three-acre site is minimal.

"But we've never turned away a bird yet," Mrs. Inman said.

However, half the birds brought to the sanctuary die. 45 per cent recover and fly free while five per cent spend the rest of their life inne there, too nobody would buy their homes.

crippled to fly again and too tame to be freed.

One of the couples prize birds is Rajah II, a golden eagle which an Indian boy had taken from its nest.

By the time the boy decided the eagle's rightful place was the sky, the bird had grown too accustomed to living in man's world. So it was sen: to Wildingtame.

"The bird loves people and will fly to anyone," Mrs. Inman said. But she shudders when she thinks of the hunters.

"It's sad. Rajah wouldn't last a week if we let her go—if she would go."

Apart from natural accidents, most of the birds brought to the sanctuary are victims of the hunter's gun. One great blue heron brought in this year had a broken wing and twisted tendons after stopping a hunter's bullet. A veterinarian was called in to repair the damage and the heron now is recovering in the sanctuary. It should be flying by next spring.

Holdup Man Now 86, Tells Tale

JOPLIN, Mo. (AP) — Harvey Bailey does not look 86 years old. His physique is that of a man perhaps 20 years younger. And with his white hair, walking black eyes and square jaw, he looks like a retired farmer.

But between 1920 and 1932, Bailey was the most active bank robber in the United States.

Today, after spending nearly 40 years in prison, including 12 in Alcatraz, he lives a quiet life with his wife of fifty years.

Bailey recently retired as a cabinet-maker, a trade he learned as a boy and resumed while in prison. In 1964, he was paroled and moved to this southwestern Missouri city.

Not long after, Bailey met J. Evetts Haley, a writer and historian. Now Haley, fascinated by Bailey's life, has written a book about it, Robbing Banks Was My Business.

Bailey says he decided to tell his life story to Haley because he wanted to say that crime doesn't pay. "I hope my story may be a warning to young Americans who may be tempted."

Bailey says he was tempted as a young man.

"I began as a bootlegger," he says. "It was easy money. But then I graduated to banks. There was more money in robbing banks. I robbed about two banks a year during the 12 years I was in that business."

Bailey talks freely about working with such desperadoes as Machine-gun Kelly, Alvin Karpis, Frank Nash, Fred Burke and Pretty Boy Floyd.

"I knew them all, and I worked with them," he said, adding, "Al Capone was one of the best boys you ever met. I knew him at Alcatraz. He worked with me for three years. I watched over him because some of the punks wanted to stick a knife in him."

Of Floyd, Bailey recalled, "He was a thief, but there was honor among thieves then."

Bailey said that in 1924, when a serious drought hit the Cookson Hills in Oklahoma, he and Floyd broke into a grocery store, loaded a pickup truck with groceries and distributed them to the "poor Cherokees and other folks" in the hills.

"They were starvin' to death until we helped them," said Bailey.

Bailey was finally sent to prison in the early 1930s. It was, he says, "on a bum beef."

He was sentenced to life imprisonment for conspiracy and kidnapping in the famous case of Charles Urschel, wealthy Oklahoma oilman.

Bailey says he was captured with $650 of the ransom money. Machine-gun Kelly, who had directed the kidnapping, had repaid a loan and Bailey was unaware that the money was part of the Urschel ransom.

THAT FOUR LETTER WORD

HOME — means everything to the happy family. To have the fullest meaning it must be your own. There is no security in rented accommodation. Let us show you one of our models now nearing completion on Dunnet Boulevard. This house with attached garage has 3 bedroom living room, large kitchen with ample eating area for the average family and 3 bedrooms. Basement divided for future rec room.

A BAD FOUR LETTER WORD

MOVE — can you tell when circumstances on the part of your landlord will force him to utter this ominous word? When it happens it's not much fun. Preclude this happening with a home of your own. Why should your children have their schooling disrupted because your landlord can no longer look after your accommodation. For their sake have the foresight to own your own. For as little as $1,500.00 down we can offer a bedroom townhouse accommodation that is your very own. We have a model suite to show you.

THE BEST FOUR LETTER WORD

OURS — not only is it pleasing to the ear but it is pleasing to the pocket. Once your payments are set they fluctuate very little for the term of the mortgage, not so with rent! It continues to climb and what is worse it leaves no equity for your family to look to in the years ahead. There is no way to accumulate money quicker than in owning a house. We have a model in West Belleville the plan of which we built last year in the east end and has recently resold with a $13,000.00 profit. Who is to say it won't happen again. Health Protection Chief Is Wary but Philosophical OTTAWA (CP) — Worried about the pesticides, mercury, arsenic additives, herbicides, phosphates, lead and hormones in our food, drugs, air and water? Take the advice of a man who checks the ntake pile.

"We have to be philosophical" about these potential poisons, advises Dr. A. B. Morrison, 42-year-old director of the federal health protection branch, an agency charged with keeping track of these elements, chemicals and compounds out of our blood streams.

Philosophical, yes. But dilgent and wary too. Lives hang in the balance. Dr. Morrison won't let you forget that.

"Don't take seriously all the scare stories you read," he said in an interview. "Some are taken out of context and many are not even true."

Dr. Morrison's countrywide network of researchers, doctors, inspectors, nutritionists and laboratories has a $42-million annual budget to inspect food, evaluate drugs, monitor air and water, investigate diseases, analyse fluids from cosmetics and check medical and radiation devices.

Some may look upon this as Big Brother government interference in the market place.

But experts claim the Romans fell, in part, when because lead poisoning from the vessels and containers of the period played havoc with the Romans' brains, Dr. Morrison noted.

A health branch back in those days might have kept the empire flourishing.

The agency has come a long way since 1873, when Canada passed a law to stop the adulteration of liquor. Four analysts were hired to enforce it.

Indignation over people who would tamper with good spirits was the motivation, not health safety.

Now a multiplicity of federal, provincial and municipal laws governs the manufacture and sale of food and drugs.

Much of the information on which the legislation is based came from the laboratories of the federal health protection branch, formed in 1972 from the food and drug directorate, the environmental health directorate and the occupational disease centre.

It is the potential consequence of miscalculation that makes Dr. Morrison's job so demanding. He hasn't forgotten the Quebec beer scare of 1966.

Some heavy beer drinkers died of heart failure because a brewer was adding large amounts of cobalt salts to the beer to make the foamy head look longer.

The cobalt additive, which had been approved by the food and drug directorate, was quickly withdrawn. The directorate had not foreseen that some men would drink as many as three cases of beer a day.

"We try to anticipate all dangers," said Dr. Morrison.

His rule of anticipation now includes cosmetics. All cosmetic makers have been requested to divulge their potential ingredients to Dr. Morrison's department. If a substance is found to be hazardous, recall of the cosmetics involved will be faster.

The branch had its nose tweaked in October when the Calgary Herald reported it clearly charged that isoprenaline, used by asthmatics in spray inhalers, is a potential killer.

The drug, sold without prescription, was blamed for the deaths of 2,500 asthmatics in drugs sold in Britain.

Dr. Morrison said health protection branch officials recommended in July that the sale of isoprenaline and the related drug orciprenaline be restricted to prescription. Four deaths in Canada have been related to the two drugs, which Dr. Morrison said are only one-fifth as strong as the drugs sel in Britain.

However, the government has not yet acted on the recommendations.

As Dr. Morrison is aware, the branch's most important role may not be preventing a few from being poisoned, but its extensive knowledge of thousands, if not millions.

The trick is to make people more inclined to exercise moderation to eat well.

The first volume of the branch's Nutrition Canada report, published early in November, says Canadians are overweight, not necessarily because they eat too much but because they exercise too little.

The branch has been roundly criticized in the past for its refusal to make public all the health hazards it uncovers. It decided to make the information public beginning in December, 1972.

"We think the public has a right to know," Dr. Morrison said of the policy change. The branch has always notified the public in dangerous situations calling for quick action, such as a canned mushrooms recall last July.

Until now the branch, concerned about possible legal actions against it, did not reveal the names of manufacturers who unwittingly put dangerous products on sale.

Home for Christmas

Bob Hope, who for the first time in 29 years will not make his annual Christmas tour to entertain servicemen overseas, show off his gold driver that he has taken with him on every one of his trips, in the backyard of his home in Los Angeles. They'll have to strap me down about Dec. 15," says Hope. (AP Wirephoto)

Showbiz Shorts

TORONTO (CP) — Brita Lightfoot, whose husband Gordon is one of Canada's top folk entertainers, was granted a divorce decree Friday, custody of their two children and $4,500 a month for her and their maintenance.

Mr. Justice Frank Donnelly also awarded Mrs. Lightfoot, 36, $150,000 to enable her to establish a home for herself when she and the children, Francis, 9, and Ingrid, 7, are required to leave their house here.

Mr. Justice Donnelly said Mrs. Lightfoot came to Canada from Sweden in 1961 to study English and met her husband while living in the same rooming house.

They were married in Stockholm in 1963.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (Reuter) — A superior court judge ordered actor David Janssen, 41, Sunday to pay $35,635 in back alimony to his former wife, Ellie, 32.

But Judge Richard Wells cut Janssen's monthly alimony payments to $2,200 from $3,750 after Janssen pleaded movies were not paying as much as they used to.

Janssen, star of the television series The Fugitive, and his wife, a former model, were divorced in 1968 in a bitter court battle in which she claimed he showered expensive gifts on actress Rosemary Forsyth.

NEW YORK (AP) — Marian Young Taylor, 68, known to the New York Metropolitan Opera audience as Martha Deane, died of cancer Sunday in her Manhattan apartment. Mrs. Taylor took over the Martha Deane Show on WOR radio in 1941 and conducted some 8,000 interviews on the air. Her guests included such notables as Dwight D. Eisenhower and Eleanor Roosevelt.

Film Phobia

LONDON (CP) — Two doctors who studied audience reactions among colleagues to the much-criticized movies A Clockwork Orange and Soldier Blue found that revulsion, not stimulation, was the major reaction to scenes of violence. The doctors, who published their findings in the British Medical Journal, monitored heartbeats and found they slowed in the same irregular fashion that occurs when someone sees a gory highway accident.

Try the Other Ear

LONDON (CP) — From a new book, called Salt, by Herbert Gold: "Once, in the dark dead hye and bye, he had held her ear in his mouth. Gone, gone it was now. All gone."

Still Travelling

WISBECH, England (CP) — James Chapman, 102, took his maiden flight in a glider at 1,000 feet recently. He said the experience was marvellous. He has driven a combine harvester and flown in a Tiger Moth aircraft and a hot air balloon since his 100th birthday.

MILEAGE ADDED

TOKYO (AP) — Hainan, the largest island in southeastern China, has 10 times more road mileage than it did when the Communists took power in 1949, Peking's official Hsinhua news agency reported.

Liz, Dick Reconciled

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Richard Burton wheeled Elizabeth Taylor onto a jet bound for Europe Sunday, ending their separation of five months.

Miss Taylor, recuperating from surgery Nov. 30, wore a smile and a new diamond necklace — a gift from Burton — as the 43-year-old Welsh actor pushed her wheelchair through a crowd of about 150 reporters, photographers and onlookers at Los Angeles International Airport.

The couple paused briefly for photographs but did not speak. A spokesman for the pair said later that Miss Taylor was feeling some pain and that Burton was tense.

"His basic intent was to visit her while she was ill," said a spokesman for the couple in Los Angeles. "But after they got together they decided to work out a reconciliation. The decision to leave was a spur-of-the-moment thing. They are very excited and happy about it."

The unexpected reconciliation followed Burton's arrival here Friday night. Miss Taylor was at UCLA medical center recovering from surgery to remove an ovarian cyst and to clear up a stomach infection.

Their flight was to land in London, where the Burtons were to be met by their private jet and wished to Naples. Burton is making a movie in Naples, a spokesman in New York said. A nurse accompanied the 41-year-old actress.

Friends of the actress were predicting last Friday that Miss Taylor would marry a Dutchborn, former used car salesman, Henry Wynberg of Los Angeles. The had been constant companions in recent months.

The Burtons separated last July 3. Miss Taylor explaining that "maybe we have loved each other too much." Burton said later, "There's no question about our mutual love and devotion for each other."

There was a tearful re-union in Rome two weeks later, but it didn't last. A spokesman for the actress announced in New York July 31 that the Burtons were seeking a friendly divorce in Switzerland.

They were married March 15, 1964, in Montreal after a romance that began on the set of the movie Cleopatra. At the time both were married, she to singer Eddie Fisher, her fourth husband, and Burton to his English wife, Sybil.

The marriage has been stormy. Elizabeth once punched him in the nose at a Hollywood discotheque, then joined him at the bar for a drink.

"We fight a great deal," Burton once said, "and we watch turners reported.

Monday, Dec. 10

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Aries (March 21-April 19) Something will happen today. It will alter your point of view on an important matter. It will be difficult to stick by your new decision.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Before you have someone perform some work or service for you, check several sources. Act impulsively and you'll pay more than you should.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) You get along with people better during the day. Toward later afternoon patience. Don't schedule anything for then.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) Don't discuss confidential family matters too freely. A prying friend will tell of the skeletons in your closet.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) Evaluate new projects considered today: from the standpoint of added obligations. Know what you're getting into.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Don't be overly generous in lending money or possessions to one you don't know, too well at this time.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Try not to be indecisive regarding important issues. If you are one of stronger will is going to do your thinking for you!

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) More responsibility will fall on your shoulders today than the other guy's. In an area where you share a joint interest.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) A friend that you have quite a bit of faith in is likely to be a source of disappointment for you.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your problems at work will get more frustrating as the day wears on. Unwise moves are backs: then you won't be caught off guard.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) It's not a day to treat responsibilities lightly. If you think you can, you'll later learn you used poor judgment.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) Be a little more security-minded about your possessions than usual. Don't deal with those you can't trust completely.

Aries (March 21-April 19) Give matters that relate to your family priority over all other interest today. They need you more than outsiders do.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Someone with whom you have a strong sentimental attachment expects to hear from you. It disappoints her when you don't stay in touch.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) You'll have a chance to add to your possessions today. Stay alert to prospects. Look for a bargain in something you want.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) Do not b a follower if you want things done. Take the initiative! Once you do, others will move as you direct.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) You definitely need some time to yourself today. Efforts to get involved with others they're likely to put you in a bad mood.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Share today with friends who operate on your emotional level. Insensitive individuals won't understand you at this time.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) How you conduct yourself is very important today. There is someone you can impress favorably who'll help you later.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You're very sensitive in knowing what others are thinking without having them express it. Treat them as your instincts direct.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Today your actions will be based on your deeper feelings, rather than your intellect. This is fine if it doesn't make you moody.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Over the next few days don't make any major change unless absolutely sure of its benefits. You could decide unwisely.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) This is a good time to catch up on your work while you have a slight breather. It's important. Stay abreast of your tasks.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) It's a good day to entertain, either with a luncheon or a small, intimate dinner. Instinctively, you'll know how to please guests.

Acupuncture

TORONTO (CP) — Acupuncture should be a priority item in Canadian medical research, Dr. Gustave Gingras, president of the Canadian Medical Association, said recently. The Montreal physician said major research and controlled clinical trials should be conducted with this Chinese method of anesthetizing patients by manipulating needles in various nerves.

Experts describe proper play

By Oswald and James Jacoby

Oswald: One of the disadvantages of being an expert is that people don't expect you to make mistakes.

Jim: "Beginners make mistakes. Average players make mistakes. So do experts, but they make fewer mistakes than others.

Oswald: "Today's South grabbed the spade lead; cashed his ace and king of trumps and proceeded to lose the diamond finesse. East led back a spade and South wound up losing two spades in addition to the king of diamonds and the queen of trumps.

Jim: "It is easy to see that South wasn't an expert. An expert would let West hold the first trick. He would win the way the actual South did but when East got in he would not have a spade to lead to his partner and eventually South would get to discard one losing spade on a diamond.

Oswald: "South" explained that he took the first spade because he was afraid that if he ducked the second spade would be ruffed. This was a possibility but one that should have been ignored because if the second spade would be ruffed with what would have been a legitimate trump trick later."

Hemorrhoids Out But Trouble Back

By G.C. THOSTESON, MD.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I had hemorrhoids removed 10 years ago, and they're back today. How recently. My stool is small and sometimes is painful.

Someone said I could have fissures. What is the difference between fissures and hemorrhoids? What could be done for them and what does the doctor operate? Would they have to look inside with that lighted tube?

A rectal fissure is a split in the membrane. It can be painful. It can cause infected and cause bleeding. So fissures are a possible solution of your trouble, but not the only one.

Adhesions are scar tissue. This usually forms after surgery. In the operation, not 10 years ago, although I can't arbitrarily rule out adhesions as being at the root of your trouble.

In either case, you need to be examined with "that lighted tube" to find out with certainty what the trouble is.

If a fissure is present, an operation usually is necessary, also the trouble will recur and become worse.

If the answer is adhesions, dilation may be all that is necessary. But it is essential that you find out what is wrong.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband goes for about a month without touching a drop of liquor and then he gets drunk. He says afterward that he is ashamed of himself and wished he hadn't done it.

He said he can't help it, he only intends to drink one or two but when he gets started he can't stop. Is there anything medically wrong with him? He seems to think so.

He is not a kid; he is 35. He used to drink almost every day when he was younger, so I don't know how much longer our marriage can stand without some advice.—A.R.

If once-a-month binges are putting that much strain on the family ties, they must be rigorously, and you (and he) need help.

Pitstaff, there's doubtless nothing medically wrong with him that isn't wrong with any alcoholic.

You question the word alcoholism. The term alcoholics Anonymous? AA is familiar with people just like him. They'll understand him, if he'll give them a chance.

You could urge him to go to AA, so don't try. He'll have to go by himself. But I strongly recommend that you get in touch with Al-Anon, a companion group of relatives of problem slaves. If you can't find Al-Anon in your phone book, look up the AA number, and they'll put you in touch. (Hint to hubby: any AA member will tell you that the first drink is the one that gets you started. So avoid it.)

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I wonder if you could tell me why I have this urge to eat raw potatoes. I have eaten four or five a day for about eight months. No one has ever heard of this. I hope you have.—Mrs. T.A.S.

Don't know as I've ever heard of anyone with that strong a craving for potatoes, but I know of quite a few people who have learned that raw potato is quite tasty. A good source of minerals and some vitamins, raw is a handy snack for overweight folks who want something to nibble that won't add too many calories.

Plain potato isn't especially high in calories. It's the stuff people put on potatoes that adds pounds—butter, gravy, or whatever goes into fried potatoes. (Including potato chips and, of course, french fries.)

Better Land Use Hard to Achieve

OTTAWA (CP) — Encouraging better land use is somewhat like getting a stubborn donkey to move: You can beat it, coax it with a carrot or just leave it alone.

Some thinkers suggest that widespread public ownership is the only way to ensure that land is properly used.

Others say governments can encourage good land use through tax incentives and other guides. And private interests are arguing that they can do a good job if left unhampered by government red tape.

Even when you find the technical key to better land management you aren't guaranteed results. That's because there are three levels of government—federal, provincial and municipal—each with some say in how land is used.

Clearly, an important element in land planning is a method of co-ordinating federal, provincial and municipal efforts. The federal urban affairs department is showing considerable interest in this aspect.

More and more voices are clamoring for controls on land development. They fear private development may damage agriculture and the environment without careful guides.

Some, like economist Douglas Fullerton, suggest that large-scale public ownership is the best way of managing land.

Mr. Fullerton, former chairman of the National Capital Commission, said in a Halifax speech in November, 1972, that "governments must be involved in the allocation of this scarce resource, much as they cope with monopolies now."

The present system of private ownership is "manifestly immoral, unjust and unfair to society," Mr. Fullerton said. Land speculators were in a position to make huge profits at the expense of society.

Planning was a municipal responsibility and was therefore open to manipulation by wealthy developers who provided election campaign funds for municipal leaders. He supported giant government landbanking projects to help lower housing costs.

Mr. Fullerton said he would like all land, except for that of individual homeowners and family farms, in public hands.

But, W. T. Perks, a University of Calgary professor, criticized Mr. Fullerton's approach at a recent Ottawa conference on public lands.

He described Mr. Fullerton's public ownership proposal as a "sincere, well-meaning attempt of the bureaucratic mind to extricate society from its different kinds of its frustrations over urbanization."

Prof. Perks said increasing public ownership of land may only be "an intensification of the contest between public-bureaucratic power and the power of the private-property industry."

This could be more damaging than helpful for city development. More energy and money could be spent simply expanding cities that are already growing too fast.

He proposes, instead, that local government and private interests work together to develop a common approach to land management.

Agriculture Minister Eugene Whalen suggested in a recent speech in Hamilton, Ont., that local government planning and zoning should extend "as far as the reach of the speculator, and should go in advance of speculation." Cities should plan ahead to retain certain areas for agriculture, he said.

Tax incentives have been suggested as a way of spurring developers to develop land quickly rather than retaining it in hopes of bigger profits later. Tax benefits have also been proposed as a way of ensuring that farm land is used for agriculture rather than housing developments.

Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford said a recent federal-provincial-municipal conference in Edmonton that tax policies for land development should be examined by officials at all levels.

The federal cabinet is understood to be examining certain tax measures which could affect land development.

Norman Pearson, political science professor at University of Western Ontario, suggested at the Ottawa public lands conference that probably a mixture of public and private ownership and government guides will be the best way of controlling land use.

Ontario and Alberta have taken steps to establish regional growth plans and British Columbia has set up a land commission to oversee land development.

Dr. E. G. Pleva, geography professor at University of Western Ontario, told the land conference that Ontario has wisely encouraged local and regional governments to prepare official plans. But the province should establish its own province-wide plan.

William Lane, chairman of the B.C. Land Commission, said in a recent speech in Windsor, Ont., that experts now believe planning can no longer be left entirely in the hands of local councils. More planning authority should be placed in the hands of senior governments, which have broader responsibilities.

The federal government has been pushing the provinces to create these broad plans. Mr. Basford told the recent tri-level conference in Edmonton that he recognizes provincial responsibility for land management.

"I do believe, however, that federal policies and programs can be meshed with and support those of provinces only if provincially-developed regional plans and regional growth strategies do in fact exist."

The minister suggested in an interview that the federal government may have to insist that federal land assembly and sewage support programs be undertaken only in connection with provincial plans.

The current interest in land management is unlikely to abate. It is closely related to growing problems such as increasing population, pollution and food production. It is linked to planning future human settlement of the globe.

Ottawa considers the human settlement problem so important that it has offered to hold a world conference on the issue in Vancouver in 1976.

Pierre's Tale Told At Zolfian Gallop

By ARCH MacKENZIE
Canadian Press Staff-Writer

Dance of the Dialectic is a splendor volume pursuing in a highly selective fashion the perils of Pierre Elliott Trudeau from the election of 1968 to the sober realities of minority government.

The views are those of broadcast journalist Larry Zolf, veteran of the giddy world of the late CBC program This Hour has Seven Days, and they reflect his TV jerks approach to the Ottawa realm of politics and the press.

They come at the usual Zolfian gallop, thick with good and bad one-liners designed to display, the author's conclusions of how and why the news industry played a role in the Trudeau period.

The whole 117-page book is based on the political reality, far from new, that relations between a newly-elected government and the news representatives almost inevitably begin to decay from the first day.

Some erode faster than others, says the record for prime ministers and presidents.

Also implicit in the Zolf recital is the truism that majority government can be dull government—certainly duller than the minority Liberal governments of 1963-68 preceding that affected the politicians, press and public.

One of the best things is the Zolf analysis of the Parliamentary Press Gallery's class structure.

There are the "Illuminati" subdivided into four groups—Pundit-in, favorable to Trudeau and perhaps more serious about their work than the public is about theirs; the Pundit-out, unfavorable to Trudeau, the Radical Chicci or journalist activists and the Bandini who are older, small-c conservative and tend to the cynical.

The other main class is the "Paparazzi" or peasant reporters who include virtually all broadcasters, all wire service employees and "all workaday print journalists who print only the facts and just the facts, man."

This insider's view of events and personalities comes from a self-styled "jaded observer" from North Winnipeg—as he is prone to advise any stranger exposed to him longer than five seconds—and a man as large of nose, hair-do and girth as he is fervid of heart.

Zolf nowhere in the book has a really nasty word to say about anybody, including the prime minister.

But, as in any such inside reporting, his book runs the risk of creating some jaded

Snooker Is Taught In School

OTTAWA (CP) — Almost 200 Ottawa students are learning to play snooker on high school time. They are being taught by Rene Aubry, a veteran pool player.

It started when the Broken Cue billiard parlor suggested the idea of a snooker course to Ottawa senior public and secondary schools.

Five schools responded favorably and students from all five attend weekly "study" sessions at Broken Cue parlors. For a $5 fee they receive eight two-hour lessons, instruction books and free entry in the annual Ottawa snooker championship.

Broken Cue's Ervin Budge says the idea behind the course is to improve the public's image of the game. He says student response to the course has been good.

"None has missed a class yet," he said. "The only problem is that most of the students playing for the first time want to get out and attack the able. They tend to forget the theory behind the instruction and just play to have fun."

Aubry agrees. He says most beginners hit the ball too hard. And after 51 years of pool, the 67-year-old instructor should know. Since his father taught him to play English billiards at 16 he has become one of Canada's most highly regarded players.

Last year he recorded the first perfect game of snooker in the Ottawa area.

In his course he tries to emphasize the proper stance and technique for hitting the ball straight.

"If they can be shown the basics at a tender age they will become better players," he says. "When you watch younger players you can see where some of the mechanics of their game are lacking and suggest to them what to do."

What Canadian billiards needs is a central body to organize players and run tournaments, he believes.

"Competition is what makes you better and if you're good at a sport you'll want to play it more."

One thing that has surprised the Broken Cue staff is the enthusiasm some of the high school teachers have shown for the instruction. One group of students even brought their parents to show them what was going on.

Some Here In Canada By Chance

OTTAWA (CP) — Not everyone who has registered under the government's new landed-immigrant amnesty plan is here out of choice. Some of the more than 49,000 who signed have adopted Canada purely by accident.

Brazilian-born Leah Wanat is just one of these cases. The attractive 26-year-old's first glimpse of this country in 1969 was the result of some misguided information passed on to her by an American official in Brazil.

Miss Wanat, planning to marry an American, consulted the United States embassy in Rio de Janeiro to find out how to get a U.S. visa. She was advised to go to Canada, then simply cross the border and marry her Boston fiance.

"They won't throw you out once you're married," she was told.

Following his direction, she did just that. This costly advice not only ended her marriage, but also prevented her from becoming a landed Canadian immigrant.

After the wedding Leah Wanat went unsuspectingly to the U.S. immigration office in Boston to formalize her American citizenship. To her shock, she said, she was informed by an immigration officer that not only was it impossible for her to become an American citizen, but she had exactly 48 hours to leave the country.

On her second arrival at Montreal, Leah took a fresh look at this country and decided to make it her home. By April, 1972, she had been here three years working for the Brazilian embassy and taking theatre and television courses at McGill University.

Fearing she would be deported as an illegal immigrant, Miss Wanat decided to get her status cleared up.

A Canadian immigration officer told her first to get a divorce from her American husband, who had refused to legalize her entry into the U.S. and had kept her dowry, and then to re-enter Canada with a clean slate so that a new immigration file could be opened.

Before leaving for the U.S. last summer, as this official advised, Leah Wanat went to thank him for his help. To her surprise, she was told she could register until Oct. 15 under the government's amnesty plan, which covered all persons who had entered Canada illegally up to Nov. 30, 1972.

Separatism Worrying Gandhi

BOMBAY (CP) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi may be heading for a showdown with the government of the southern province of Tamil Nadu, which she has accused of encouraging separatist forces.

Addressing a news conference in Orissa province in north India, Mrs. Gandhi said Tamil Nadu Chief Minister Muthuvel Karunanidhi is giving indirect support to Ramaswami Naicker, a politician who wants Tamil Nadu to become a "fully sovereign country."

This is the first time she has categorically identified the Tamil Nadu ruling party with secessionists.

Sometimes described as the Quebec of India, Tamil Nadu is governed by the Dravida Munnetra Kazhagam (DMK), a Tamil nationalist group which wants more powers for provinces and less for the federal government.

The DMK supported secession from the Indian Union until it achieved power in the 1967 provincial election. Since then, Karunanidhi has said his goal is not secession but "autonomy."

The issue appeared to have been defused by his repeated assurances to Mrs. Gandhi that the DMK position had changed. Only a month ago he described himself as an "ardent champion of national unity" and recent meetings between Karunanidhi and Mrs. Gandhi appeared to be warm ad friendly.

Some columnists believe Mrs. Gandhi's revival of the charge against the DMK reflects federal concern over close ties between Karunanidhi and Naicker, whom he recently praised as a "beacon of inspiration to the Tamil people." One of the chief minister's close aids publicly described Naicker as "our great leader."

There is speculation that the federal Central Bureau of Investigations (CBI) may have evidence of a close relationship between the DMK and the secessionists and it is widely believed in Delhi that some top DMK leaders are working in close collaboration with Naicker.

Karunanidhi heatedly denied Mrs. Gandhi's allegation and put the counter-question: "Is not Mrs. Gandhi's Congress Party working closely with the Communist Party?

Some Congress Party members would like Mrs. Gandhi to invoke her constitutional power to dismiss the Tamil Nadu government for separatist activity. But she appears to be proceeding cautiously.

As one Gandhi supporter put it: "The PM wants to create public opinion in Tamil Nadu itself against the DMK's secessionist tendencies. When this is done, she will confront the DMK on the electoral platform and try to defeat it through the ballot box."

Teachers Can't Quit

Wells Proposes Arbitration Law

TORONTO (CP) — Legislation voiding the mass resignations of almost 8,000 teachers and forcing them and school boards in 17 jurisdictions to binding arbitration was introduced in the legislature Monday by Education Minister Thomas Wells.

The surprise motion, designed to keep 183,324 students in school early next year, got first reading in the legislature by a 74 to 11 count with only the New Democratic Party opposed.

The bill provides for fines of not less than $200 and not more than $500 for each teacher for each day of a strike.

A judge may levy the same fines against school trustees who lock out teachers or refuse to implement the terms of binding arbitration.

In addition to the temporary legislation to handle the present dispute, Mr. Wells also introduced permanent legislation making compulsory arbitration regular law for any future contract impasses between school boards and teachers.

The temporary legislation came as a surprise in view of the fact that only last week Mr. Wells said he was prepared to advise a recall of the legislature if contract disputes weren't resolved and mass resignations closing schools did take effect Jan. 3.

But when introducing the legislation Monday, Mr. Wells said it would be "morally wrong to allow our young people to be victimized" as school shut-d o w n s—with resultant disruption in the education process—just because a school board and its teachers cannot reach agreement on a contract."

Spokesmen for the teachers indicated they might test Mr. Wells' legislation.

C. P. Wilkinson, president of the Ontario Teachers' Federation, said the organization could not see how Mr. Wells could force teachers to withdraw resignations that they had the right to submit.

"OTF policy opposes compulsory arbitration," he said. "This legislation imposes it late in negotiations. We find this suddenly introduced legislation altogether unsatisfactory," he said.

In opposing the legislation, Stephen Lewis, leader of the New Democrats, said it "destroys the collective bargaining process and creates unnecessary acrimony" between teachers and school boards.

"I don't like that kind of an axe over people's heads," Mr. Lewis said.

He blamed the "incredible neglect" of Mr. Wells for the present situation and said the interim legislation was unnecessary since Mr. Wells indicated the legislature, which adjourns this week, could be recalled if the schools were closed in January.

Mr. Wells said one of the basic principles of the legislation is that "the welfare of children must be taken into consideration first and foremost.

"We cannot allow pupils to be used as pawns in negotiations between teachers and school trustees around a bargaining table."

In introducing the legislation, which calls for minimum two-year contracts instead of the one-year terms preferred by many teachers' groups, Mr. Wells said he hopes negotiations within the 17 municipalities will proceed expeditiously to reasonable and successful settlements over the next three weeks."

Snow Is a Joy - - If You Are Young

The city's first snowfall brought with it its share of traffic tie-ups, sore backs from shovelling snow and stalled cars. But for 20-month-old Angela Godbout of Charles Street, yesterday's snow was ideal for building a snowman. So, with a little help from her mother, Cheryl Godbout, Angela produced this snowman.

Food Costs Again Push Index Up

OTTAWA (CP) — Food prices bounded upward again in November and led a quickened rise in living costs on a broad front that also included sharp hikes for clothing, housing and medical care, Statistics Canada reported today.

The over-all increase in living costs was eight-tenths of one per cent and put prices in the past year up 9.3 per cent, continuing the worst inflation since 1951.

"Major contributors to the latest month's advance were higher prices for food, clothing and housing, which increased 1.2 per cent, 1.1 per cent and eight-tenths of one per cent respectively," the report said.

"In addition, the component for health and personal care rose nine-tenths of one per cent," it said.

The November price hikes put the government's consumer price index up to 155.5 on its 1961 base of 100.

The figures mean it took $155.50 per week in November for typical family living expenditures that cost $100 per week a dozen years ago. That was $1.20 per week more than the previous month and $13.20 per week higher than a year ago.

November's stepped-up pace of inflation followed two months in which increases had tapered off to six-tenths of one per cent in September and three-tenths in October after August's steepest monthly increase in 22 years of 1.3 per cent.

The steep November rise in food prices resumed the pattern of sharp hikes that has prevailed in most of 1973 except for October's first drop in grocery prices"in a year—a seven-tenths decline.

Food prices, the major factor in the past year's spiralling living costs, were 18.2 per cent higher than a year ago, the report said.

With one month to go, the country appeared headed for a total 1973 cost-of-living rise approximately double last year's 4.8 per cent hike and approaching the 10.6 per cent rise in 1951.

More Idle, Seasonal Rate Cut

OTTAWA (CP) — The predictable winter working blues began hitting in November again as the actual number of jobless climbed to 468,000—39,000 higher than the total for October, Statistics Canada reported today.

But the seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate, which takes into account normal seasonal factors affecting the labor world, showed a slight improvement, dropping to 5.6 per cent from 5.8 per cent in October.

Both figures showed substantial improvement over the dreary jobless picture of November, 1972. In that month last year there were 524,000 out of work and the seasonal jobless rate hit 6.6 per cent.

There also were more Canadians working than ever before in November. This November 8,629,000 persons were working—about 465,000 more than in the same month in 1972.

Two Fiji Ships Sink

Canada's worry about being left out of dealings between the United States and the eight European NATO members of the Common Market was reflected—but only obliquely—in one paragraph of the communique issued when the conference ended today.

However, NATO Secretary-General Joseph Luns, when asked about Canada's worries, said the U.S. "has no interest whatsoever" in excluding Canada during efforts to resolve newly-developed strains between Washington and the Common Market group.

This remark followed confirmation by State Secretary Henry Kissinger that he would meet with Common Market foreign ministers on a basis that does not include Canada.

The communique reaffirmed the solidarity of the NATO countries and added:

"In this perspective they will continue to maintain the fullest possible exchange of views and information and close consultation and co-operation in a spirit of mutual trust on all problems of common concern."

Permanent representatives of the NATO countries were instructed "to consider the most appropriate means of ensuring the full effectiveness of this consultation," the communique said.

NDPers Back Liberals On PC Energy Motion

OTTAWA (CP) — The price was right for the New Democratic Party Monday night and it saved the country a wintry election.

In a non-confidence test that could have forced an election in snowy February, the New Democrats supported the minority Liberal government to defeat a Conservative motion condemning federal energy policies.

But standing alone at the NDP benches was John Rodriguez (Nickel Belt) who broke normally-solid NDP ranks to vote against the government.

For Other Stories On Energy Motion See Page 6

"I don't trust the bastards," he said of the Liberals who woo New Democratic support last week with a major energy speech by Prime Minister Trudeau. The prime minister's statement covered a string of NDP energy policy demands.

The vote, taken in a noisy and rebarly-packed Commons, was 136 to 107 with only the New Democrats supporting the government. The 102 Conservatives present were joined by 13 Social Credit members, Roch LaSalle and Juliette and Mr. Rodriguez.

Twenty-nine New Democrats and 105 Liberals voted against.

The 18-vote margin was the lowest of 11 confidence tests since Parliament opened in May. The previous low was 25 when Conservatives challenged the government on inflation Jan. 15.

Mr. Stanfield, who opened the non-confidence debate, accused the government of selling out Quebec and the Atlantic provinces by adopting NDP energy policies just to remain in office.

He said the measures announced by Mr. Trudeau guarantee discrimination against eastern Canada until at least 1980. He said the government has set for Canada to become self-sufficient in oil.

Mr. Lewis, saying federal oil policies now are headed in the right direction, accused Mr. Stanfield of serving as the mouthpiece for the oil industry. Since the price of imported oil is set outside Canada, he said, equalizing prices immediately would hit Ontario and western Canadian residents with needless increases.

Energy Minister Donald Macdonald agreed with the NDP leader in his criticism of Mr. Stanfield.

"His system would mean one higher price for everyone."

Teachers' Resistance Is Planned

TORONTO (CP) — The chief negotiator for Ontario separate school teachers outlined today a program of resistance to provincial legislation that would prohibit the mass resignation of 8,000 school teachers.

Donat Knott of the Ontario English Catholic Teachers Association said in a statement the plan calls for:

—a return to work Jan. 3 by 7,000 resigning separate school teachers "to indicate token acceptance" of the bill;

—a walkout the next day—for at least one day—by the teachers in defiance of the legislation;

—a walkout—also for at least one day—by the 16,000 separate school teachers when the legislature reconvenes in January.

—an approach to the Ontario Teachers Federation for sympathy walkouts by the province's 135,000 public teachers; —and an approach to Ontario's civil servants and hospital workers for a general strike against the government.

Bob Cooney, president of the separate teachers' association, said teachers are being advised that they need not feel morally bound by the legislation.

"Teachers will not be bullied by Mr. Wells's heavy-handed and very rash legislation," he said.

Mr. Knott accused Mr. Wells of "using children as pawns to cover up his own inadequacy and inability to bring forward a just collective bargaining legislation."

He said separate school teachers make up more than half of those who submitted their resignations.

U.S. Prediction

6 Per Cent To Be Idle Over Oil

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Herbert Stein, President Nixon's chief economic adviser, predicted today that the United States oil shortage will throw up to six per cent of the work force out of jobs in 1974 and reduce the country's productive output.

There have been some new estimates from the oil industry in recent days, Stein said, which indicate that the shortage might not be as bad as previously presented.

Using data from last week, Stein said that unemployment will rise up to six per cent of the work force. The latest estimates for mid-November show about 4.7 per cent of U.S. workers were without jobs, an increase from 4.5 per cent in October.

BRUSSELS (CP) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said today the NATO ministerial conference recognized the problem of providing effective consultation among member states but did not resolve it.

The problem was not solved this time, Sharp told reporters as he described the meeting of the foreign ministers as "one of the most difficult that I've attended."

Paperboy Assaulted, Probation

A Trenton man, who was convicted on a charge of assault causing bodily harm after he beat up his 14-year-old paperboy, was yesterday given a suspended sentence and was placed on three years' probation when he appeared in provincial court here.

Stephen Wilton Lyons, received the three year probationary term from Judge J. L. Gendenning after his lawyer, Peter Ticktin, told the court that Lyons had been provoked into assault by the boy.

Mr. Ticktin maintained that Lyons' wife had been taunted and insulted by the paperboy after she had told him she was unable to pay him. The boy had stood outside the Lyons' home yelling obscenities at Mrs. Lyons, when her husband lost his temper, chased the boy and beat him, he said.

The paperboy was treated for cuts and bruises at Belleville General Hospital following the beating.

Terms of the probationary order imposed on Lyons include a stipulation that he continue seeing a doctor on a monthly basis in an attempt to cure him of his short temper.

Up to Their Elbows

If Belleville firefighters aren't knee high in toys for the Christmas Sharing Program, then they're elbow high in candies. Ralph Boomhower (from left), Gordon Miller, Keith Brown, Bill Lake and Larry Fritz, men at number one fire hall, emptied 14 50-pound boxes of candies and bagged them during their shift Saturday. One of the 1,000 bags will go into each toy box the firefighters will donate to parents in Belleville that cannot readily afford to give gifts to their children. The firefighters have been collecting and repairing toys for the program for several weeks.

Unit Nomination Meeting Dec. 13

By HOWARD KORNER

Duke of Edinburgh Unit President H. G. Ford and Youth Development Chairman Stan Melbourne representing the sponsors and the officers of the squadron Royal Canadian Air Cadets were in attendance at an area conference of sponsors and squadron officers, held at CFB Trenton on Saturday. Discussion centered on problems concerning administration, training and QM. The session lasted all day and should result in a more efficient operation in the coming training period.

The Duke of Edinburgh 426 Squadron Royal Canadian Air Cadets will be holding their annual mess dinner in the Terrace Lounge on Wednesday evening, December 18.

Thursday, December 12 at 8 p.m. a regular general meeting for all members of the Duke of Edinburgh Unit ANAF will be held in the Terrace Lounge. This meeting is the nomination meeting, and members are urged to attend; to nominate the persons of their choice or to run for office themselves. Many people have a strong initial tendency toward stability, and are urged to keep things as they are. If we aren't careful, this can stifle growth and the status quo can become a permanent fixture. To grow and develop requires some risk taking and some mistake-making. Bad habits which we laid gently have to be discarded. To be original means to be different in some important way, and sometimes it take courage to be different, especially if "getting along" is overvalued. Also fear of ridicule, of what people will think, can outline loss of creativity and the willingness to set challenging objectives.

So in order to grow as never before, we must examine objectively and reflectively where we are and where we are going. To look beyond, to look behind for ways to make our club better. A strong club makes a strong unit. A strong unit is made up of strong members with courage. Will you be there?

It was with deep regret that members of the Duke of Edinburgh Unit learned of the death on December 2 of Alfred Terry Jackson. The funeral service was conducted by the executive members of the Unit on Monday evening. Sincere condolences are extended to members of the family by the president and members of the Unit.

Rod Salter and Gloria Beasley were the Mixed Dart Winners with Vern and Irene Ruttwen as runners up in a well attended contest on Saturday evening. Reg Fullerton took high three darts honors with 125 while Gloria Bentley took high three for the ladies with 116.

Sick comrades in Belleville General Hospital are: Elmer Bonker, QSC and George Low in room 518.

Sam's Sermon: The man who says he is doing as much at 60 as he did at 30 — was'nt doing much at 30.

Turnout Disappoints

In random conversations with Christopher St. residents, participants in the Project Christopher Leadership Weekend learned some Belleville citizens are concerned with the lack of sidewalks in the area.

"The impression I got was that there is a lot of concern with the lack of sidewalks," said John Wilkinson, a resident who was one of five taking part in the weekend. "A lot of people are in favor of them."

Although only five participated in the leadership course, several others dropped in to listen to various sessions conducted by Trustees Wayne Myles and Albert Herdsma conducted. Basically, the three-day period encouraged individual concentration upon the attainment of their own qualities and the exploitation of their own latent potential.

Project Christopher, a movement founded in Montreal in 1965 by Father Brayley for youngsters, aged 15-21, attempts to involve teenagers positively in the life of the community. Weekend sessions, conducted by full-time volunteers who serve without pay, in fact are intended as catalytic encounters with a community's ability in order to inspire them with the possibilities of constructive action.

Conversations with citizens are intended to gauge community needs, before any possible action is taken.

Albert Hall, one of those disappointed in the turnout at George's Vanier school, saying during some weekends, over 120 teenagers have been in attendance, thought he be admitted it may have been too early Christmas to be expect greater numbers.

"As for kids wanted to come, but they were either involved in school activities, and didn't have time, or had to work to get money for Christmas," he said.

"This was the last weekend you can squeak into a year. The next months to hold a weekend are October and November. Then it's time to get involved deeply in other activities.

During the evaluation session Sunday, the participants suggested their own version of the weekend, generally saying it was beneficial. Questions were raised, within themselves, that they had not encountered previously.

Woman Is New Chairman Of Prince Edward Schools

BLOOMFIELD — Mrs. Ruth Hart, Picton school trustee, has been unanimously elected chairman of the Prince Edward County board of education for 1974. She has served as vice-chairman this year and will now succeed Hillier trustee Clare McFaul.

New vice-chairman by acclamation is Bloomfield-Hallowell board member Douglas Caley.

Two other trustees, Jerald Anderson and Harmon Monkgomery, both of Ameliasburgh, were nominated for the office but declined because of business pressures.

Present board chairman Clare McFaul last night spoke briefly of his term of office during a board meeting. He observed that the past year had been a relatively easy one for him in comparison with the challenges faced by other chairmen in the formative years of the board.

Mr. McFaul thanked his committees and committee chairmen and noted they "have done their job with dedication and a lot of thought."

The retiring chairman said that teamwork is the key to an efficient board and offered congratulations to the principals of Prince Edward's schools.

Tourist Resort Owner Is Critical of Plan

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — The Prince Edward draft official plan is too negative in its approach to tourism here, according to several county residents.

President North Marysburgh tourist operator William Smith has declared the plan was "very derogatory" in its remarks concerning the value of his industry to the local economy.

The comment came as the draft was up for discussion publicly for the first time Friday.

At the same meeting county planner Riazuddin Ahmed remarked that tourist establishments are not atrocities enough for "the big ex spenders". He said that tourists who visit Prince Edward come to enjoy its relaxed atmosphere and natural attractions.

Mr. Smith replied that "monied people" do holiday in the county and argued that the tourist industry gives wider employment than it.

Objects to Bill

TRENTON — Acme Plumbing and Heating have protested a town bill for replacement of storm and sanitary sewers which the company says is double the original estimate.

V. Trudeau, Acme representative queried the matter with council Monday. In an earlier telephone conversation the price quoted was $1,270 he said. When he received the bill it was more than $2,500.

Council, in previous meetings, has been critical of the public works department for giving estimates over the telephone.

Councillor George Greer, acting mayor, said the matter would be dealt with once more in a committee-of-the-whole session. Mr. Trudeau would be contacted by mail with council's decision.

Arie Hoornweg, acting commissioner of works, explained bedrock and circumstances led to the inflated price.

gures in the draft plan indicate.

The plan states there are now 78 tourist establishments in Prince Edward with a combined capacity for 2,628 guests. A total of 317 jobs is provided, only 125 of which are permanent. The remaining 192 jobs are seasonal and wages for them are in the minimal bracket of $1.85 to $1.75 an hour.

Mr. Smith objected to a statement in the plan that refers to the income derived by tourism as "insignificant."

The planner, Mr. Ahmed, commented that the statement is a comparative one. It notes: "When compared to economic sectors like manufacturing, agriculture and services, the contribution of tourism as a source of employment and income, dwindles to insignificance."

The plan also states, "the estimates of the dollar spent by the tourists while in the county is calculated to be around $2.8 million. This estimate is based on the 1973 rates of rents for different types of tourist lodgings and the occupancy rates. The period includes the peak season of July-August."

Several persons at the meeting agreed that the plan should take a more positive approach toward tourism and possibly outline methods to upgrade it.

Others suggested that since the tourists are not spending much money in the county it seem illogical to develop further park and recreation lands for them.

Need More Music

BLOOMFIELD— The need for a more intensive music program in Prince Edward County schools was stressed Monday night during a meeting of the county board of education.

Education director John McNeil stated that he feels the board should use every opportunity to encourage more musical talent in the schools.

Ameliasburgh trustee George Flower, a supporter of increased music education, asked if additional music instruction might interfere with the regular curriculum.

He was told by Mr. McNeil that, in his opinion, there would be no conflict. The education director added that persons talented in music and with the ability to teach other classes would be involved.

Board chairman Clare McFaul praised the interest shown by Wellington Consolidated School in forming a band and said that the school would feed a nucleus of musically accomplished students to the secondary school level.

Mr. Flower remarked: "We are not going to find a miracle overnight. But I feel that music is something that children should be exposed to very young and daily."

Provincial Act Pending

Tax Break Move Withdrawn

TRENTON — A notice of motion to give senior citizens a break on school taxes has been tabled in town council until the new year.

Councillor John Boon, initiator of the proposal, withdrew it last night explaining new information was available.

Councillor Boon, two week ago described his motion designed to reduce taxes by $100 for those persons over 65 and living on a set income.

The motion, if accepted for the town, at present would require authorization in the provincial legislature through a private member's bill — a time-consuming affair.

Councillor Boon, in withdrawing his motion, said enabling provincial legislation had received first and second readings. Final reading is expected soon. This legislation would allow communities to pass bylaws at their discretion concerning tax breaks for senior citizens.

The legislation slightly differs from Councillor Boon's proposal in that recipients must be "needy and unaffluent" to receive the Guaranteed Income Supplement to the Old Age Pension.

Councillor Boon said he was prepared to wait until the first open session of council in January to deal with the motion. Council accepted the recommendation.

$23,000 Voted for Greenbelt

TRENTON — Town council last night gave approval for debenturing of $23,000 — the towns responsibility in green belt development undertaken by the Trent River Conservation Authority.

Council last January at budget time had allowed, for debentures to reach $30,000. But, when surpluses became available, $23,000 was put against the green belt debt, saving 10 years interest on payments.

With last night's approval of $23,000 to be repaid over 10 years — providing Ontario Municipal Board approval is forthcoming — council is well within the $30,000 forecast.

Several properties were obtained by the authority during the course of the year costing a total of about $70,000. All municipalities affected by the authority contribute to its operation.

Season's Greetings

Santa's latest call in the Quinte district included this Monday night during a meeting of the county board of education.

Education director John McNeil stated that he feels the board should use every opportunity to encourage more musical talent in the schools.

Ameliasburgh trustee George Flower, a supporter of increased music education, asked if additional music instruction might interfere with the regular curriculum.

He was told by Mr. McNeil that, in his opinion, there would be no conflict. The education director added that persons talented in music and with the ability to teach other classes would be involved.

Board chairman Clare McFaul praised the interest shown by Wellington Consolidated School in forming a band and said that the school would feed a nucleus of musically accomplished students to the secondary school level.

Mr. Flower remarked: "We are not going to find a miracle overnight. But I feel that music is something that children should be exposed to very young and daily."

Groundwork for Marina

TRENTON — The consulting firm of Johnson and Sustronk have been retained to process all paper work needed in developing a marina facility for Trenton's Centennial Park.

Council approved a $1,500 fee and have instructed the firm to submit an application to the federal government for grants and subsidies, though it is not expected these will be available until the next federal budget in 1975. Budgets for next year have already been set according to an earlier meeting with consultants.

Only one councillor opposed the motion. Councillor Ed Todd said there are other priorities in the community, men'oned street construction programs and the financing of sewage treatment facilities.

"We're only helping out 25 or so individuals in the town that have boats," he said.

In earlier meetings the greatest benefit to Trenton was said to be increased tourist revenue.

Cheshire Aid

TRENTON — Town council last night was asked to pick up some of the deficit facing Belleville's Cheshire Home.

Wilf Wilkinson, appearing before council on behalf of the home for handicapped adults, said setbacks in home development had caused a deficit of some $4,000. Because the home was available to the area it is hoped local municipal councils would participate in financial aid.

He said he had an "unofficial indication" from Belleville that council would help in the "one-shot financial request.

Acting mayor Councillor George Greer said he would take the matter up at a meeting of area councils later this week.

Senior Citizens Get Grants

TWEED—This village's senior citizens' club has received $4,000 from the federal government for a project providing toys and equipment for local day-care centres.

The grant was awarded under the New Horizons Program.

The project, called Broader Horizons, will involve 260 people.

Marmora senior citizens group has received a $4,800 grant for a daily drop-in centre. Recreation and craft facilities are planned for the centre along with a special movie series for children.

Inspector Quits

TWEED—This village is to seek agreement with Hastings County administration for services of a plumbing and building inspector.

The move followed the recent resignation of Harold Long as village building inspector.

The same meeting of council also approved a salary increase for Constable Barry Wallace.

REAL ESTATE:

CRUISING IS NOT ENOUGH

When you consider buying a house in a new locality, you will want to know as much about the town and neighborhood as possible. Much of this information you can get from a veritable gold mine of area, but there are important factors which the eye cannot see.

For example, local property taxes, public services, public transportation, hospitals, community facilities. What are the zoning restrictions? Are there any unusual deed restrictions common to the area on how you might use, alter or expand your property. What are the future prospects for the neighborhood?

A good local realtor can be a fund of such information. He should have a feeling of familiarity for the specific neighborhoods in his territory. Level with him at the outset about what you want and he will do his darndest to help you find it. That's what he is there for.

The Human Touch

How well are you motivated? As an employee . . . or as an employer? And how agreeable and efficient is the interaction between the two?

To judge from the attention Belleville service clubs and the business community at large has been receiving from professional people in this sphere of public relations we should have one of the most progressive and well-balanced work forces around.

The city has had at least a couple of such visitations, the last in recent days when a Kiwanis-sponsored seminar was given advice on how business and personal life could be made more productive and meaningful. One such means: by becoming more goal-oriented and not just task-oriented. In other words, look to the short or long term goal as a satisfying work ethic.

Robert Proctor, one of the visiting speakers, echoed the words of many a philosopher over the centuries when he said that man "is a frightened wanderer."

Wasn't it Thoreau who said "most men lead lives of quiet desperation?" And Matthew Arnold who spoke of a "darkling plain" where "ignorant armies clash by night." and St. Vincent Benet who wrote: "There is a wilderness we walk alone . . . howevel well-companioned. . ."

The Scriptures, recognize the same mood of alienation: "For to I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." And again: "Be of good cheer for I have overcome the world. . ."

In our supposedly closely-knit world then — whether at the individual or corporate or institutional level — we are in effect treading that "darkling plain."

At the work level, despite the most sophisticated technical equipment — computers and the like increasing de-personalization that goes with them — we are producing, not a more efficient society, but one which is more disastrously than ever countter to the ideal of closer communication. Try finding anything out from a computer. They can be a law unto themselves and we are more than ever at their mercy.

Still, for all the evidence to our world of a scenario fitting the concept of George Orwell's 1984 — Big Brother and all — Mr. Proctor for one seems to be calling for a return to basics in human relations: like treating the other fellow as you would like to be treated yourself, and reminding us of the axiom that "action and reaction are equal and opposite."

In our striving for efficiency, for more production, all the concomitants of a largely materialist society, we are often seen more as automatons than as human beings. But now efforts are being put forth to make even the production line more interesting, to counter boredom, that sort of thing.

Certainly we have a lot to learn yet in preserving a proper balance as between our personal identity as workers and as human beings.

Staying Power

United Nations Secretary General Kurt Waldheim is quoted as saying after two years in office that the world is much greater than I expected. It takes everything out of you."

We can well believe that, but the Austrian diplomat is emboldened by the fact that every one of approximately 160 pounds a recent checkup found him fit.

He can also take comfort from the long and arduous years of office endured by his predecessor, Dag Hammarskjold of Sweden and U Thant of Burma. Hammarskjold died eventually in an air crash while on a mission to the Congo in the early uncertain days of independence. In the case of the latter, it may not have been too soon for the Burmese diplomat had to take time off toward the end of his tenure because of diry spells.

The political life, though arduous, does seem to attract men of uncommon endurance, as witness statesmen like President Tito of Yugoslavia, General Franco of Spain and of course Chairman Mao Tse-tung of China, a fact alluded to in recent days by foreign affairs observer John Harbron.

Up And Up

You have noticed of course that cleaning bills have gone up. Along with the chocolate bar and just about everything else. Seems the chemicals et al are costing more and, as the young lady in one establishment told us the other day, even the hangers have been caught up in the inflationary spiral!

Andras Dumps 200,000 from UIC Ripoff

Ottawa Turns Back on PM's Downgrading of Work Ethic

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — The abuse of Unemployment Insurance — Conservative MP Jack Ellis of Hastings charges on the basis of his four-month investigation that fraud is so vast it could top a billion dollars a year — finally seems to be getting to the Government.

It is going on two years ago that Prime Minister Trudeau was saying that self-fulfilment is the name of the human game and that if work was not exactly your thing, not to worry.

He went so far as to suggest — it read almost as an engraved invitation from the East Block — to goof off and let Big Daddy Government keep you cozy.

Now, slowly, as the Minority Government's uncertain mood of power crawl by since last year's skin-of-its-teeth election, the whole official philosophy of work and welfare appears to be turning around.

Manpower Minister Andras discloses that some 200,000 are far this year have been turned out of the Unemployment Insurance ripoff, with another 50,000 expected to be "given the bum's rush in the next few weeks."

And Welfare Minister Lalonde, the biggest spender of the big-spending Government, is shutting the door on hopes of those for what has become the welfare industry" for a guaranteed annual income.

You don't remember the Prime Minister downgrading the work ethic?

It was Spring, in a pre-campaign excursion south of Montreal that he philosophized:

"I say the most sacred law is that a man who lives in society should be able to enjoy his maximum possibilities, and perhaps work is not the way to do it.

"For the aim of man in society is not work, but realization of his full potential."

Then he took a giant step beyond socio-religious concept suggesting there is nothing essentially wrong with anyone making a deliberate decision to collect Unemployment Insurance rather than work.

"There should be no stigma attached to those who prefer not to work," he said, noting that those who would rather live on Unemployment Insurance had paid their premiums.

But he said nothing about the work that has to be done by someone to make it possible for the non-workers to observe the "sacred law to enjoy their maximum possibilities."

Then, a little later in still another pre-campaign venture, this time into Northern Ontario, he developed his philosophy further, promising the Government would do its best to provide work "for those who want it, but not necessarily in industry, business or trade."

Instead, he went on to suggest, and carried the doctrine still a step further in speaking to students in Ottawa, that people who prefer not to work at productive conventional jobs might occupy their time in such tax-supported endeavors as Opportunities for Youth and Local Initiative Programs.

Came soon after the election campaign, and suddenly the abuse of Unemployment Insurance — with its two billion dollar cost — was a major issue.

Shaken by near-defeat the Government went so far as to actually draft legislation refusing Unemployment Insurance to those who quit their jobs without reason or refused to accept suitable alternative employment unless they had worked for at least eight weeks.

The New Democrats backed them off that one and the legislation was dropped into the parliamentary limbo.

But, stubbornly, the Unemployment Insurance scandal refused to go away. Benefits paid out in the first seven months of the year were up $200 million or 17 per cent.

So Manpower Minister Andras, steeling himself, got tough, assuming even the NDP couldn't really object if he weeded the chiselers out of the $2 billion UIC money patch.

By his own figures, cited in a recent speech, he stopped off 200,000, with another 50,000 to go.

The Government's companion piece in dumping the piggy-back riders was Welfare Minister Lalonde's enunciation, again in a speech, of the Guaranteed Annual Income.

"If it were available," he told the Canadian Tax Foundation, "to those who chose not to work, would it not be interpreted as a statement by Society community that it was appropriate or right for people to make the choice of 'to work or not to work' — and to be supported by their neighbors?

"If so, I don't think it would be consistent with the values of the vast majority of Canadians."

So work is back in Government favor and free-loading going out of federal style.

Capitulation to NDP's Threat

Price Freeze May Curb Exploration for Oil

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

There is nothing as sobering as the prospect of losing office.

Faced with that unpleasant prospect, the Trudeau government has chosen to prolong its term by adopting the meric stance of the New Democrats on the energy problem.

Short term, the Liberals can cling to power, and the price of petroleum products remains frozen. Long term, the incentive for increasing the production of oil could be seriously diminished.

The government's decision to retain the price freeze beyond Jan. 30 is clearly a political capitulation to the NDP. But, as the United States has discovered the hard way (in the case of natural gas), an artificially depressed price can lead only to shortages. Exploration companies won't risk their money in the search for new reserves, if all economic incentive is denied them.

That problem won't be overcome simply by the expedient of creating a national petroleum company. Such a corporation may be useful in two ways — appeasing the NDP, and dealing with other state agencies in oil-exporting countries (especially Venezuela).

But don't expect a number some politically conceived Crown corporation, with a budget averaging $3 million a year, to find oil and gas where thoroughly - experienced and first-like private companies can not.

Nor is it likely to come up with an overnight answer to the difficult technical problem of extracting oil from the Alberta oil sands — a riddle that has been occupying some of Canada's best petroleum engineers for many years.

The announced extension of the oil pipeline to Montreal, via route that has apparently but been chosen, could be either a master stroke or a costly blunder.

If it does that, were such a line in existence today, it would eliminate most of our distribution difficulties and provide the Montreal market with Canadian crude costing less than the imported oil that Montreal refineries are using.

But it's easily conceivable that imports would again be cheaper than Canadian oil at Montreal by the time the pipeline extension is completed, in 1976 or later. Should the people of Eastern Canada be required to pay a premium for Canadian oil?

And one oil company has warned that Alberta's oil reserves might run out before the cost of the pipeline extension could be recovered.

The sole clearly constructive measure in the prime minister's latest "policy" is the government's commitment to help the provinces to pay for nuclear generating stations.

Even though nature still holds vast unfouched quantities of oil and gas, the time has come to give every encouragement to the development of alternative energy sources — of which nuclear power is the most fully developed.

But let's not fool ourselves into thinking that a series of vote-getting controls and slogans will keep the oil shortage from growing worse. In an inflationary world, and with the supply of oil lagging behind demand, stubborn resistance to price increases will eventually hurt the consumer more than it hurts the oil producer.

Minister Without Portfolio Margaret Birch Shines In Programs For Youth

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

During the last 12 months Ontario has had a rare experience. For the first time in its history the province has had a woman sitting as a member of its government.

Women have not been as prominent in the political life of Ontario as in some other jurisdictions.

From time to time there have been women members. The CCF-NDP have had three, of which Agnes Macphail, who served in both the federal and provincial houses, was the most renowned. There have been three Conservatives. And the Liberals at present have Margaret Campbell, veteran of Toronto civic politics.

But none rose to substantial stature in the house, particularly on the government side. One strong reason for this was that Leslie Frost and John Robarts who dominated the Ontario political scene for two decades, while both very strong with the women's vote, were scared to death of having such a close association as is involved in having a female sitting—and talking—at your cabinet table.

So both managed to close a blank eye to a feminine presence in their councils.

Then, however, William Davis took over in 1971 and with two women in his caucus it was evident that one of them would end up in his cabinet, in fact, he hinted as much in his election campaign.

The step was taken last September when Margaret Birch was appointed a minister without portfolio and in December was given responsibility for Ontario's Youth Secretariat.

Since then this 42-year-old mother of two children and wife of a newspaper man has been in the public eye, but very agreeably so.

The Ontario public would have had every reason to like what they saw in the person of the secretariat and her political life.

She is not a woman who comes on strong as some are apt to do when they enter public life. But she does give every appearance of quiet competence and also of considerable administrative ability.

The admiring eye frankly that she isn't impressed with her services might run out before the crest of the pipeline extension could be recovered.

The sole clearly constructive measure in the prime minister's latest "policy" is the government's commitment to help the provinces to pay for nuclear generating stations.

Even though nature still holds vast unfouched quantities of oil and gas, the time has come to give every encouragement to the development of alternative energy sources — of which nuclear power is the most fully developed.

Jesus came to erase fear and implant faith as we let Him. "Oay believe." "Fear thou not for I am with thee." "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." "What time I am afraid, I will trust in thee." Faith fear is not of you, so deliver us from it in the mighty name of Jesus for your glory. Amen.

As time progresses it seems we will probably be hearing more of his thinking.

For after this first year it is now taken for granted that Mrs. Birch is here to stay a while in Ontario government.

In fact Premier Davis is expected to have a major reorganization soon.

And she is mentioned probably more often than anyone for promotion.

A Glimmer Of Hope In Ulster

Ottawa Journal

A small glow of light shown in the darkness of Northern Ireland. Just possibly it could illumine a way to peace out of the four years of bombs, bullets and bloodshed.

Protestants and Catholics are sharing power for the first time since 1921 in the North's new executive, set up by the new constitution under which elections were held this summer. Six of the executive's voting members are of the Unionist Party, that once monopolized government, representing the Protestant majority. Four are from the mainly Catholic Social Democratic and Labor Party. Brian Faulkner, the last premier of Northern Ireland, is chief of Executive — assistant chief is Gerry Fit, leader of the SDLP.

Manchester Guardian

This decision to try to bury ancient enmities and share power between Protestant and Catholic may not solve all Ulster's problems. But it is a major requisite of any foreseeable solution.

Security is where the Irish dimension will play the first great impact. This also will be the most touchy issue. If Dublin were to look on the Council of Ireland as something imposed up to do anything, the new Westminster, it would be a failure. But, Northern Ireland could be won to its merits, perhaps only slowly, by the results.

The admission by leaders of Northern Ireland today is energetic that a problem with which the Republic can help, particularly since the IRA campaign has moved more to the Border and so many men have escaped from the South. This is a chronically difficult political problem for Dublin, but it ought to be worth the effort.

A real contribution from the South to ending violence in the North could be made by men in the Council of Ireland structure.

Davis Optimistic

Energy Crisis Could Aid Us

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis said Monday the current energy crisis may be a blessing in disguise for Ontario industry.

In a speech to the Canadian Club, Mr. Davis said that because of Ontario's own secure energy sources, so apparent reference to hydro electric power industry here stands an "excellent chance" of competing with foreign producers in price and availability of goods.

"Furthermore, our manufacturers could increase their share in foreign markets where effective demand still exists, but where production is curtailed because of energy shortages."

In any event, the premier said he is optimistic Ontario's economy despite the energy situation, will remain strong with growth in provincial real output in 1974 exceeding five per cent.

"In short, the peculiar nature of this crisis—one which is characterized by production constraints and shortages of goods worldwide—may actually create substitution opportunities in the import-export domain for Ontario producers."

The premier said Ontario firms should be able to increase their share of the Canadian market because of rising import prices and production "constraints upon our trading partners."

He told his audience that Ontario has a "uniquely solid position, compared with other jurisdictions around the world in access to relatively secure energy supplies."

"Should shortages occur, however, there is every expectation that prudent and careful allocation of the available supplies will ensure the continued expansion of the provincial economy in 1974."

Ontario industry had been expanding capacity to meet mounting demands for goods and services to the extent that private investment in plant and equipment this year should exceed that of last year by 13 per cent.

Canadian Route May Not Be Best

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Energy Minister Darcy McKeough told the legislature Monday an all-Canadian route for a pipeline to Montreal may not be the best.

Premier William Davis said Ontario may not indicate its preference of a route to Montreal at the energy conference scheduled for Jan. 22.

The federal government proposal to extend the pipeline eastward was unveiled last week and opposition members queried the provincial government Monday on its stand on the issue.

Mr. McKeough said northern members of the legislature have made strong presentations to the cabinet urging that the pipeline go through Northern Ontario around Lake Superior.

He said there were three possible routes for a pipeline, one "a very long way from western Canada north of Lake Superior" and two easier alternatives.

The easier alternatives, he explained, would be to hook to the U.S. leg of the trans-Canada pipeline and bring it through Sarnia or Sault Ste. Marie.

Mr. McKeough, said one factor has to be kept in mind and that is that the new pipeline should have the potential to reverse itself.

This means, he said, if oil in economic quantities, was found off the East Coast the pipeline would be in a position to pump some of that material from east to west rather than just crude oil from western Canada to eastern Canada.

Halt Highway

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government has decided to halt construction of the Brantford expressway because of a public outcry and data that showed it was not needed.

Gordon Carton, minister of transportation and communications, announced the decision Monday in the legislature in tabling a 22-page report on the issue by Toronto consultant Earl Berger.

Checkerboard Titles May Be Validated

TORONTO (CP) — People who bought rural land under so-called checkerboarding plans moved closer Monday to getting clear title to their property.

The legislature gave approval in principle to legislation which would allow the government to validate land titles if a municipality so requests.

Checkerboarding is a land development method which has been ruled by various courts as an attempt to circumvent the planning act.

The name derives from the piecemeal approach to purchasing land in a certain area—lots are bought under different names and none are directly adjoining each other.

The legislation received second reading by a 54-30-26 vote with both the Liberals and New Democrats opposing the measure.

Patrick Lawlor (NDP—Toronto Lakeshore) said developers who practised the checkerboarding plan used "exploitive banditry."

However, he said if a "murder" had been committed by the developers, the provincial government was their willing accomplice.

The main issue in the legislation was whether the people who purchased lots near Peterborough from Whitelock Estates Development Corp. Ltd. and other similar firms, had clear title to their lands.

Under the legislation, ministerial approval will not be required for appointments to planning boards and redevelopments will not need Ontario Municipal Board (OMB) approval but will come directly to the minister instead.

Opposition Leader Robert Nixon said his party had been urging the decentralization of planning for years, but said this legislation was far too hurried. He said members of the legislature did not have an opportunity to speak to people affected or check with local officials to see whether it would meet local requirements.

The Liberals unsuccessfully argued that the legislation should be held over until the next session of the legislature.

"This legislation is flawed and faulty," said Mr. Nixon.

Mr. Lawlor said the legislation did nothing to rectify similar checkerboarding plans in the future.

He said checkerboarding still exists.

Earlier, Vernon Singer (L—Toronto Downsview) argued that the onus should not be on the municipalities but the provincial government to validate titles.

You know when you are overburdening your home's electrical system. Your appliances don't perform as they should. Your lights dim when other appliances are turned on. You are constantly using extension cords. And your fuses blow. It all adds up to—an insufficient amount of power, and not enough circuits and outlets.

What is not as easy to detect is the extent to which your overburdened wiring is heating up and causing its insulation to deteriorate. Such wiring can be a fire hazard.

And that's reason enough to have it checked and if necessary replaced.

Rewiring brings other benefits. Improved performance and longer life of appliances. The convenience of ample outlets and switches. Sufficient power to handle the requirements of your family.

PCs Disgusted With Coalition

OTTAWA (CP) — Before and after the Conservative motion of non-confidence was defeated in the Commons Monday night, it was apparent Robert Stanfield's MPs were disgusted, disgruntled and otherwise fed up with what they call the Liberal-New Democrat coalition.

Paul Hellyer, a former Liberal cabinet minister who split the government to sit with the Conservatives in 1969, set the tone early when he stomped out of the House as NDP Leader David Lewis rose to speak on the motion.

Before Mr. Lewis began, Mr. Hellyer (Toronto Trinity) asked whether he planned to speak "on behalf of the government," a reference to the NDP pledge to support the minority government.

Mr. Lewis, replying over a din of Conservative jeering, said Mr. Hellyer was "no more amusing as a Tory frontbencher than he was as a member of the Liberal cabinet."

The outcome of the vote, 135 to 127 against the motion, which could have unseated the government, was expected. Mr. Lewis on an Alberta tour last Thursday when Prime Minister Trudeau announced energy policy changes, promised his party's support then.

Debate on the motion was punctuated almost incessantly by catcalling, in which Conservatives accused the government of selling out Quebec and the Atlantic provinces by adopting a policy that was largely New Democrat.

Bitterness surfaced when Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield said the prime minister should start a new television show called "The Bailing Game." If a premier or region was offended on one episode, Mr. Trudeau could have the right to enter the "play-offs . . . where he plays off one region of the country against another."

Earlier, Gerald Baldwin (PC—Peace River) said cynically the Commons should recognize formally "that the Liberal and New Democratic parties are in direct coalition." He ties are in direct coalition." He suggested MPs would be able to understand the rules for future energy debates if the Liberals and the NDP admitted their alliance.

Later, Otto Jelinek (PC—Toronto High Park-Humber Valley) tried to take a shot at the NDP and Liberals in a question aimed at Mr. Trudeau.

He asked if the prime Minister's statement last Thursday was intended merely to "pacify the NDP" or did it indicate he disagrees with Energy Minister Donald Macdonald.

One NDP MP Votes With PCs

OTTAWA (CP) — John Rodriguez stood against his New Democrat colleagues for the first time in his young Commons career as he voted against the government on a non-confidence motion Monday night.

"It's the first time I've done this," the 36-year-old Nickel Belt MP said outside the Commons after voting against the minority Liberals on the Conservative's doomed energy motion.

"I just couldn't stand to vote for the bastards."

His vote was surprising because the government's new energy policy drew quick and enthusiastic support from the NDP when it was announced last week.

Announced with the non-confidence vote just around the corner, the Policy met many NDP second-thoughts. But to Mr. Rodriguez, the new policy "is just political expediency."

The dismissal of most of the government's "death-bed repentance" was one reason why he voted against the Liberals but basically "I just don't trust the bastards."

Although he stood apart from the other 30 NDP members present in the House for the vote, Mr. Rodriguez said his colleagues "respect that deep down I have to square the vote with myself."

"I made the decision on something I feel strongly about. It's a time-honored tradition in our caucus."

He was not worried the vote would be held against him within the party, but added: "my long-term career rests with my constituents."

A native of Georgetown, Guyana, Mr. Rodriguez was elected to the Commons in October, 1972. He lives in Coniston, on the outskirts of the nickle-mining city of Sudbury, Ont.

Asked if he had advised the NDP caucus of his intention to break party ranks, he said: "It's a decision I made."

"I felt the government was just playing me along as a sucker."

Erik Nielsen (PC—Yukon) finished off the night when he stalled voting on a bill to provide supplementary spending estimates for the 1973-74 fiscal year.

He attempted, through an amendment that was introduced too late, to have Mr. Macdonald's ministerial salary of $15,000 and his vehicle allowance of $2,000 reduced to a token total of $1.

"He doesn't deserve more than one cent," he shouted across the floor, before turning on Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre), who was supporting the government during the procedural debate.

"The member for Winnipeg North Centre has been stumbling all over himself lately to support this mumbling and fumbling tribe opposite."

Government House Leader Allan MacEachen dismissed Mr. Nielsen's amendment as totally irrelevant . . . his "nonsense."

Think Burglars After Hughes-Nixon Links

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Watergate committee is pursuing a theory that the Watergate burglars were seeking information that might have linked billionaire Howard Hughes with the Nixon administration.

The theory is that the break-in at Democratic headquarters was an effort to determine whether then-National Chairman Lawrence O'Brien had such information and if he planned to use it to embarrass Nixon politically.

The committee's chief counsel, Samuel Dash, said Monday the theory was "based on reliable, evidence we have received."

However, Dash said the theory was only one of several being actively investigated.

This aspect of the Watergate investigation came to light when a transcript of an executive session the committee held last week was placed in the public record of a U.S. district court hearing here.

The transcript had been sought by one of the principal witnesses in that closed-door hearing, Chester Davis, lawyer for the Hughes-owned Summa Corp.

Dash said the break-in theory was discussed when Davis challenged a committee request to be provided with correspondence and other documents between O'Brien and Hughes officials.

Regional Government Elections Are Held

SIMCOE (CP) — Elected representatives of Ontario's 11th regional government were voted into office Monday in municipal elections in Haldimand and Norfolk counties.

The new regional municipality, to be called Haldimand-Norfolk, comes into existence next April and is made up of six area municipalities. Voters turned down the name of Erie for their region.

Snowflurries, which fell intermittently throughout the day, failed to deter 42 per cent of the voters in the town of Simcoe. Other areas also reported good turnouts.

The new region is restructed from 28 existing municipalities in the two-county area along Lake Erie, southwest of Hamilton.

Day Seen When Canada Free of Fossil Fuels

OTTAWA (CP) — International oil politics and dwindling fuel supplies may be shrugged off some day by Canadians dependent now on fossil fuels to keep home heaters burning and the industrial wheels turning.

While no quick solutions seem likely to brighten the current energy picture, this country has enviable long-term options for production of electricity without depletion of oil and gas reserves.

Hydro-electricity, a well-established energy pillar, and nuclear power both offer Canada the opportunity to lessen its dependence on non-renewable resources and the goodwill of foreign oil producers.

In the Commons Monday, Energy Minister Donald Macdonald cited conjured up visions of an electricity grid extending from Manitoba to Newfoundland and drawing its power from new nuclear and hydro generating stations.

Mr. Macdonald said switching from conventional thermal generating stations, many powered by oil and gas, would have advantages beyond the conservation of non-renewable natural fuels.

Extension of nuclear and hydro facilities would be beneficial on the basis of supply, cost and environmental factors, he said during debate on government energy policy.

Ontario Hydro's Pickering nuclear generating station already had shown significant success and the government was expanding assistance for the expansion of nuclear facilities at Gentilly, Que.

Prime Minister Trudeau said last week the government has offered financial assistance for a New Brunswick nuclear plant and Mr. Macdonald outlined how such generating stations could help alleviate the Atlantic provinces' reliance on conventional thermal plants.

Canada has proven that its CANDU nuclear reactor can be a successful source of power and this country's uranium deposits place it in an enviable position, Mr. Macdonald said.

"A period of world over-supply of uranium had come to an end, bringing with it a renewal of interest in Canadian uranium resources.

He reiterated the government position that when the uranium resources are developed they must be under Canadian control.

The government energy study, published last June, said nuclear energy provided less than one per cent of Canada's energy supply in 1972. However, the document said the 1972 production will increase 24-fold by the year 2000.

By 1980, nuclear power is expected to supply about 70 per cent of Ontario's electricity requirements and more than one-quarter of national requirements.

Increased electrical production from nuclear stations in the Atlantic provinces could increase links between the power systems of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Quebec, said Mr. Macdonald. Eventually there should be increased Quebec-Ontario and Ontario-Manitoba electrical links.

The government was studying a cable link to allow Prince Edward Island to hook into a grid with the other Atlantic provinces.

Another possibility is a Labrador-Newfoundland cable carrying power from the Churchill Falls hydro-electric development to Newfoundland, he said.

Stronger electrical ties linking the four Atlantic provinces, Quebec and Ontario would "offer the greater security advantage of a closely-integrated system."

Mr. Macdonald said the great expanses of Northern Ontario make it difficult to link Manitoba's hydro resources to power-hungry southern Ontario.

Newfoundland, Mr. Macdonald said, has made considerable strides in long-distance power transmission and a feed to industrialized areas of Ontario "should be a priority if the technology becomes available."

While electrical power with present technology cannot help directly in meeting all energy requirements, conversion of some customers to electricity in the future may conserve gas and petroleum for essential purposes.

Stability Of Farms Essential

MONTREAL (CP) — Beryl Plumptre, chairman of the food prices review board, said Monday there is agreement among at least nine Canadian premiers that agricultural stability is fundamental to the fight against food price inflation

Here for a 45-minute meeting with Premier Robert Bourassa and Quebec Agriculture Minister Normand Toupin, she said later she has met each premier except Manitoba's Ed Schreyer. All voiced similar opinions on the need for a stable farm industry.

Mrs. Plumptre told a news conference after her meeting with Mr. Bourassa and Mr. Toupin that the two agreed with the board's desire for a national farm policy, coupled with provincial legislation to assist it. This will help control food prices, the board says.

Mrs. Plumptre said she also discussed with the Quebec government officials Monday the need for increased agricultural production and a good return on investment for farmers.

Mrs. Plumptre said recent federal government measures towards the goal of farm stability have been wheat and dairy farmers' subsidies.

Wheat farmers are "very happy," but dairy farmers are not. The five-cent-a-quart milk subsidy is not enough for Quebec farmers, but the policy was good. Farmers are negotiating with the federal government to work out a satisfactory solution to maintain their own return on investment while inhibiting milk price rises, she said.

Food prices meanwhile, are expected to continue to rise until, at least, next year's harvest.

Mrs. Plumptre said the board has had some psychological effects on consumers because its existence "may have hindered prices from rising," but this "is not easy to measure."

St. Michael's Festive Meal For Seniors

More than 70 senior parishioners of St. Michael the Archangel were treated to an early Christmas dinner Sunday.

This is the first time the Christmas dinner has been held, and its success indicates it may become an annual event.

Just over two years ago, Dora Vogt, rectory housekeeper, decided to organize a club for senior members of the congregation.

"The doors are open to all older people in the community," Miss Vogt says, "but we've begun with just the folk in our church who like to get together."

The senior citizens meet on the second Tuesday of every month in the rectory, for various activities. Often there are card games and always a lunch at the close of the afternoon.

Last years Christmas party went over so well that it was decided to have a dinner this year.

With the assistance of her sister-in-law Co Vogt, and the Catholic Women's League, Miss Vogt prepared a special festive meal, complete with party favors, fruit punch, and Christmas cards for everyone.

Dora Vogt kept busy Sunday replenishing the supplies on the abundantly-laden buffet table. Assisted by her sister-in-law Co Vogt (directly behind her in the photo), and many members of the Catholic Women's League, Miss Vogt welcomed more than 70 senior citizens to St. Michael's Christmas dinner held in the rectory. Decorations and party favors made the atmosphere especially festive.

Slick Trick

◆ As storm windows are returned to duty, slip narrow, folded strips of wax paper between the windows and the frames wherever the fit is extra tight. Removal will be easier come spring. Use plenty of strips for freshly painted windows.

Selecting Toys for Tots

OTTAWA (CP) — Will your child enjoy the toys he gets for Christmas?

If you aren't sure, the Canadian Toy Testing Council can help you select toys that "fit into the play the child is involved in now and that suit his age and stage of development."

The council, a volunteer organization subsidized by a federal grant, publishes two pamphlets called Little Gifts for Big Occasions and Tips on Toy Buying. Both deal with buying inexpensive gifts for children between the ages of four and 10.

If you want a wide selection of good toys, the council has a complete listing of all currently available toys it has recommended in the last 20 years. Toys are listed by age and category with a brief description and approximate price.

The pamphlets are free with a self-addressed envelope but the complete listing of several hundred toys costs $1.

Each year only half the toys tested meet the council's requirements of play value, safety and durability.

"The Hazardous Products Act of 1969 put Canada ahead of other countries in regulating toy safety and the federal consumer affairs department continually updates regulations as new toys and materials become available," the council says in a statement.

"The greatest hazards now are coming from toys that get into the hands of children who are too young for them.

"Toys should stimulate the imagination and offer scope for playing in different ways. Let the child do the playing instead of the toy."

And shop around before you buy because "it's not unusual to find known manufacturers' toys selling in different stores at several prices within the same city."

Women's Study Guild Hears 'Independent Canada' Talk

William Hunt, vice-chairman of the Belleville branch of the Committee for an Independent Canada addressed a recent meeting of the Women's Study Guild.

Telling first of the founding and organization of the CIC he said Walter Gordon is the founder and is now Honorary Chairman. The present chairman is Eddie Goodman with Mel Hurtig acting as co-chairman. Many MP's are members including Ron Basford and Flora MacDonald, he said.

Members, who come from all walks of life and who are of all political persuasions, are people who are deeply concerned about the possibility that Canada might not continue to exist as a political entity. The purpose of the committee is to make the public aware of the problems that exist and to provide a focus for th opinions of Canadians who are concerned about the future of our country.

He suggested that the Canadian business man has failed to keep control of our natural resources and has contributed very little to research and development. Not only the business companies but the government is at fault too. In the United States, $2 per cent of research is underwritten by the government, in Canada only 18 per cent. He also stated that 95 per cent of the patents issued in Ottawa is held by foreign ownership.

In suggesting solutions, he said that the CIC was recommending that Canadian banks should make higher risk loans available to Canadian companies; that the Canadian government should encourage research and development by Canadians in Canada; and that we as concerned Canadian citizens should do everything possible to encourage Canadian control of economy, the media, education, the arts and, of course, our environment.

Mr. Hunt is with the history department at Moira Secondary School.

Ann Landers

Sometimes He Is Silent Straying Minister Says

Dear Ann Landers: I am a Protestant minister with "a little clay around his ankles," as you put it. Your column about the clergyman who strayed was sent to me by three different people—anonymously, of course. My response is not intended as a defense, but I hope you will print it.

Yes, I have strayed. And now it is your turn, dear members of my congregation, to minister to me, to try to understand and to forgive me.

I have given you guidance and emotional support when you were trying to work through an illicit romance with that handsome man next door. I have gone to court as a character witness to help your husband when he falsified his income tax returns. I sat up with you in your living room till dawn when your son was caught in a first bust and arranged through a clergyman in that college town to get the charges dropped. You said you would never forget that favor.

Will you now look, with me, at the outmoded divorce and ecclesiastical regulations that have held me a prisoner in a marriage that is a mockery because my parishioners would rather write to Ann Landers than admit that their clergyman is subject to the same passions as they?

Will you believe that I have prayed to God for guidance and asked Him how to avoid hurting others, and yet be honest with myself? Sometimes He is silent. Sometimes He has granted me insight, but I still feel loved by Him.—Your Clay-footed Minister (No Locale, Please)

Dear Minister: Thank you for an honest expression of a tortured man. I received similar letters from several rabbis and priests. What better evidence that clay feet are truly ecumenical?

Dear Ann Landers: Ever since I was 18 years old, people have been saying to me: "You have such a beautiful face, if you'd lose 25 pounds you'd be the best-looking girl in any crowd." So, on my 19th birthday I decided to go on a strict diet. That was six months ago. I dropped 28 pounds and another five for good measure, and now heads turn to look, for the first time in my life.

Happy? You bet. But I have lost two of my best friends. They are both fat.

Can it be that they ditched me because they are jealous? Is it possible that they don't want me around because suddenly I look so much better than they do?

I've heard it said that when a girl loses weight she also loses her fat friends. Do you believe it?—New Me Misses Two

Dear You: They weren't friends. They were acquaintances who shared a common problem. I can't see that you have lost much. Forget it.

Dear Ann Landers: Maybe you'll say I'm a cold-hearted witch, but I don't think you should have stood up for that woman who telephoned her 84-year-old mother from the office three and four times a day.

If that woman can call her mother, so can everyone else. They can also call their boy-friends, girl-friends, sisters, cousins, aunts, and whomever. When you have that many people making private phone calls they tie up the company's lines. It's not fair to the employer.

The next time you call a place of business, Ann Landers, and can't get through because the lines are busy, remember that it might be the result of the advice you gave in your column. And it will serve you right.—I Spend A Dime During Lunch Hour

Dear Dime: Touche, dear, and muchas gracias.

Successful Living

Sunsets Preferable To Pigsties

BY DORIS CLARK

"The critics condemn my books because of what they call my lack of realism. My reply to them is that sunsets are just as real as pigsties and I prefer writing about sunsets."

L.M. Montgomery, author of Anne of Green Gables, addressing the Toronto Womens Press Club 1936.

Harriet visited the Anne of Green Gables home a couple of months ago and having viewed a P.E.I. landscape in its autumn brilliance, I am inclined to agree with her.

Take a look at something beautiful. Right now Be it the face of your ronychecked toddler, the warm hand of a loved one, a painting that appeals,— or an apple pie bubbling and fresh out of the oven!

Dear Doris: You asked me about the Personal Acquaintance Service in Calgary.

It has been excellent in some aspects. Because of the many phases and tests one must go through to become a member, most participants are sincere. I might add they appear to be well matched.

My only objection is that there are so few Saskatchewan participants; they are mostly from Calgary and Edmonton. If those interested Saskatchewanites could become aware of this program, I feel sure we would have a stronger membership. So, of course, I appeal to you, since yours is such a widely read column.

Regina Reader.

Dear Reader: Thank you. Personal Acquaintance Service is part of the Pastoral Institute, P.O. Box 49, Calgary, Alberta. The program is open to anyone in Canada; all procedures may be handled by correspondence.

Correspondents complete a good deal of comprehensive written material to provide the basis for the selection procedure. Much personal attention is given to each request.

And it doesn't matter whether you live in British Columbia or Newfoundland, you can still write and get some help. Costs are kept low by the use of trained volunteers.

Dear Doris: Please send me the leaflet about Facing Forty. I will be 39 next month and I just feel horrible most of the time. Depressed, worried over everything and generally am turning into a critical, hard-to-live-with person.

Dear Thirty-Nine: "Facing Forty" (the 25-cent leaflet) is on its way. Feeling horrible most of the time is an awful way to live.

Girls Have Abortions Without Mental Trauma

OTTAWA (CP) — Teen-age girls who have had therapeutic abortions handled the trauma of their experience adequately and their lives did not appear to suffer, a team of Montreal doctors has reported.

A study of 65 pregnant girls carried out at the adolescent unit of Montreal Children's Hospital indicated they were not emotionally disturbed nor socially deprived, says the report in the Canadian Medical Association Journal.

In interviews during a one-year period following the abortions, the doctors found that the girls "had a normal reaction to the abortion crisis" and handled it adequately.

Generally, the more disturbed a girl was before abortion, the more likely it was she would react adversely to the experience.

The doctors have been continuing to study the reaction of 50 girls in the second year following abortion.

It was found that 76 per cent of families supported the girls through the crisis period, while 24 per cent did not. Many of the families that had not offered support during the crisis period did so in the year following the abortion.

Jutting Jawbone Shortened

TORONTO (CP) — A 17-year-old girl whose jutting jaw was surgically shortened is one of the most recent successes at Canada's leading centre for oral surgery, Doctors Hospital here.

Dr. Thorpe R. Van de Mark, chief of the hospital's department of oral surgery and dentistry, described the girl's facial transformation in an interview.

"It is not solely for cosmetic reasons we do the surgery," he said. "Previously, she was biting against the palate of her mouth and injuring gum tissue."

As the doctor held up before-and-after photographs for display, his patient grinned at her new profile. Fine, inch-long scars hardly noticeable in the jaw line under the ears, are the only evidence of the surgery.

Linda is typical of about 60 to 70 patients who have jaw-correction surgery at the hospital every year.

"Doctors Hospital has been the key hospital in Canada in the history of oral surgery," Dr. Van de Mark said.

A graduate in both dentistry and medicine, he described the difficult beginnings of dental-medical co-operation in oral and plastic surgery and recalled that the two groups were often at loggerheads in Toronto as the new procedures were being developed after the Second World War.

The initiative to do pioneer work in the field came after he graduated as a dental oral surgeon, applied for surgical privileges at a Toronto hospital, but was rejected.

In 1954, he decided to enter medical school as the only sure way of gaining access to a hospital and of using his skills as an oral surgeon. To date, he is probably the only Canadian oral surgeon holding both medical and dental degrees.

Dr. Simon Weinberg, his assistant at Doctors Hospital, said there is growing evidence of cooperation between dental surgeons and medical surgeons, but Doctors Hospital still is the only hospital in Canada with a department of oral surgery.

Canada's Oldest Twins 100 Years Old Monday

PORT DOVER, Ont. (CP) — Canada's oldest twins, born one month after Sir John A. Macdonald was defeated in his first re-election bid, as prime minister, became 100 years old Monday.

Eva McBride and Edith McIntosh celebrated their birthdays in a nursing home, but Mrs. McIntosh wanted to make sure the party wasn't held.

"It's the fun in life that keeps you going," she said. "Eva and I have had sorrow and hardship but we have had a jolly time, a good life, and we don't miss much going on."

Mrs. McBride almost missed the party. Six weeks ago she broke a hip and spent several weeks in hospital but the fracture has mended.

The twins are life-long residents of Norfolk County and were born in Vittoria, about 10 miles south of Simcoe, Ont. They maintained their own home until they moved to the nursing home when they were 98. Both are widows and have no children.

Despite the changes in technology and politics, the sisters have managed to keep up with developments. They also discovered some heroes when Foster Hewitt started his radio broadcast of Toronto Maple Leaf hockey games in the 1930s. Television has made it even better, they said.

"We've always been Maple Leaf fans," said Mrs. McBride.

Post Office Imposes Penalty on Sealed Cards

OTTAWA (CP) — After a few days of indecision, the post office has decided to impose penalty charges on sealed Christmas cards sent with a six-cent stamp.

A directive issued to postmasters Monday made it plain that a postage-due penalty will be charged to recipients of sealed cards.

That means those who receive such mail will have to pay four cents—two cents to make up the difference between six and eight and two cents penalty.

Last week a spokesman for the post office said that unofficially postal authorities would accept sealed greeting cards bearing six cents postage. The normal charge for first-class sealed mail is eight cents, while unsealed cards with no more than a brief written note may be sent for six cents.

On Friday, a release from the post office said previous policies still applied.

But Tony Young, national operations director, said there would be no penalty for those who sent sealed cards with a six-cent stamp.

After further consideration, authorities decided to impose the penalty.

Rich Recluse

BRIGHTON, England (CP) — William Lyon, 87, who dressed like a hobo and refused to buy a newspaper when the price went up by a halfpenny, left more than £500,000 ($750,000) when he died. A special bequest of £1,000 went to the bank staff who helped keep his secret, and the rest to a Brighton hospital.

North Bay Will Have Two-man Police Patrols

NORTH BAY, Ont. (CP) — The North Bay Police Commission announced Monday it is hiring 17 new police constables to start two-man cruiser patrols at night.

The two-man system was requested by the North Bay Police Association following the Dec. 1 shooting death of Constable Len Slater who was on lone patrol when he responded to an emergency call.

Constable Slater was killed trying to apprehend a gunman who also shot and wounded another officer, Constable Gordon McCourt.

Constable McCourt, interviewed in hospital where he is recovering, said he is convinced he would not have been shot if another constable had been with him.

Slow Christmas Mail Blamed on Management

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

A backlog is being caused in city mail deliveries because Belleville post office management won't pay sufficient overtime to cope with the Christmas rush, a local union official charged today.

The situation contravenes a national agreement on Christmas operations between labor and the postal department, claimed James Campbell, president, Letter Carriers Union of Canada, Local 45.

Mr. Campbell said the problem is compounded by an earlier-than-usual Christmas rush stimulated by post office promotion.

Belleville area postmaster Roy Wainwright this morning had no comment on the union officer's allegations.

Mr. Campbell claimed mail delivery Thursday in Belleville was still awaiting processing by letter carriers for route delivery when they reported for work Monday.

The mailment were asked to volunteer for overtime at the end of their regular day shift Monday. All 25 agreed. But, claimed Mr. Campbell, they had only worked an hour and 55 minutes when they were told to stop and go home.

Had they worked another minute, said the official, management would have had to pay each man a $2 meal allowance.

As a result, much mail was still left unprocessed by letter carriers, said Mr. Campbell. Much would be left over when they reported for work Tuesday.

By its action, local management broke a recent national agreement that stipulates Christmas mail must be processed by carriers daily to ensure no backlog, said Mr. Campbell.

Local 45 officials met with Mr. Wainwright Dec. 4 and agreed on all work procedures in the national agreement, he said.

Assistant letter carriers hired for the Christmas rush report for work at Belleville post office Thursday. But, he said then, claimed Mr. Campbell, if local management does not permit sufficient overtime, the backlog will continue to pile up until the extra help arrives.

"This will cause needless delays in mail already late for delivery in the city," he said.

"The postal department has been advertising the efficiency of its operations nationally. But what happened Monday in Belleville doesn't bear out its propaganda," said the union official.

Letter carriers are not permitted to strike under their current work contract.

"But if that (no-strike) clause wasn't in the national contract, Belleville mailmen might have considered strike action Monday," said Mr. Campbell.

He charged Monday's action by Belleville management was "in retaliation" for a local dispute last January. At that time Belleville letter carriers struck for eight days to protect a reorganization of time schedules they feared threatened job security. The Belleville protest brought amendment of the schedules across Canada.

Mr. Campbell said he contacted by phone with national union officials late Monday night on the situation.

"They told me it was a violation of national policy on Christmas operations agreed between the union and the postal department.

It was announced after noon today that letter carriers' helpers would start Wednesday instead of Thursday in an effort to clean up the back-

Hockey Anyone !

The game of hockey isn't just played by peewees, tykes and bantams. Loyalist College students play too. Yesterday, Nancy Cann and Charlie Kyte tried their hand at the ever-popular pastime, as students inspected toys that will go to the firefighter's annual drive to provide toys to children whose families are less able to afford gifts. Some 2,000 toys filling the students' lounge were donated to the firefighters through this weekend's Loyalist College Toy Radiothon by Belleville citizens.

Volunteers Requested

With the New Year only a matter of weeks away and appointments to various city boards, commissions and committees soon coming up, City Hall is again asking for volunteers.

The practice of inviting residents with a yen for civic affairs to make their desires known was commenced some years ago with a display advertisment appearing in The Intelligencer.

This year again, the invitation is out and anyone wishing to serve the city as an appointee to any of the city's boards or committees, is invited to submit his or her name in writing to the city clerk's office indicating the activity in which he has a special interest. Submissions are asked to be in by December 14.

Loyalist Toy Appeal a Winner

Two thousand toys, 60 hours, and five very tired disc jockeys latter, the Loyalist College Toy Radiothon is over for this Ra first year of operation.

All toys donated by Belleville citizens over the weekend were being packed in boxes Monday morning and shipped to the Belleville firefighters central toy depot in the east end plaza. There, the toys will be repaired, if need be, and many families in the city, unable to afford gifts for their children, will find wrapped parcels under Christmas trees.

Jerry Best, the Loyalist student who originated the radiothon, was pleased with the response the idea received from citizens.

"It's the first time we tried it and the response was over and beyond our expectations," he said Monday, "It was very successful, thanks to the generoity of Belleville citizens."

Gifts donated over the phone were picked up by a crew of Loyalist volunteers in their own cars and a van donated for their use by the Avis Rent-a-Car company. All toys were returned to the student lounge at Loyalist.

Hourly reports of the campaigns progress were aired over CJBQ.

Asked whether the radiothon will be held again next year, Jerry Best said it was had to tell. This year, he commented, it accomplished what he had intended — thanks to the studen s at the college, and helped the people of Belleville.

"It's not something that can be done overnight," he said. "This years was a start. I we could do it throughout the year for other things. It wouldn't hurt the college's bi."

Budget Boosted

Property purchases for the proposed Lower Trent conservation dams will give a healthy boost to the 1974 Moira River Conservation Authority budget.

The authority budget as proposed for 1974 totals $852,972 as compared with $180,589 last year.

More than one half of the proposed budget will be earmarker for capital water control projects.

Of the total proposed budget, $538,000 would be covered by government grants with the chief beneficiary municipalities the capital projects paying $258,182. The municipal levy would be $44,000, up $14,00 from last year.

Administration of the authority's business will cost more money.

If the recommendation of the Authority executive is approved by the provincial ministry, the per diem allowances for municipal members will be double from the present $10 a meeting to $20. Mileage allowances would be increased from 10 cents to 15 cents a mile.

Authority chairman Guy Hughes said the proposed new budget is one in line with those paid by other authorities.

Agency Would Provide Marital, Family Advice

A steering committee, composed of members of Belleville's social welfare service organizations, has drafted a preliminary outline for an agency that would provide counselling for people troubled with family problems.

At its initial meeting Monday, the committee, under chairman Norman Slater, a social worker with Belleville General Hospital's mental heath unit, also undertook to write a brief that would be presented to possible funding sources.

It is hoped that the brief's statistical data will define the overload experienced by present group providing counselling. Various services, such as the mental health unit, Children's Aid Society and Children Services, will be polled to gauge the number of referrals that would have been made had the proposed agency existed.

Such an agency would be entirely separate from either volunteer or governmental organizations now working in marital or parent-child relations fields. It would establish its own board of directors to which a paid professional staff, or single counsellor, would be accountable.

Emphasis would be on the agency's role as a co-ordinator of present services in family counselling, with partners' attention paid to schools. The agency would also act as a resource centre for educational purposes.

Fees would be charged on a sliding scale geared to the client's ability to pay. Ideally, the committee hoped the organization would provide social services such as bookkeeping, without a great deal of emphasis placed on how he client was referred to the agency.

The special steering committee was formed directly from a meeting called last week by United Community Services social planning chairman, Virginia O'Rourke.

At that time, she expressed her concern with the inadequacy of marital counselling in Belleville. She called for the formation of a separate agency that would take up the slack left by the overlapping services now provided in the city.

In explaining the type of agency she felt would fulfill the need, she said the service should be somewhere between befriending a troubled individual, or couple, and offering actual professional psychiatric treatment.

The five committee members in attendance Monday presented marital counselling services, such as those offered through the hospital's mental health unit, were too closely associated with the "stigma" of mental illness. Through the proposed agency's educational component, this, it was hoped, would not occur.

Shoplifters Face Stiff Penalties

Shoplifters who are caught taking merchandise from Belleville and area stores this Christmas can expect to be handed severe sentences which will hopefully act as a deterrent to others who might follow their example, Judge J. L. Clendenning said in provincial court yesterday.

The Judge's remark was made just prior to his fining a Belleville woman $100 after she was convicted of stealing $8.48 worth of children's clothing from Towers Discount Store in Belleville.

Betty Jean Smith, 47, was arrested by police Sept. 14, after she was caught leaving the Dundas Street discount store with a number of boys' knitted shirts and some girls' underwear in her purse. She had not paid for the articles and had been spotted putting them into her purse by the store's security staff.

A charge of common assault, which arose from a purse snatching incident at the time Mrs. Smith was stopped by the store's detective, was withdrawn at the request of Crown Attorney Glenn Deline.

Too Much, Too Soon

A Belleville man, convicted for the second time this year of driving with a blood alcohol reading on the breathalyzer that was greater than .08, was fined $225 and had his driver's licence suspended for 12 months, when he appeared before Judge J. L. Clendenning in provincial court here yesterday.

James Henry Wilson, 34, was arrested by police and charged with impaired driving after he was involved in a single-car accident at the intersection of Sidney Street and the Fourth Concession in Thurlow, on Sept. 9..

Wilson pleaded guilty to the charge of driving with more than 80 milligrams of alcohol in his blood when appeared in court yesterday.

Crown Attorney Glenn Delene told the court that Wilson had a previous conviction for impaired driving on Mar. 28, just 12 days before the second incident.

He brought him to court yesterday.

At the time of his arrest, Wilson had a blood-alcohol reading of 290 milligrams of alcohol per 100 millilitres of blood, Mr. Deline said.

The accident had resulted in Wilson's arrest, caused an estimated $1,500 damage to his car,

Gift of an Elephant Not Usually Popular

By PETER GOODSPEED
Staff Reporter

Have you ever received or given someone an elephant for a Christmas gift?

A lot of people have, you know.

Why there is the little 10-year-old boy who is a sports fiend, but his grandmother didn't know this and, deciding to rely on the old standbys for gifts, she gave him a nice pair of purple woollen mittens. After all it's such a nice color and the poor thing has this demented craving to stay outside all winter.

Also there is eight-year-old Susie who has been given a bicycle of her own. Good old Uncle Robert decided to encase himself in a bear costume and bought her a nice big 10-speed bike. It was about 20 inches too high for her.

An awful lot of people get gifts unsuitable for Christmas presents!

There are three things you can do to avoid giving that favorite child of yours, an elephant in his stocking.

You can pretend that you forgot it was Christmas and not give him anything at all. You can get a orychiatrist to study his deepest inner motivations and recommend a specially suited toy for a Christmas gift. Or, you can, in the traditional spirit of Christmas, think seriously about the interests of varying age groups and have a gander on the gifts you give.

If you don't want to play favorite, or if you haven't been keeping up your OHIP payments and can't afford a psychiatrist, then perhaps a refresher course in childhood, as fondlers might help you through that mad last minute rush to buy a gift - - - any gift — for that strange child who has an aversion for elephants.

For that adorable baby, who just started cutting his teeth and has taken to chewing and drooling on anything and everything he can get his hands on, there are a wide variey of bright colored lightweight toys available. Remember though to make certain that they are washable, that they swallow and have no sharp edges on them.

If your young child has reached the stage where he walks, crawls, slinks, creeps or totters about the house, then perhaps he would like to have a companion to accompany him on his explorations. The toy industry has an as-orted catalog number of pets and toys that make music or utter strange beastly cries when they are squeezed or squished to another. These toys can also serve as an early warning device for the mother, who has a tendency to lose track of Johnny while looking after his older fellow consipirators.

For the child who has passed the threshhold of infancy and has discovered the joys of creative destruction, toy manufacturers have marketed such things as modelling clay, which can be poked, rolled and harmlessly smeared on just about anything. They also have a variety of musical instrumentsnts such as tamborines, toy pianos, and drums. There are also miniature phonographs, building blocks, which are ideal for knocking forts and things, dolls, and special coloring books designed for the loquisl ive toddler.

Children between the ages of three and six love to act as grownups and once again the toy manufacturers have anticipated their every wish. Throughout Belleville, toy stores carry a complete range of gifts that will encourage a child to further his or her ambi ions of being a railway engineer, a doctor or a housewife.

Six to nine-year-olds have reached a stage where, hopfully, they can read and write a little and, as a result, the list of gifts that they could enjoy can be enormous. It usually is only exceeded by what they would like to have.

Such playthings as junior carpenter sets and construction sets are usually appropriate for children in this age group, as are electrical toys, kites, games of chance, and skill, and puzzles. Boys at this age are usually avid model builders, while paint sets on this exploration the industry has an as-sorting number of paints and kits for weaving and beadwork.

Children between the ages of nine and 12 have usually reached to forsake the frivolous desires of childhood and are prepared to go in for the real hobbies. Science toys stimulate their natural curiosity in the making con- natured through special model building kits, specially selected books and sorts and crafts kits. Children in this age group also start to take a serious interest in music and are, therefore, likely to be interested in receiving a guitar or some sort of inexpensive musical instrument as a gift.

When children have passed the age of 12, they, like their great aunt Harriet, become impossible to buy gifts for. Your best bet then is to treat them like adults and ask them what they would like for Christmas. Selecting a gift from the list they give you assures their satisfaction and will maintain that element of surprise that is one of the main ingredients for gift giving.

If the older children on your Christmas list fail to provide you with a satisfactory gift list, you can always try to give them a white elephant. Who knows, perhaps it will become a fad.

Board Will Ask City Tax Refund

WARREN R. (BILL) VAUGHAN has been appointed manager of the international marine section of Stephens - Adamson Division of Borg Warner in Belleville. Mr. Vaughan in his new position will have control of this section in the Canadian and American associated plants, as well as the Norwegian associates in Oslo. Mr. Vaughan, of Lexington Crescent, is married and has two daughters. He received both a bachelor of science degree in engineering and a masters of business administration degree from Queen's University.

He joined Stephen-Adamson in 1968 and worked as design engineer. Later in his first major venture with the company he was in charge of setting up a research department in the firm. This department was instrumental in developing the loop belt, which is becoming known throughout the world as a major breakthrough in belt conveyor design.

Hastings county board of education decided Monday night to ask the city for a tax refund of $2,584 — the cost the city annually assesses for garbage pickup at four secondary schools. The school board contracts with Seaway Disposals Ltd. for garbage pickup at the four schools.

The board also authorized its plant department to buy about five four-cubic-yard capacity metal containers for schools where accumulated garbage presents a vermin and fire hazard.

Cost to be board for city garbage disposal at 14 elementary schools is $1,473.

For garbage pickup by Seaway Disposals at the four city high schools, at Bayside and at four other south Hastings schools the board pays a total of $2,444.

For garbage disposal at 19 other schools in centre and south Hastings, the board pays custodians and private concerns a total of $6,885 annually.

If the board were to undertake garbage disposal at the same schools by its own personnel and equipment, the cost is estimated at $27,945. annually.

The plan department estimated that garbage is generated a: schools at the rate of one plastic garbage bag for a day for every 40 students.

A trustee suggested that most of the garbage from schools would be paper, and asked plant controller Keith Hawkins if any consideration had been given to recycling.

Mr. Hawkins said that recycling of school paper waste would require a compactor to reduce the bulk and would present storage problems. The cost to the board would be too great to make it practical at present.

After the presentations, the commit ee viewed a videotape of the parade shown through facilities made available by the Ontario School for the Deaf. The same tape was aired over Cablevue channel two the evening of the parade.

The parade marshal's trophy, for the most deserving entry in the annual harbinger of Christmas went to William R. Kirk School. The most spectacular flos award, the "Warpy" O'Brien Trophy, was presented to St. Michael's school.

Agency Would Provide Marital, Family Advice

A steering committee, composed of members of Belleville's social welfare service organizations, has drafted a preliminary outline for an agency that would provide counselling for people troubled with family problems.

At its initial meeting Monday, the committee, under chairman Norman Slater, a social worker with Belleville General Hospital's mental heath unit, also undertook to write a brief that would be presented to possible funding sources.

It is hoped that the brief's statistical data will define the overload experienced by present group providing counselling. Various services, such as the mental health unit, Children's Aid Society and Children Services, will be polled to gauge the number of referrals hat would have been made had the proposed agency existed.

Such an agency would be entirely separate from either volunteer or governmental organizations now working in marital or parent-child relations fields. It would establish its own board of directors to which a paid professional staff, or single counsellor, would be accountable.

Emphasis would be on the agency's role as a co-ordinator of present services in family counselling, with partners' attention paid to schools. The agency would also act as a resource centre for educational purposes.

Fees would be charged on a sliding scale geared to the client's ability to pay. Ideally, the committee hoped the organization would provide social services such as bookkeeping, without a great deal of emphasis placed on how he client was referred to the agency.

For two-year-old Jane Freeman, of Belleville, a visit to toyland at Christmas just fails short of being this side of heaven. It isn't the same for adults. In fact, Christmas shopping for children can be a nightmare, if you don't try to remember the special interests of varying age groups.

Boston, Philly Ahead

Statistics Tell Leaders' Stories

MONTREAL (CP) — Boston Bruins have scored more goals than any other team in the National Hockey League this season and Philadelphia Flyers have given up the fewest.

This is basically why the two teams lead their respective divisions however a glance at their power-play and penalty-killing statistics released today reveals a clearer insight into the overall picture.

The Bruins have scored 29 of their 118 goals this season on the power play. The 29 goals have come on 79 power-play opportunities, an efficiency of 36.7 per cent or better than a goal every three opportunities.

New York Rangers are second in power-play efficiency with 28.3 per cent—25 goals on 75 tries—while Buffalo Sabres are third with 21 goals on 76 opportunities for a 27.6 advantage.

The Flyers have the best penalty-killing record in the league. Philadelphia has given up only 16 power-play goals during the 16 times they have been shorthanded. They have been shorthanded 43 times more than the second-highest club, Vancouver Canucks who have been penalized 100 times, but have allowed fewer power-play goals than seven other clubs.

The Flyers have become so proficient in killing off penalties that they have scored 11 times while the opposition has held the man advantage more than twice as many shorthanded goals as any other team.

Chicago Black Hawks are second in penalty killing with an 87.7 per cent efficiency. The Hawks have allowed eight power-play goals in 65 shorthanded situations.

Phil Esposito of Boston still maintains his lead in the scoring race with 57 points on 28 goals and 29 assists. Bruins' defenseman Bobby Orr is next with 15 goals and 30 assists for 45 points with Ken Hodge of Boston Bruins third with 18 goals and 21 assists for 40 points.

Richard Martin of Buffalo, who scored the 100th in his NHL career during the weekend, occupies fourth spot with 19 goals and 17 assists for 36 points.

Philadelphia's Bernie Parent has the best individual goals against average—1.57 in 1,449 minutes played—and also leads the league in shutouts with six.

Dave Schultz of the Flyers leads the league in penalties with 146 minutes.

Maloney Shaken After Injury

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — like nightmare. I'm no eye injury to Toronto Maple Leafs' Greg Neeld has left Kitchener Ranger defenceman Dave Maloney a shaken young man.

It was Maloney's high stick that caught Neeld in the left eye late in an Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A series hockey game here Friday night.

There's a possibility the talented 18-year-old Toronto defenceman may lose the sight of his eye. Doctors at Toronto General Hospital have been unable to determine the extent of the injury because of swelling.

Maloney is disturbed by the bad publicity he received in Toronto newspapers. He said Monday the injury to Neeld "was an accident, nothing more."

"What a day this has been," Maloney said during a Ranger workout. "I was at my uncle's funeral this morning and people were coming up to me saying how you must have really stuck it to that guy.

"I just can't believe it. It's hatchet man. I've never played that way. I like to think I'm tough and if I have to resort to that kind of play, I'll quit and go to work at the slaughter house cutting up pigs."

Maloney was playing on the left side with about five minutes to go in the game and Kitchener in front 7-3. He turned and tried to hook Neeld who was breaking past him on his left.

"He faked a shot and went to the outside," Maloney said. "I tried to hook him to break his stride.

"I didn't realize he was skating so low. It was just an accident and I feel as bad as anyone about it." Maloney was given a five-minute high-sticking major for the incident.

Norman Neeld, Greg's father, was reported to have protested against stick-swinging incidents in junior A hockey.

He also mentioned the crude methods some players use to stop other, more-talented players.

"That was a lot of blankety-blank that was printed this morning," Maloney retorted. "There was no stick-swinging and I have never relied on using my stick as a weapon."

Maloney said he went to St. Mary's hospital to visit Neeld after the game Friday night but Maloney's mother said he already been transferred to Toronto General.

"When I heard (in emergency) that he had been released, I thought everything was all right," Maloney added.

Kitchener plays the Marlboros in Toronto tonight and Maloney expects the Toronto team to run at him in retaliation.

"Thats all part of the game. If they run at me, that's fine, but if they try anything more than that, well . . . I just hope they have enough common sense to know it was an accident," Maloney said.

Coach Eddie Bush was also upset by some press reports of Neelds injury.

Bush described the stories as "cheap sensationalism."

Play Parity WHA Trademark

SANTA ANA, Calif. (CP) — The World Hockey Association can boast it has one of the most evenly-balanced groups of clubs in the sport so it's no surprise that this week the WHA is crowing louder than ever.

In the introduction to its weekly statistics, the WHA head office says parity is the league trademark and, for proof, points out that no fewer than six teams are locked in second-place ties.

In the East Division, behind leading New England Whalers are Cleveland Crusaders, Quebec Nordiques and Toronto Toros. In the West, behind leading Edmonton Oilers, are Minnesota Fighting Saints, Houston Aeros and Winnipeg Jets. All six clubs have 29 points.

The Toros are singled out as the most remarkable of the second-place challengers.

The Toros' infirmary report shows goaltender Bunny Bissley with a separated shoulder, Bob Leslie and Steve Cuddie with bruised shoulders, while rookie Wayne Dillon and Tom Martin are playing with a broken finger and sore ribs respectively.

But then the Toros have Wayne Carleton, who had three goals and six assists last week to take over the league scoring lead with 41 points.

Edmonton's Jim Harrison, the leader for the last four weeks, dropped into a second-place tie with Minnesota's Mike Walton, whose five goals and three assists in four games vaulted him to 38 points, three behind Carleton.

Hawley Seven Away From 500

LAUREL, Md. (CP) — Hawley Sandy Hawley moved to within seven of his goal of 500 winning rides this year when he scored two victories Monday at Laurel race track.

Hawley has had at least one winner every day since last Thursday when he surpassed Willie Shoemaker's 26-year-old record of 485 victories in one year.

Monday, he had wins aboard Lotta Jack in the second race and Alebuse in the eighth.

Lotta Jack returned $4, $3, and $2.60 and Alebouse paid $8.20, $3.60 and $2.80.

Hawley, a 34-year-old Whitby, Ont., native, also finished second in the third race aboard Notaskia, which returned $3.20 and $2.60, and was third in the fourth race on Deta You, which paid $3.80.

Alebouse, a four-year-old came from last place and caught the favored Symmetric in the last few strides of the eighth race for Hawley's 480th victory.

Alebouse was running last in the six-horse field in the $8,000 allowance race until Hawley took him up the middle for better footing on the muddy track in the home stretch. At the three-sixteenth pole, Hawley asked for more speed and Alebouse responded, picking up the front-runners with ease and drawing away at the wire.

Alebouse was clocked in 1:14 for the six furlongs and beat Symmetric by a half-length.

Symmetric raced in Ontario this year and is trained by Toronto's Carl Chapman.

Hawley is expected to ride at least four horses today. He's on Milliner or Musical Minstrel in the first, Hall's Song or Swedish Baker in the second, Dragnet or Clouding in the eighth and Virtu in the ninth.

Bud Riley Replaces Spavital

WINNIPEG (CP) — Saskatchewan Roughriders' management may soon demand a coach-development subsidy from the Canadian Football League.

In recent years the Riders have watched five of their coaches move on to become head men at other CFL teams, the latest being Edward (Bud) Riley who was hired Monday by Winnipeg Blue Bombers to replace Jim Spavital.

It was the second time the Riders provided a head coach for Winnipeg. Spavital was an assistant in Regina before taking over Winnipeg in 1970. He was fired at the end of last season when the Bombers plunged from first place a year earlier to the bottom of the conference.

Other assistant coaches who moved on to head coaching jobs were Jack Gotta of Ottawa Rough Riders, Jim Duncan formerly of Calgary Stampeders and Eagle Keys of British Columbia Lions.

Actually Keys had been a head coach in Edmonton before being fired in the early 1960s and joining the Riders as an assistant under Bob Shaw. He was a Rider quarterback also.

For Riley, 48, the move to Winnipeg fulfills a long-standing ambition.

"I've been thinking about getting a head coach's job for 20 years," he told a news conference.

"It's a great opportunity for me to be on an organization such as the Bombers. It's the biggest honor ever bestowed on me."

Riley, small by football standards, is a native of Alabama and was a shining performer in high school football, basketball and track.

He played halfback at University of Idaho but was never really considered for pro football.

"They just don't draft 151-pound backs," he said.

After graduating from university he spend seven years as a high school coach at Weiser, Idaho, and three more at Lewiston, Idaho. In 1962, he took over as coach of University of Idaho and stayed there three years before becoming defensive secondary coach at Oregon State.

Riley, hired over 20 other applicants, said he would give most of his attention to the defensive secondary and hire an assistant to coach the offense.

"Coaching defence has always been a great challenge," he said.

He said he believes he will be taking over a winning team and doesn't forese a major rebuilding job.

But this doesn't preclude a fighting chance for rookies in next year's training camp. Everybody will get the same opportunity to make the team, he said.

Does Riley bend under pressure?

"Pressure?, he asked. "I enjoy coaching so much I'm getting paid for a hobby. I think you put pressure on yourself. The person I have to satisfy first is myself. You have to work had to be a success."

He said he hopes to name two assistants later this week and added that assistant Fred Highlower has a job if he is interested.

BOWLERS PICKED

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Lawn Bowling Council announced Monday the following team will compete in the Commonwealth Games Jan. 26-Feb. 2 at Christchurch, N.Z.: Singles, Neil Salkeld, Caledonia, Ont.; pairs, Jim Franklin and Jim McAuley, Lachine, Que.; fours, Ron Jones and George Robbins, London, Ont., Graeme Jarvis, Vancouver and Bruce Miller, Belleville, Ont.

O.J. Within Distance Of Record, 2000

BUFFALO (AP) — O. J. Simpson of Buffalo Bills is within striking distance of Jimmy Brown's season rushing record of 1,863 yards and a player's away from the 2,000-yard mark.

Can he do it with only one game left in the regular National Football League season? For that matter, will the Bills let him?

O.J. needs only 61 yards in the game against the Jets at New York Sunday to wipe out the mark that Brown set while Cleveland Browns in 1963.

Since Simpson has rambled for 100 yards or more in 10 games this season, his chances of shattering Brown's record are excellent.

But to hit the 2,000-yard plateau, Simpson would need 197 yards, a much more formidable task. But that kind of yardage is within Simpson's ability, as he proved in the season opener at New England when he ripped off 250 yards for an NFL record.

And in Sunday's game against the Patriots here, Simpson ran for 219 yards on a snow-coated field as the Bills trimmed New England 27-13. The yardage gave Simpson another NFL record—100 or more yards in 10 regular-season games.

That collapse of Brown's record of nine. And it enabled O.J. to tie another of Brown's marks. Until Sunday, Brown had been the only player to get two 200-yard games, rushing for 232 against Philadelphia Eagles en route to his 1,863-yard season 10 years ago.

Patriot coach Chuck Fairbanks said the Jets can stop Simpson "if they break both his ankles."

Bills coach Lou Saban was a little philosophical about records. "I'm not going to kill off O.J. for a record," he said. "Winning against the Jets is the only important thing.

Simpson, looking forward to the Jets game, said: "That's going to be a lot of yards to get next week."

He noted that the Bills have a chance to crack Miami's year-old team rushing record of 2,960 yards. Buffalo needs 177 yards on the ground to turn the trick.

"If I can break the individual record and if the team can beat Miami's record, it'll be the biggest day of my life," Simpson said.

Simpson is within easy reach of another Jim Brown mark, the most carries in one season—currently at 290, only seven away from Brown's record 305 in 1961.

JOHN PAYNE

Rams Bomb Giants 40-6

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Chuck Knox, rookie head coaching sensation of the National Football League, has his Los Angeles Rams cruising on a steady course toward the playoffs.

The Rams, who sailed away to the National Conference West crown more than a week ago, downed New York Giants 40-6 Monday night.

"The Rams are a real fine football team, the finest running game all around that I have seen," said Giants coach Alex Webster.

Led by Lawrence McCutcheon's 80 yards in 11 carries—raising the second-year pro to 1,014 yards this season—the Rams rushed for 219 yards.

In the second half, the Rams o-k- a 17-3 lead on McCutcheon's 11-yard touchdown run and linebacker Isiah Robertson's 49-yard touchdown return of a Norm Snead pass.

Quarterback John Hadl threw the 19-yard scoring pass to McCutcheon.

Hadl said the Rams, with an 11-3 record, weren't overly excited Monday night.

"You don't get emotionally fired up because we're already in the playoffs and looking ahead to Dallas. But we've still got to work on fundamentals and get down to Dallas ready to play football."

It was obvious that the Rams don't believe Dallas Cowboys will lose to St. Louis Cardinals Sunday and give Washington Redskins a chance to win the NFC East title.

Emphasize Simplicity at Innsbruck

INNSBRUCK (Reuter) — This Austrian city is staging Winter Olympics in 1976 for the second time in 12 years—and the emphasis is on simplicity.

Two reasons are given by officials for the simple touch: To save money and to restore the old Olympic spirit at a time when sports leaders are worried by the menace of commercialism.

Innsbruck has coined a name for the Olympics—the Unpretentious Games—which organizers say is in line with the city's modest aims.

Olympic leaders are generally concerned over rising costs of the Summer and Winter Games.

Innsbruck says it is determined to hold total costs to about $40 million. Although that may seem expensive, it is only one-eighth of Montreal's projected budget for the 1976 Summer Olympics.

Plank Takes Downhill

VAL D'ISERE, France (AP) — Herbert Plank, a 19-year-old newcomer from the German-speaking Alto Adige region of Italy, astonished his Austrian rivals Monday with a downhill descent to win the first international downhill ski race of the season.

Plank, a farmer's son and member of Italy's mountain constabulary, completed the 3,280-metre track, with a total drop of 915 metres, in two minutes, 11.39 seconds, for his first international victory in a career that season as a member of Italy's main team.

Plank started down the course behind his main Austrian rivals, who watched the wide-eyed astonishment as the Italian's time went up on the board. Austria's 21-year-old Werner Grissmann, who had the best practice times, was left in second place with 2:12.33.

Italian team director Mario Cotelli said Italian and Austrian racers took nine of the first 10 places and "this proves conclusively that Italy and Austria are the world's top ski nations" and can expect to sweep the honors at St. Moritz."

The French national team, decimated and demoralized by a purge of its six most experienced members on the eve of the race, placed no racer better than the 31st of Patrice Pellat Pinet, who finished in 2:16.83.

Austria's Reinhard Tritscher, who came fourth behind his compatriot Franz Klammer, is now the combined standings of the first meet counting for the 1975 World Cup. Tritscher placed sixth in the only other men's race of the meet, a giant slalom run in two heats Friday and Saturday. He won the downhill race here last year.

Austria's David Zwilling, seventh in the downhill and 12th in the giant slalom, took second place in the combined standings. Norway's Erik Haker, 11th in the downhill and eighth in the giant slalom, was third, and Jim Hunter, of Calgary, 21st in the downhill in 2:15.79 and fourth in the giant slalom, was fourth in the combined result.

Other Canadians in the downhill were Ken Sarrington of Calgary, 28th in 2:16.71; Dave Irwin of Thunder Bay, 43rd in 2:18.01; and Dave Cooper of Vancouver, 53rd in 2:20.82.

Switzerland's 1972 Olympic gold medallist, Bernhard Russi, failed to get a racer to intrude into the Italian-Austrian monopoly of the first ten placers in the downhill. He finished ninth in 2:14.06.

Another took the lead in the men's World Cup standings with 24 points. His fourth place in the downhill and sixth place in the giant slalom gave him 17 points, just under the new World Cup rules this was doubled because he had the best combined results.

Hintersee and Plank were next with 20 points in second place. Hunter was eighth with 11 points.

There was little snow in Innsbruck during the 1964 Games and organizers were forced to fall in the Austrian army to haul snow from other parts of Tyrol province.

"If we succeeded in 1964, without snow, we shall be even more successful in 1976—provided the snow falls," says Innsbruck Bürgermeister (mayor) Alois Lugger.

Lugger says there will be nothing luxurious about the 1976 Games. "We want simple games, but they must be perfect."

Lugger is an opponent of Olympic lavishness.

"It would not be right only for the bigger cities of the world to stage Olympic games. This would be wrong from the standpoint of the Olympic spirit."

The decision to stage the Games in Innsbruck has given a publicity lift to the area's tourist industry, now suffering from heavy cancellation of bookings largely because of currency problems.

Long regarded as a cheap holiday centre, Austria is now considered costly by Americans and Britons, partly because their own currencies have fallen in value while the Austrian shilling has twice been revalued in the last year.

The cost of building a new Olympic village is regarded as a key investment in the future. Thirty-five apartment blocks are being built, with a total of 2,000 spaces to be shared by an estimated 1,700 sportsmen from 40 nations.

When the Olympics are over the apartments will be used for housing, as was The Olympic village built in 1964.

A leading Olympic official said Monday that future Winter Olympics may be rotated among a few centres which already have facilities.

"Such discussions are now under way," said Dr. Karl Heinz Klee, secretary general of the NOK Games. Such an action would eliminate problems posed by protests from environmentalists.

Klee mentioned several sites which he said could share in such a rotation. They were Squaw Valley, Calif.; Lake Placid, N.Y.; St. Moritz, Switzerland; Garmisch Partenkirchen, West Germany; Oslo, Norway, and Sapporo, Japan.

Life Suspension Lifted

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Racing Commission lifted a life suspension on harness horseman Rheo Filion and granted him a probationary drivers' licence for 1974.

The licence restricts Filion, 28, of Angers, Que., from being employed by anybody other than his brother, Herve, who this year is wrapping up his sixth straight North American driving title.

The limitations announced Monday state that Rheo only drive horses owned and-or trained by Herve Filion and maintained in Herve's stable.

Henderson Out

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Maple Leafs will be without Brian Henderson for two road games this week and possibly Saturday's National Hockey League contest here with New York Rangers.

Henderson suffered a severe charleyhorse in Sunday's game at Buffalo, won by the Sabres 5-3.

Captain Dave Keon's availability was also in doubt Monday night when the team left for games at St. Louis tonight and in Atlanta Thursday.

Keon, who missed Sunday's game with a swollen left hand, skated with his team-mates Monday but didn't take part in the physical portion of the drill.

Labor Pains False

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau's wife, Margaret, expecting her second child, returned home Monday evening after spending several hours in the Civic Hospital maternity ward.

The prime minister's office issued a brief statement that said Mrs. Trudeau is in good health, and described as a fair assumption that she may have experienced premature labor pains.

The Trudeaus' first child, Justin Pierre, was born on Christmas Day, 1971, also at the Civic.

The prime minister and his wife, the former Margaret Sinclair, were married in North Vancouver in March, 1971.

Mr. Trudeau is 54, his wife is 25.

Canada Not on List

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada is not on Saudi Arabia's oil embargo list, Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said Monday.

He told the Commons that information gathered by his department indicates that Canada remains on the Arab list of neutral countries and is not affected by a total embargo on oil shipments to countries such as the United States.

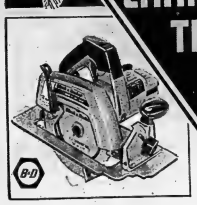
His statement conflicted with comments in a television interview Sunday by Sheik Zaki Yamani, oil minister for Saudi Arabia.

The oil minister said Canada had been cut off totally from Saudi Arabian oil supplies.

Mr. Macdonald said his officials could not reach Yamani personally but they had talked with one of his staff members Monday morning.

Potter Reports Probe

TORONTO (CP) — Health Minister Richard Potter told the legislature Monday that an investigation into allegations of mistreatment of patients by staff at the Ontario Hospital School at Orillia is proceeding.



He said charges of misconduct were brought to his attention some months ago and inquiries are being made.

However, Dr. Potter said it is difficult to substantiate charges of this type.

THAT FOUR LETTER WORD

HOME — means everything to the happy family. To have its fullest meaning it should be your own. There is no security in rented accommodation. Let us show you one of our models now nearing completion on Dundas Boulevard. This house with attached carport has L-shaped living dining room, large kitchen with ample eating area for average family and 3 bedrooms. Basement divided for future rec room.

A BAD FOUR LETTER WORD

MOVE — can you tell when circumstances on the part of your landlord will force him to utter this ominous word? When it happens it's not much fun. Preclude this happening with a home of your own. Why should your children have their schooling disrupted because your landlord can't no longer look after your accommodation. For their sake have the foresight to own your own. For as little as $15,500 down we can offer 3 bedroom townhouse accommodation that is your very own. We have a model sale to show you.

THE BEST FOUR LETTER WORD

OURS — not only is it pleasing to the ear but it is pleasing to the pocket book. Once your payments are set they fluctuate very very little for the term of the mortgage, not so with rent! It continues to climb and what is worse it leaves no equity for your family to look to in the years ahead. There is no way to accumulate money quicker than in owning a house. We have a model in West Belleville the plan of which we built last year in the east end and has recently resold with a $13,000.00 profit. Who is to say it won't happen again. Ask to see our many houses in all parts of the city.

Jacques Cousteau Relaxes After Antarctic Expedition

NEW YORK (AP) — With it's months of Antarctic exploration safely trapped on film, Jacques Cousteau sat with his morning coffee at his hotel, quietly watching the grey, blustery skies.

He smiled slightly when asked whether he stays with his expeditions from start to finish.

"Almost never," he said, then began laughing. "Except for example, the Antarctic shows. There was absolutely no commuting possibility there."

A silver-haired, somewhat frail-looking man of 63, Cousteau is in his sixth season making regular underwater specials for television — 24 of them.

They have drawn critical and popular acclaim and made him a unique kind of television star, a status he bears with a gentle, detached air of amusement.

A retired French naval officer and graduate of the French Naval Academy at Brest, he has explored nearly every ocean area in the world.most of his travels aboard the Calypso, a former minesweeper he has converted to an oceanographic research ship.

Do he and his colleagues make the expeditions primarily as scientists or as documentarians?

"That's a very good question, but it's there that lies the originality of this setup," he said. "This is the first time, I think, in the world, that a lasting research organization is entirely funded by television.

"Normally, you have a scientific expedition funded by a government or an institution, and whatever photographic or cinematographic work is done is a byproduct.

"But here, it is exactly the reverse. Science is a byproduct of television in my existence ever since its funding by television in 1967.

"I've had a financial setup which combines all the money I can get from this country, or England, or France, Germany and Italy. It's about enough to finance the expeditions we make.

"It's not a profit-making organization and I'm not going to get rich by it. But we are very satisfied when we are successful in both research and our film work."

What scientific results do the expeditions yield? "Quite a lot," said Cousteau, who is director of the Oceanographic Ins-itute of Monaco. "Whatever findings or experiments or measurements we make during the expeditions are exploited."

He also gets research requests from other organizations at expedition time. "but I cannot satisfy them all. If by chance, some requests fall into line with what we're doing, yes, we take them on."

When assessing ski resorts serious skiers are interested in vertical drop and Whistler Mountain in British Columbia is in first place in North America. With a drop of 4,280 feet Whistler lies 75 miles north of Vancouver. Sleek accommiuns and lodges are scattered around the base and a variety of double chairlifts, a gondola and T-bars get skiers up the flanks of the mountain. (CP Photo)

CANADA CLUB MEETING, 8 P.M. Tuesday, Queen Victoria School, Pine Street, Belleville.

Environmental Design Course Proves Unique

CALGARY (CP) — "We do our own thing here," says Janet Beseker, a student in the University of Calgary faculty of environmental design.

"Well, we take the total approach to the problem," says William T. Perks, the dean.

"Environment is a multi-faceted thing. We feel it is better to let each student progress the way he wants."

To Miss Beseker and other students it's an unique earning experience.

You dont need a special major to' enter. The faculty has students with bachelor's degrees in geography, physics, psychology, social welfare, chemistry, architecture, engineering, economics, political science, fine arts, industrial design, history, home economics and a few others Dean Perks cant' recall.

There is no rigid program of study, although each student is expected to have a good appreciation of the various problems of the environment before he receives a master's degree in environmental design.

There are three interlocking s-reams in the program: architecture, urbanism and environmental science. Their general focuses are the building industry, human settlements and human and natural resources.

"Emphasis is on interdisciplinarity and teamwork, so that practitioners in each of the three streams are acquainted with the language, philosophy and problems of all three," says the faculty calendar.

To provide professional competence, each degree option offers several areas for concentrated study. Environmental science, for example, has behavioral planning, information and policy analysis, ecological management and technological systems as areas for concentrated study.

The average age of the student body is 27. And the program usually takes three years, compared with the average of two years for other master's programs.

"I think you have to spend three years before you can feel confident in leaving," said Bryan McKay, a third-year student. "You could do it in two years, but tha: would be defeating the purpose."

The faculty, established two years ago, originated from recommendations made in 1963 by the Alberta Association of Architects.

Dean Perks, a 38-year-old native of Montreal, was director of long-range planning at the National Capital Commission in Ottawa when he was appointed first dean of the faculty on Jan. 1, 1971.

The first students were accepted in September, 1972.

"The students are challenged to question whether what we have been doing is acceptable for the fu ure," he said.

One aspect of the program is called practicum. It is a system under which students are placed in a variety of employment situations appropriate to their developed skills and desired objectives.

Miss Beseker, 22, graduated in architecture from Montreal's Sir Institute of Technology in 1971. She still is studying architecture, but said studying architecture in the faculty of environmental design is different.

"Here we are exposed to other people's problems," she said. "We learn to design buildings in harmony with the environment. It is not narrow and confined, as you would do in a school of architecture."

One of every three students at the faculty is a woman.

"Women are more sensitive than men in a lot of areas concerning the environment," Dean Perks said.

Help your son get ahead.

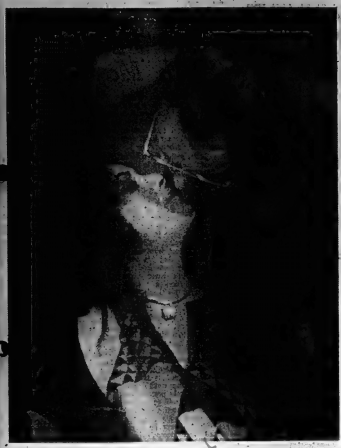
This boy knows that courtesy is good business

Newspaper route management can be a boy's first step forward

A BOY with a newspaper route truly is in business for himself. With an assist from our people who are experienced in working with boys.

He buys his newspapers from us and retails them to you.

He sells, he delivers, and he collects. Like any good businessman, he keeps records (you can see how valuable this is in applying the lessons he learns in the classroom in a practical way).



And like any good businessman, he shows a profit. A boy with a newspaper route earns money that can help him build a sizable bank account of his own. Useful for the things he wants. Even for a college education.

Not only does a newspaper route sharpen a young boy's business sense (which will be helpful to him throughout life, no matter what career he chooses). It also offers him some important extras — the ability to deal with people, and the lessons of promptness, of care, of self-reliance, and of good manners.

In these ways, a newspaperboy manages to keep a step ahead of other boys in preparing for life.

If your son wants to handle a route, put him in touch with us. One may be available for him in your neighborhood. It will be an unusual opportunity for the self-advancement you want him to have.

Trying Again

Richard Burton leans to kiss his wife Elizabeth Taylor at Los Angeles International Airport as they headed for London after what a spokesman said was a reconciliation. They separated in July and appeared headed for divorce. She wears a diamond heart necklace he gave her Friday when he visited her at UCLA Medical Center, where she underwent abdominal surgery. She boarded the airplane in a wheelchair. (AP Wirephoto)

Liz, Dick Return To Scene Of Romance

NAPLES, Italy (AP) — Actor Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton arrived here Monday to begin their second reconciliation attempt with a holiday in Italy, where their romance began more than a decade ago.

Miss Taylor, recuperating from surgery, emerged smiling from the couple's 12-seat private jet. She appeared tired and was helped down the steps of the plane by her husband.

The Burtons checked into a hotel by the Bay of Naples and spent the entire afternoon in their room, and refusing to accept telephone calls from reporters.

Burton and Miss Taylor, whose celebrated relationship began in Rome on the set of the film Cleopatra, separated last July. They had a tearful reunion in Rome two weeks later.

But two weeks after that, a spokesman for Miss Taylor announced that the couple was seeking an amicable divorce.

Miss Taylor has been seen in the company of Henry Wynbert, a former car salesman in Los Angeles.

Burton, 48, flew to Los Angeles last weekend where Miss Taylor, 41, had undergone surgery for the removal of an ovarian cyst. In a London stopover on the flight from Los Angeles, Burton said they will go to Venice and Rome where we will spend Christmas with each other."

Japanese Companies Testing Pollution-free Pulp Process

TOKYO (CP) — Japanese paper companies are testing a pollution-free method of making pulp but the method, if successful, illustrates the Japanese dilemma.

The new process eliminates pollution from pulp plants at the cost of a sharp increase in consumption of energy. In this case electricity—increasingly expensive in Japan.

The Japan Pulp and Paper Research Institute, a joint venture by the five paper companies in the country has set up a pilot plant to test the process which may be the basis for the survival of the industry in Japan.

The ministry of international trade and industry in a report issued a year ago, said the only solution to pollution problems of the pulp industry is "an actual sharp reduction in the amount of contamination released."

"Without this solution, it has to be borne in mind, there will be no basis for its existence as an industry or as an enterprise."

Pollution, particularly air pollution, has become a major problem in Japan as rapid industrialization, using the least set but often not the cleanest development techniques, has spread over a relatively small space.

The report from the federal ministry directed the industry to develop a "closed process" for making pulp, involving a system which recycles waste.

Hiroshi Matsuura, manager of one of the institute's research units, said they estimate the new method is not only clean but cheaper than the process now used in Japan's pulp mills around the world.

The key to the institute's pulping system is a patented pre-treatment process which, by mechanical means, shreds wood chips into small particles. Shredding allows use of less caustic chemicals and this makes recycling easier.

The process does not use sulphur, which causes the rotten-egg smell that makes old pulp mills easily identifiable.

The chemicals are recovered for reuse and process steam can be used to generate some of the electricity needed to operate the mill. Matsuura estimates they can recycle more than 99 per cent of chemicals used.

(In Montreal, a spokesman for the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association said "groundwood" processes—which utilize a high degree of mechanical pre-shredding—are common in Canada in operations making newsprint.

Matsuura said they project their new method will use about 25 per cent less wood—because of more efficient shredding—and the chemical cost will be reduced to one-tenth of the cost of chemicals used in the conventional process.

But the amount of electricity needed to run a plant using the new method is projected to be about seven times the amount needed for a conventional mill.

Hepburn, Williams Make Strong Team

Katharine Hepburn and Tennesee Williams — individually they are highly talented, respected and honored by their peers. Hepburn is the only actress to win three Academy awards. In addition to eight nominations, and a gold medal as the best film actress in the world. Williams has won two Pulitzer prizes and countless drama critics awards. Together they form a unique team, a classic combination of superb actress and incisive playwright, which produces a theatrical event of rare moment.

Such is a new two-hour version of Williams' classic play The Glass Menagerie which has its world premiere on CBC television at 8.30 p.m. on Wednesday, December 12. For Hepburn it is her dramatic debut on television and she triumphs in a role which extended the talents of such stars as Helen Hayes, Laurette Taylor, Gertrude Lawrence and Shirley Booth.

The respect and admiration which the playwright and the actress have for each other has been demonstrated on more than one occasion. In 1959 when Hepburn went to London to play Mrs. Venables in the film version of Williams' Suddenly Last Summer she spent a whole month studying the playwright's work. She read every one of his plays, all his prose and even his poetry. In her opinion Williams is the best American playwright.

For his part, Williams was so impressed with Hepburn's performance in Suddenly Last Summer that he wrote "Kate is a playwright's dream actress. She makes dialogue sound better than it is by a matchless beauty and clarity of diction and by a fineness of intelligence and sensibility that illuminates every shade of meaning in every line she speaks. She invests every scene, each 'bit', with the intuition of an artist born to her part."

He was fired up by her feeling for his dialogue that he wrote a play specially for her "The Night of the Iguana". Hepburn was flattered but turned down the part. She told Williams — "It captures the wrong part of my imagination. I admire it but I couldn't live in it". They discussed the problem at length but Hepburn could not be persuaded. The following year she was to be performed on Broadway by Margaret Leighton and Bette Davis and was impressed by the play and their performances. She told Williams when she saw him — "you're lucky — would have ruined it." Williams did not agree.

To Your Good Health

Gums Infected, Teeth May Go

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband had to have his wisdom teeth pulled, and the dentist is enraged and found his other teeth full of pus, and told him he should have them all out soon as he had pyorrhea.

The dentist pulled the wisdom teeth and the four next to them, right in.

My husband is 55 and never would go to a dentist. This was the first time.

He has had a lot of sinus trouble and headaches and is still having them. We can't tell him his teeth may be causing it. He keeps saying, "The dentist doesn't know what he is talking about" that his teeth are fine and he never had any decay. Can you write about pyorrhea? Is there any treatment to save his teeth—Mrs. C.B.

I'm not a dentist, but can give you at least a little information about pyorrhea. It is a disease that starts in the gums and is distinctly difficult to treat unless treatment is started early.

Because he doesn't have more teeth are lost because of gum diseases than from tooth decay, and it is perfectly possible for entirely sound teeth to be lost because of infected gums and infection—as in your husband's case. When he says he never has had any decay, that's hardly but it has nothing to do with whether his teeth are going to have to come out.

Since X-rays show pockets of infection (pus) around his teeth or at the roots, it is entirely possible, in fact likely that this area is contributing to his headaches and other problems.

I can offer your husband no advice except to stop arguing that the dentist doesn't know what he is talking about. The sooner he starts following the dentist's advice, the better off he will be.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: A good friend recently learned that she has rheumatoid arthritis. She is only 30 and has a two-year-old daughter. She is very depressed. I would like to help her. Please write it? Do you have any information available on rheumatoid arthritis?—Mrs. R.S.

You can't deny that rheumatoid arthritis is a serious problem, and it is a type of arthritis that can afflict the young as well as the old. But the younger patients respond to treatment better than older ones do—and before too much permanent damage has been done by the disease, usually.

Best suggestion I can make is that you learn about the nature of this disease. Then encourage your friend to stick with her treatment program. Because that is what prevents crippling in such cases. Giving up, however, is an invitation to crippling.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Sometimes I eat breakfast with a fork. Since the oats are cooked sausage with buttered toast, and coffee with milk. After she is through, she drinks a small can of unsweetened grapefruit juice.

She says this kills the calories she just ate. I say this isn't so. What do you say?—Mrs. R.H.

I say that the breakfast sounds like a wholesome one but as to the calories you are correct. There's nothing that falters the calories in the food once ingested.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Why is a cerebral thrombosis different from any other kind of stroke?—Mrs. R.V.,

It isn't. It's merely the technical term for the most frequent cause of stroke, blockage of a blood vessel in the brain.

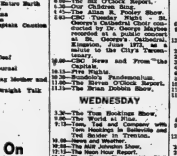
Yesterday's Answer

Bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

If you can keep your eyes off the East and West hands you can decide on the proper way to play today's hand.

You start by winning the first trick with dummy's ace of spades and are faced with the moment of decision at trick two. You are going to lead a red card and take a finesse, but which suit should that red card belong to?



When the hand was played, South led a trump. The finesse lost. Then he went back to dummy with the ace of clubs and took a second trump finesse. That worked also, but West showed out and since there was no way to get back to dummy for any more finesses, declarer had to lose one trick in each of the four suits.

He had misplayed the hand, but strangely enough no one has been able to convince him of that fact. He says, "I have been taught to play trumps. Was it my fault that they broke 4-1?"

It wasn't his fault that trumps broke 4-1, but he still should have gone after diamonds. He had only two entries to dummy but he only needed two diamond finesses. Once they worked he could play ace and another trump and make his contract.

Win at Bridge

Red suits pose a question

The bidding has been:

N	E	S	W
North	East	South	West
1♠	Pass	2♠	Pass
Pass	3♠	Pass	?

You, South, hold: ♠K J 6 5 ♥A 8 3 2 ♦K 10 4 ♣Q 8 5

What do you do now?

Bit too serious. You want to invite game with your 11 points, and not overstepping like the last spot.

Outhouses Banned

TORONTO (CP) — A recent move by the Toronto board of health has been given a warm response by construction workers in the city. Posh toilets and washrooms are to replace the portable wooden outhouses on construction sites. The move ends a seven-month fight by worker Pat Dunn to improve toilet facilities. Belaye described the outhouses as "shaperia boxes and sketch kits."

CP News Roundup

NDP MP Says Jobs Await All

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Most Canadians are more concerned about abuses of the social welfare system than about the energy crisis, says Max Saltsman, New Democratic Party member of Parliament for Waterloo.

He said the chief problem in Canada today is the transition from a work society to a non-work society in which many people are caught up in a "do-your-own-thing philosophy."

"A socialist has to see that society is rich and productive to ensure help for the sick and needy," he said.

"If everyone works for himself then where do you get the extra for those who can't care for themselves?"

He said the backlash against Canada's social welfare policies "is a much deeper crisis than energy."

Mr. Saltsman also attacked the so-called "corporate welfare bums" stance of the NDP in the last election campaign.

He said the NDP should expand its attack to everyone who abuses the system, not just corporations.

The NDP member said unemployment figures are "worthless" and there are enough job openings for those who want to work.

McKeough Likes Daylight Saving

TORONTO (CP) — Energy Minister Darcy McKeough indicated Monday the Ontario government is likely to favor a move to daylight time this winter.

He told the legislature the energy saving would be negligible—"marginal plus or minus, or about neutral."

However, he said there were "obvious economic implications in terms of industrial timetabling, in terms of television, radio, transportation schedules, stock exchanges and so on."

Outside the legislature, Mr. McKeough said these factors clearly favored Ontario's aligning itself with the United States which is moving closer to adoption of daylight time.

Lady Marine

CAMP PENDLETON, Calif. (AP) — The United States Marine Corps named its first woman unit commander Monday, a green-eyed brunette and opera lover whose company includes more than 2,000 men.

Col. Mary Hank, 44, is the first woman in the 198-year history of the marines, to be given direct command over men, a spokesman said.

Want Bank

WINNIPEG (CP) — Central co-operative and credit union organizations in Western Canada announced Monday the sponsorship of a petition to establish a new Canadian chartered bank with a head office here.

Henry DeCuypere, banking committee chairman of the Co-operative Society of Manitoba, one of the sponsors, told a news conference a full list of sponsors could not yet be released, but Federated Co-operatives of Saskatoon and Co-operative Implements of Winnipeg were included.

Limits Cut

TORONTO (CP) — New creel limits for trout and changes in the dates of fishing seasons for 1974 were announced Monday by Leo Bernier, natural resources minister.

In division 16, comprising the North Bay, Sudbury and Sault Ste. Marie areas, the daily creel limit on brook or speckled trout has been cut to seven from 15 and the weight restriction lifted.

The daily creel limit on lake trout throughout the province has been reduced to three from five, except for Lake Simcoe where it is two.

In southeastern Ontario, Lennox and Addington county and east to the Quebec border, be open for lake trout has been set for the second Saturday in March to the second Sunday in September.

Another new regulation for bids the use of live bait-fish in Algonquin Park.

TORONTO (CP) — The Red Cap aerobatic team, the only professional civilian team of its kind in North America, will be available from next spring for air shows and other events, the team announced recently. Led by Bill Lovereseed, formerly head of the RAF's famous Red Arrows, the team is equipped with five two-seater biplanes.

Human Rights Board Planned

OTTAWA (CP) — The government plans to create a human rights commission to combat discrimination and to protect individuals from unfair actions by government, Justice Minister Otto Lang announced Monday.

He said the commission will be called the Commission of Human Rights and Interests. Legislation would be introduced in Parliament next year, and he told reporters he expects the commission will be functioning before the end of 1974.

His announcement was welcomed by opposition party spokesmen.

Mr. Lang said the commission will be independent and will seek to end discrimination for race, color, sex, marital status, languages, religion or anything else in all areas under federal jurisdiction.

The commissioners, probably five, would provide a forum of appeal for those who feel that existing institutions have not dealt fairly with them.

Provisions for the protection of women's rights, originally planned for inclusion in the Labor Code, would be part of the human rights commission legislation.

It would not take over the work of such persons as Keith Spicer, federal language commissioner, but would deal with language discrimination in areas not touched by Mr. Spicer's mandate.

Mr. Lang said the commission will report to Parliament but will be free to make public reports about situations it thinks need correction.

If the commission finds discrimination it would seek to correct it through conciliation. If this failed a quasi-judicial board would be created to study the commission complaints and see if they were justified.

The board could make an order for a discriminatory situation to be corrected.

If that order was not heeded, the commission would take the offender to court.

The concept of the commission is far broader than that of an ombudsman system, which is restricted to helping individuals who feel they are injured by the government.

Lewis Rescues Wells

Legislature Invaded By Irate Teachers

TORONTO (CP) — Irate teachers, who earlier in the day had demonstrated both inside and outside the legislature buildings, returned for the evening sitting Tuesday, jamming every seat in the public gallery.

In contrast to the afternoon demonstration, the estimated 200 teachers attending the evening session were relatively orderly. They were angered by a bill aimed at ending a dispute between the teachers and Ontario school boards.

Speaker Allan Reuter had to caution them twice to refrain from interruption, mostly in the form of laughter and applause.

Earlier in the day, almost 1,500 elementary and secondary school teachers, from both public and separate schools, marched in front of the legislature. One group entered the building and at one point nearly disrupted the legislature sitting.

Thomas Wells, minister of education, was jammed up against the door of the legislature chamber until New Democratic Party Leader Stephen Lewis urged the angry teachers not to make a martyr out of Mr. Wells.

Earlier, Speaker Allan Reuter took the unprecedented step of suspending the legislature for 30 minutes when debate became too heated. Liberal Leader Robert Nixon said his party would vote against the bill on second reading—a reversal of an earlier stand.

The Liberals had approved the measures when they were first announced Monday by Mr. Wells but changed their minds after studying the bill Tuesday morning.

The bill, if passed, would prevent the teachers from following through on their threatened mass resignation Jan. 1 and would force them and school boards in 17 jurisdictions to binding arbitration.

In addition, the minister also introduced permanent negotiation making compulsory arbitration mandatory for any future contract impasses between teachers and school boards.

If the measures are passed and teachers still walk out next month, Mr. Wells has proposed $500-a-day fines.

Before the afternoon demonstration outside the legislature, the teachers voted for Mr. Wells' resignation.

The English Catholic Teachers Federation has called for a walkout by 4,722 teachers in a dozen Ontario areas Jan. 4, following the Christmas break.

The association, which has also suggested a walkout by all 16,000 separate school teachers in Ontario when the legislature reconvenes in February, says it has collected about 4,700 resolutions to back its demands for more pay and the right to negotiate working conditions.

The Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation (OSSTF) has also called for a shutdown of all schools in the province next Tuesday.

Ontario teachers, forbidden by law to strike, have opted in many instances for mass resignation to back their demands.

Mr. Wells told the legislature, "it would be morally wrong to allow our young people to be victimized by school shutdowns in January because the school board and its teachers cannot reach an agreement on a contract."

Under the bill, either party might seek mediation if negotiations had continued for eight weeks or if negotiations had continued until March 1, Mr. Wells said.

However, mediation would begin automatically if no agreement were reached by April 15, he added.

At one point during the legislature's question period, Mr. Nixon shouted at the premier: "This bill will bring you down."

As the afternoon confrontation broke up, somebody pulled a fire alarm, bringing fire engines screaming up to the legislature.

Civil servants still in the building evacuated it. However, the house sitting continued, although speakers had to shout to be heard above the sirens.

Teachers' reaction to the proposed legislation was mixed.

In Guelph, Wellington County separate school teachers welcomed the bill.

Ken Krusky, head of the teachers' negotiating committee in Guelph, said the teachers had repeatedly asked the school board to submit their dispute to arbitration.

However, he added, "We don't like legislation being forced down our throats."

In Kingston, Douglas Dinsmore, OSSTF president, said he hoped the legislation would not affect Frontenac County teachers.

"We are confident of reaching a settlement before the end of December," he said.

In Cambridge, Twyla Hendry, chairman of the Ontario Schools Trustees' Council, said permanent legislation for compulsory arbitration may cause school boards to lose some control over their operations.

She said giving teachers the right to bargain on such matters as class size would leave trustees in an untenable position.

In Toronto, the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE), which represents 18,000 school board manual and clerical employees, pledged its support to the teachers.

"Telling teachers they are not allowed to resign amounts to telling teachers they are slaves of the province," said Bruce Martin, executive secretary of CUPE's Ontario division.

The United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers Union has also sent a sharp protest to Premier Davis, terming the government's act on "dictatorial and arrogant."

The arbitration bill didn't come up in the actual business conducted in the house Tuesday night but was to be debated today.

Eban Corrects Dayan's Talk of Parley Boycott

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Foreign Minister Abba Eban has reaffirmed that Israel will attend the Arab-Israeli peace conference in Geneva next week despite the threat of an Israeli boycott from Defence Minister Moshe Dayan.

Dayan told reporters Tuesday that Israel's delegates will not attend the conference if Syria is on hand and has not handed over a list of the Israeli prisoners of war it is holding. He also demanded that Red Cross representatives be allowed to visit the POWs.

Later, Eban softened Dayan's threat, telling an election rally that Premier Golda Meir's government has no objection to negotiating in Geneva with Egypt, Jordan and Lebanon.

But he said the Israeli delegates will not deal with Syria at the conference until the PoW issue is settled. Syria is believed to hold Israeli PoWs.

The left-wing Israeli newspaper Al Hamishmar commented that Dayan should "understand cabinet decisions correctly . . . and not give his own interpretations of them."

Israel, Syria, Egypt and Jordan have all been invited to the Geneva peace conference scheduled to begin Dec. 18 under U.S., Soviet and United Nations auspices. Syria has agreed to attend, although it attached some unspecified conditions, and sources in Amman said King Hussein is ready to send Jordanian delegation.

The ruling said Tuesday that he probably will not announce official acceptance until after U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger visits him Dec. 15 on his Middle East tour.

Kissinger Wooing British

LONDON (AP) — U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger is planning to start his tour of the Middle East with a visit to Algeria, one of its most vocally militant of the Arab states, informed sources said today.

Kissinger probably will fly to Algiers Thursday to try to get President Houari Boumediene's support for the United States government's Middle East police, the sources said.

The state secretary continued his diplomatic fence-mending today with calls on Prime Minister Edward Heath and Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home.

He also planned a major address on U.S. policy toward oil-conscious Western Europe.

Kissinger, who heads Thursday for a new round of talks in the Middle East, hoped to convince the British that their interests will be protected at the Arab-Israeli peace conference. It is scheduled to open Dec. 18 in Geneva.

Because of Britain's dependence on Arab oil, some British officials have questioned the strong support the United States gave Israel during the October war and are pressing for Israeli withdrawal from occupied Arab territories.

Kissinger's Middle East tour will take him to Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Syria, Jordan, Lebanon and Israel. Then he will go to Geneva for the start of the peace talks.

U.S. Will Reduce Gasoline Output

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration today proposed a 25-per-cent reduction in gasoline production in the United States with priority delivery to emergency services, fuel production, public transportation and agriculture.

Under fuel allocation regulations proposed to take effect Dec. 27, business, including non-profit and government organizations, would get the same amount of gasoline they did one year earlier.

Other distributors would get whatever was left over, but in no case would receive more than 80 per cent of what they received a year earlier.

The regulations would govern bulk distribution of gasoline but would affect individual consumers by sharply curtailing supplies available at the retail level.

The Iranian sale of crude oil set a world price record and the impact may play havoc with the economies of countries, industry sources in New York said.

The effect of such global manoeuvrings, they said, eventually will trickle to the bottom of the oil barrel—the consumer.

The Iranian government announced it contracted to sell a relatively small consignment of 80 million barrels of crude oil for $16 to $17.40 a bafrel to unidentified U.S., European and Japanese bidders. It previously had sold barrels at about $3.30.

Venezuela's apparent new president, Carlos Andres Perez, warned that, like the Arabs, he will use oil as a weapon. He said he wants economic benefits for his country.

However, an external affairs spokesman in Ottawa said he doubts the Venezuelan threat will have much effect on Canada. The spokesman said he doubts the new president plans any action that would threaten current business operations in Venezuela.

In another development Tuesday, King Hussein of Jordan said the Arab oil embargo on shipments to countries supporting Israel may be a "two-edged sword" because Europeans seriously affected may turn against the Arabs.

Community Voice In Schools Urged

TORONTO (CP) — Educational authorities are traditionalists who don't think in terms of year-round education programs, an Ontario legislature committee reported Tuesday.

Most educationists regard summer schooling as a failure in fulfilling the need for year-long schooling, said the report of the committee on the utilization of educational facilities, tabled in the legislature.

"We find the question of year-round educational programs has not received the attention of the public in any extensive or useful way in Ontario."

Charles McIlgeen (PC—Oshawa), committee chairman, said in an interview there appears to be no desire at present to extend the school year because of an entrenched tradition that July and August are holiday months.

He told the legislature that the question of year-round use of educational facilities "has not really been brought to public discussion."

It was the second interim report of the committee, set up in December, 1971. The first report, made public last July, developed the concept that public access to schools and the use of school facilities was a right and not a privilege.

Tuesday's report made proposals for implementing this philosophy.

It argued thats decisions affecting year-long schooling have been left in the hands of educationists, but should be shared with the local communities.

It called for a change in the provincial grants system so that schools can be subsidized on a 24-hour basis, and not just when its facilities are being used for normal school activities.

No distinction should be made between normal operating costs and community use costs.

Snowmobile Complaints Starting

The eager beaver snowmobilers are at it again!

Sunday's snowfall -- the first of the season for the Immediate Quinte district -- had hardly blanketed the ground before concerned residents were complaining to city police.

One source of concern was the new Frank Street subway beneath the CN double tracks which the snow machines were using to get across the tracks and into open areas.

The other was the pedestrian walkway between Woodland Acres and Farley Avenue.

At the Frank Street subway, signs stating the underpass is off limits to snowmobiles and other motorized vehicles have been erected.

But apparently the signs are not having the desired effect.

The city traffic and light committee was told Monday that even a foreign made compact car had been seen driving through the subway.

Unfortunately, Police Chief Douglas Crosbie stated, the complainant had failed to get the licence number of the offending vehicle.

How It's Done

Senior students at Queen Elizabeth School are spending this week taking part in Project Understanding. This involves visiting many local places of interest and finding out how they operate. Yesterday, a group of 13 students paid a visit to the Four Seasons Hotel. While there they got a behind the scenes look at what goes on in the kitchen. Chris Bateman, middle and Diane Whittaker look on while pastry chef, Gwenda McBayne removes a tray of freshly baked pastries from the oven.

Ministry Official To Meet Planners

Donal R. Irvine, parliamentary assistant to John White, minister of treasury, economics and intergovernmental affairs, will meet with the Quinte Planning Board early next year to review its organization, operation and finances.

Mr. Irvine suggested in a letter that a review of the board might be timely. He offered the assistance of ministry staff during such a review.

At Thursday's regular meeting after members' questions about the letter's intent, the board chose to invite the ministerial assistant himself to a possible January meeting.

Planning director, Bert Kenny, speculating upon the reasons behind the letter, told the board the province still considers the Quinte area as a problem area.

"It is recognized that the Quinte planning area is not a stable area. The three western municipalities, though officially still part of the board, are not active," he said.

While, minister of treasury, economics and intergovernmental affairs, will meet with the Quinte Planning Board early next year to review its organization, operation and finances.

Recently, a request by board treasurer, Arvid Jones, for payment of the balance of the 1973 levy was unanswered by Brighton township, answered with "no comment" by Murray township, and stated by Brighton that the board can expect no payment.

Trenton chairman Robert Fairfield, speaking about ministry intent, said the move to meet likely resulted from a conversation Mayor Duncan McDonald had with Mr. Irvine in Toronto recently.

"I took it that the mayor wanted an investigation into our financial position," he said. "Though I'm not sure whether he's mayor or not."

Marmora Pupils Kept Home from School

MARMORA — Ten pupils of Earl Prentice School in Marmora are being withheld from classes today by their parents to protest conditions at the school.

The children of Mr. and Mrs. John Williams and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Latos of RR 4, Marmora will not return to school, says Mrs. Williams, until there is "a big change at Marmora."

The parents are dissatisfied with the procedures and outcome of a public meeting held at the school last night to discuss parents' complaints about the quality of education.

The meeting was called by parents after they met administrators of the Hastings County board on two occasions to present their complaints. An estimated 150 parents and citizens attended the meeting, presided over by director of education Eric Hamilton.

Parents called for more "open, honest" communication between home and school. The Home and School Association at Earl Prentice has not been active for two years.

Those in attendance were divided into 10 groups to discuss what they want the school to start doing, what they want it to keep doing and what they want it to stop doing.

Items discussed were:

The open area classroom, where 120 children, the equivalent of seven classes in grades 1 through 4, are taught. Some parents said the open area causes stress and asked for partitions.

Discipline, which some parents considered slack. They suggested a detention room and reports to parents when children misbehave.

Report cards and grading. Parents said they want to know where their children stand in relation to others and said abolition of marks has reduced the fear of failure.

Kindergarten, which in Centre Hastings admit children three times during the year, according to their age, and keep the beginners in school for a full day. Parents asked for a return to half-day kindergartens.

Emphasis on the three Rs, which some parents said are being neglected. A few parents said they failed to teach their children math.

Other suggestions were the return of the strap, tighter control on buses and individual desks for each student in small (unmarked) subjects.

Mr. Rousseaux urged parents not to push their children too hard, and remarked that some parents expect too much of children who are not capable of achieving. He said a lower pupil teacher ratio at the school is a top priority. At present, the average class size is 37 pupils.

Mrs. Williams, along with her husband and the Latons instigated the action that led to the meeting, said this morning that if no changes are made at the school her children will be withheld until Christmas and then placed in a different school.

She said the parents had intended to run the meeting and question teachers, Trustees and board administrators were only invited to sit in. Parents, she said, "couldn't get a word in edgewise."

The Williams and the Latons walked out of the meeting near 12:30a.m.

"We were just asking for more emphasis on the basics — reading, writing and arithmetic," said Mrs. Williams. "We have done all we can ourselves."

Large Northend Site Sold

Buyer interest in one of the city's few remaining prime undeveloped areas of well-denced last week at the sale of a large tract in Belleville's far east end.

Sold was a 21.38-acre site at Sidney Street and runway 6/l and north of Bell Blvd. The block of property extends east from Sidney Street to the projection of Lemoine Street north of Bell Blvd. and is currently zoned industrial.

Purchaser of the site were Max and Harold Haggarty, principals of Lafferty-Smith Express Lines Ltd. in Belleville. They bought from Ivan May of Foxboro and Reginald Mercy of Belleville, who had owned the property for some years.

The sale was handled by Doug Grant Realty, the agency that handled the sale for the property on which the Quinte Mall now stands. Quinte Mall owners, Cambridge Leaseholds Ltd., since constructed the big northend shopping mall, have purchased other property in the same general area.

Haggarty this week told The Intelligencer they had "no plans at the moment" for the future site purchased by he and his brother.

However, he suspected they "might do something within a short period."

There are still no services along Bell Blvd. west of the Quinte Mall, but the land purchased by the Haggarty brothers could be readily serviced with water and sewer from Sidney Street lines at the corner of Hanna Street.

Bishops: Conscience, Not Whims

OTTAWA (CP) — Roman Catholic bishops moved in a document released today to clarify the church's position on the role of the conscience.

The 5,000-word statement, aimed at priests rather than the laity, was issued by the Canadian Catholic Conference, the bishops' national association.

It says Catholics should follow their consciences, but cautions that this does not mean following any whim at will.

The role of the conscience must be tempered by careful thought and "service to authority."

There has been a trend among Catholics that the conscience should be the ultimate arbiter of any conflict between individuals and church authority.

Yule Lights Cut Back, No Bloomfield Contest

BLOOMFIELD — Bloomfield Hydro has announced cancellation of its annual decorative lighting contest in the village to save energy.

It was noted in a public statement that the competition may resume in 1974 if there is an improvement in the energy situation.

Picton residents have been urged to exercise discretion in planning outdoor lighting displays. Mayor H. J. McFarland said that he has planned cutbacks in the customary holiday lights at his office and home.

The Picton public utilities commission has informed town council that Main Street lighting this year will be enjoyed for half the usual length of time. The ropes and pinwheels of colored lights decorating Picton's business section were strung during the first week in December and will be taken down at the end of the year.

Taxi Rides Biggest Scare on UN Duty

TRENTON — Canadian Armed Forces personnel, after returning from the Middle East war zone late last week, Tuesday told tongue-in-cheek, of "45 minutes of terror."

Worst experiences for the Canadians while stationed in Cairo were taxi rides to and from their hotel accommodations in the city's downtown section.

"Tuesday was the first day officers and men could be interviewed following their arrival at Canadian Forces Base Trenton last Thursday and Friday.

The group of Trenton personnel were responsible for air movements in Cairo, mainly concerned with unloading United Nations aircraft of peacekeeping supplies. The entire force, now back home, was stationed in Lahr, Germany, and the Egyptian capital, and numbered 94 at the peak of operations.

Commanding officer Lt.-Col. Harry Wilkinson said this return of troops brings to a close the second phase of Operation DANICA, Canada's Middle East peacekeeping responsibility. A third phase is still to be undertaken in solving air reconnaissance — as yet unauthorized by either side in the recent hostilities, c Lt.-Col. Wilkinson said there was no word at this time when that operation would be mobilized. He referred to a "sensitive situation there" and preferred not to comment on any of the political ramifications of the airlift.

"The situation we were faced with was a country at war or certainly on the edge of war," he said.

Despite this, he said Egyptian reception of his men while "cautious and suspicious in the beginning, steadily improved during the four of duty."

He said Egyptians were particularly concerned with movements around the airport where his men were stationed, and photographs were not allowed. Other than that his men were free to travel through Cairo, which he saw as a meeting of ancient civilization and the 20th Century. "It is a place where traffic tangles with oxen and donkey carts," he said.

During the operation which he termed "very costly in the Canadian planes flew 197 flights or 4,493 hours air time carrying nearly three million pounds of men and freight into the area.

He said while the cost of the airlift was "substantial," some of the money could be recovered in future Canadian contributions to the United Nations.

Speaking on morale of troops, he said his group had few problems. Men worked 12 hours and were off 36 hours, allowing for tours of the area, visits to the pyramids and the occasional camel ride.

The worst rides we had were in taxis. Due to a partial blackout in the area, drivers darted through streets without head lights, using them only to let an escort owner know there was a car coming, according to Lt. -Col. Wilkinson."

"It got so that the men didn't count the days before they would return home, but the number of taxi rides they would have to take," he said.

Little Change

If some are driving more slowly these days because of the need to conserve petroleum, the energy conscious among motorists may nevertheless be spread thinly enough.

There are still plenty of hot-rodders, lane hoppers and tire squealers around. And there are people exceeding the speed limit.

And from what we see in the papers, in our own midst and elsewhere, there does not seem to be any marked diminution in the number of accidents.

Indeed the accident syndrome is a phenomenon which, to judge from statistics alone, is so ingrained that solutions seem virtually impossible. Yet we cannot give up in the quest for safer cars, safer highways and, most important, safer drivers.

Organizations such as the Ontario Safety League and the Ontario Traffic Conference are in the forefront of this activity.

The latter has as its secretary Police Chief Douglas Crosbie of Belleville and the organization's Christmas bulletin carries a warning from a Granby, Quebec newspaper that highway traffic deaths and injuries are rising around the world, noting that in Europe the situation is even more acute than on this continent.

It carries information also of the nevercessing attempts being made to promote safer traffic conditions. For instance, a poll conducted in Scarborough, Ont., by the Young Drivers of Canada (a drivers' organization for people between the ages of 16 and 24) revealed that 63.4 per cent believed motorists should wear seatbelts. However only 23 per cent were wearing their belts when questioned.

The bulletin says wearing of a seatbelt provides a 50 per cent better chance of not being killed. A case in point was the escape of a young couple and their two children in a mishap on 401 near Belleville recently.

So, the fight for safety goes on. It must, for the wastage in lives and property is immense.

Public Speaking

Short of being on the receiving end of a holdup, or in the front line in war, few situations are as unnerving as being thrust into the role of public speaker. More especially of course if one is genuinely unaccustomed to it.

The remarkable thing, to judge from a long line of speakers we have heard — from executives and politicians and exchange students to dairy princesses and apple queens — is that virtually all of them do a fine job.

The more spontaneous the speaker the more enjoyable the address as a rule.

A case in point was the presentation at Rotary the other day by Hastings county museum curator Marion Lewis.

Mr. Lewis began by saying his only previous kind of experience was giving orders on the parade ground; he had not spoken to large groups such as he was about to face.

In any event Mr. Lewis made the new museum and its contents at Glanmore House come throughly alive.

One particularly significant aspect of his subject is the close cooperation between the museum and the library and the fact that since the latter has fireproof facilities some archive material is being moved there from Glanmore.

Mr. Lewis could have been an old hand, the way he moved easily through his address and answered questions with wit and humor. But then, it stemmed from his thorough knowledge of this fine new Quinte facility, with its unique location and contents reflecting so much of interest in this part of the world, and which, incidentally, has been attracting people from all over the world.

Prophetic

We have come upon a statement made by Arthur Sulzberger in The New York Times back in 1942, six years before establishment of Israel in its modern form. How strangely prophetic were his words: "Let us Keep it a Holy Land. Let us make sure that we do not transform it merely into another nation, jealous of its own national rights, heedless of those who, for the past 2,000 years, lived within its borders."

Donald Macdonald's Visit

Venezuela Keeps Strong Rein on Oil Multinationals

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

A few weeks ago Canadian Energy Minister Donald Macdonald was in Venezuela, our hemispheric partner in the oil producing business, to see how the Venezuelans "control" their petroleum industry.

What he saw was a good deal closer check by a national government on the operations of oil multinationals than in fact the same ones we have here, Canada's Canadian government maintains.

Like ourselves Venezuela permits the big oil companies, chiefly Exxon and Shell to function as wholly-owned private firms. Venezuela's equivalent to Exxon's Imperial Oil Ltd. in Canada is Creole Petroleum Company and Shell in that South American republic is simply Shell de Venezuela.

Creole is that country, like Imperial here, is the giant which dominates the industry. Shell too, in both countries is a major. And there are plenty of smaller foreign and Venezuelan-owned oil companies, for an industry of about 20 firms in all.

But the structural similarities end here. The fifth largest producer among the 20 is CVP (Spanish initials for Corporacion Venezolana de Petroleo—Venezuelan Petroleum Corporation). This is the country's government-owned oil corporation.

It is more than a marketing board or an agency to deal at government-to-government level with other oil producing or importing countries. As owner and operator of a competitive chain of retail gas stations and with a current order for a new fleet of liquid natural gas tankers, CVP is an integrated state oil concern competing in the Venezuelan oil industry.

Other than having this watchdog state corporation in the oil industry, the Venezuelans also control the multinationals through a tough royalty arrangement which reverts 60 per cent of these to the state and leaves the remaining 40 per cent with the oil companies.

A so-called Hydrocarbons Reversion Law requires that all company properties be under public or private Venezuelan ownership by 1983. To make sure the oil companies do not retire leaving only ugly holes in the ground, the Venezuelan government has established a special fund administered by the Central Bank into which foreign oil companies must contribute annually by law.

These growing funds invested and managed by the Venezuelan government will be used to modernize and maintain oil properties of the 1980s when the multinationals have gone, or be diverted into other economic development activities.

In addition to all these measures, the Venezuelan government created the Guyana Development Corporation in the early 1960s to begin construction of new primary industries and townsites against the day when the oil runs out.

After more than a decade, Venezuela now has major steel, aluminum smelting and secondary industries whose exports will help substitute for oil exports when that vital commodity runs down in Venezuela near the end of this century.

None of this purposefulness has ever taken place in Canada where our largely foreign-owned oil industry is concerned. If Mr. Macdonald learned any lessons from the Venezuelans, he hasn't enlightened the rest of us yet.

Perhaps learning a lesson or two from the Latins about viable economic nationalism is too much for the world's only place we currently do the same as the Venezuelans by the in-crease of our oil prices to foreign customers.

Both nations have done this twice since last summer.

Public Should Demand Better Service

Airport Levy: Is This Just Another Nuisance Tax?

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

When it comes to paying taxes, everybody believes in fairness, and in soaking the rich.

That's the simple precept on which you will be taxed $2.00 before you can board a flight at any Canadian airport, starting Jan. 1.

In fact, the federal government's latest tax levy is simplistic rather than simple.

If it's "only fair" that passengers should pay for the construction and upkeep of public airports (where Ottawa makes a healthy profit from sky-high parking fees), some obvious questions require answers:

—Shouldn't criminals pay for the construction and maintenance of jails?

—Shouldn't citizens who call for police help be required to pay a service charge, as in the case of a TV repairman's visit?

—Shouldn't parents alone be taxed for schools?

Fairness, in short, is an ideal better left to philosophers and theologians than to tax collectors. Apart from its usefulness as a tool for public deception—as in the current case—governments accord a little or no place in their tax policies.

The closest thing to a general principle in our income tax law is that individuals are to be taxed strictly on the basis of their ability to pay, but that the corporate tax rate is the same for all companies. Clearly, both ain't be fair.

Indeed as would probably feel that the graduated personal income tax is fairer than the flat corporate rate. But is it really fair to levy a punitive tax on very high incomes that have been achieved through many years of self-sacrificing study, and that are sustained by long hours of demanding and responsible work every day?

The vast majority of Canadians believe that they turn over to governments a very significant proportion of the income they earn.

Surely it's time for the government to undercover its responsibilities for providing essential public services—and to be reminded that citizens have a right to expect those services without paying a user tax every time.

An efficient postal service, for example, should not be too much to expect in any advanced society. Yet, in a multi-guided pursuit of a balanced post office budget, Ottawa has multiplied mailing rates and lowered the standards of service.

The same pattern may well emerge at public airports. The forthcoming air-fare increases combined with the $2.50 airport-maintenance tax and the 30-cent "security" tax will almost certainly reduce the number of air travellers. Then the tax will be increased, and usage will decrease again, and so on.

Ottawa's "ball-gate" approach can only lead to a morass of self-defeating nuisance taxes.

Workmen's Compensation Board's New Image

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — The Ontario Workmen's Compensation Board has always been one of this province's proudest institutions.

Most similar organizations in the U.S. have been run through private insurance companies.

Our Ontario board, of course, has always been publicly operated through a government-appointed commission.

This has meant dramatic differences.

In the U.S. the pay-out in benefits for each premium dollar has tended to run between 60 per cent and 70 per cent.

Here in Ontario it normally has topped 90 per cent.

Our Ontario board also has tended to enjoy a reputation for fairness and speed.

Traditionally the injured workman has been the prime person in its considerations. It has been respected as a humanitarian service. So much so that people from all over the world have come to the province to study it as a model.

For a period, unhappily, this fine record appeared to some tarnish.

And the whole emphasis is to restore the former stature of this organization of which we once were so proud.

The purpose is to give it its old image, its aura.

Membership of the board is to be extended, so there will be sufficient bodies to give claimants quick service.

Then its powers are to be less legalistic.

Much more discretionary decision is to be given to the board.

Its panels will be able to make their decisions much more on humanitarianism and much less on rote.

Under this new act this board should once again be one of our great provincial prides.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

December 12, 1952.

Belleville city firemen were hosts Thursday evening to members of city council, city officials, local members of parliament and visiting firemen, as they staged their annual banquet at the No. 2 firehall on Moira St. The banquet was held following the official opening of the new fire hall on Dundas St. in the east end of the city.

Three Belleville soldiers and one from Picton were due to arrive at Halifax aboard the S.S. Atlantic on Thursday as the last contingent of the 27th Canadian Infantry Brigade completed its rotation from Europe. Special trains will carry the men to their homes across Canada. The Belleville soldiers are Major M. Jack, RCOC, Lt. R.E. Fisher, RCIC and A. Cpl. D.B. Frazier, RCIC. The Picton soldier is pl. F.J. Crewe, RCR.

December 12, 1942.

To pick up a copy of the old home town newspaper among the bombed ruins of a building in Italy would be a thrill for any soldier from this side of the Atlantic, more especially if that soldier happened to have been away from his old home town for nearly four years. That's just what happened to Pte. Donald Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. J.D. Wilson of Dundas St. who was through the Sicilian campaign with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment and is now fighting with them in Italy. In a letter received at his home recently, Pte. Wilson told of having to seek shelter in the bombed ruins of a building in southern Italy during the retreat of the Nazis. How an issue of the Ontario Intelligencer would get into a building in Italy and remain there to be found by a native of Belleville, is hard to explain; but it does prove that the newspaper gets around.

40 YEARS AGO

December 12, 1932.

Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Stratton and Mr. Robert Palmateer spent Sunday with the latter's parents in Tweed.

Mr. Earl Day, who as been spending some time in San Francisco and other large U.S. cities, is home on a visit to his parents, Dr. and Mrs. Morley Day.

Miss Pearl Hamilton, Reg. N. Chatham St. spent the weekend with Mrs. George Palmateer at Tweed.

Mrs. Louise Gunnell of Harlem, Montana, who last visited Belleville 35 years ago, and her sister, Mrs. Gardiner of Toronto, who has not been here for 25 years, spent a few days here this week renewing the scenes of their native city.

50 YEARS AGO

December 12, 1922.

An enjoyable entertainment was held in the G.W.V.A. Memorial Hall under the auspices of the local ladies of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of America. E. Mayor Charles Hanna presided. The St. Louis Kubelik orchestra gave several pleasing selections. The following compose the orchestra: Miss Mason, piano; Leo St. Louis, drums; A. Keegan, violin; and John Lloyd, guitar.

"They brought to the Pharisees him that aforetime was blind. Therefore said some of the Pharisees. This man is not of God, because he keepeth not the sabbath day. Others said. How can a man that is a sinner do such miracles? And there was a division among them." — John 13, 16, 9:

Legislature's Session Was Constructive

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — On the surface it was not a sensational session.

Of the motions that the house met this fall there isn't a great deal that would come to your mind.

But yet a lot was done and it was an important period for the province.

Heading the list, of course, is energy.

Energy certainly dominated the session.

Starting first with Premier Lougheed of Alberta and the Arab policies, the main topic of most sitting days, it seemed, was the energy problem.

It turned out that Ontario is probably going to be pretty lucky and no hard decisions had to be made here, such as there were in the U.S., but day after day it was a major subject of debate.

Though energy had the news play there also, however, was a great deal else that happened.

There was, for example, the action on the Niagara escarpment and the Toronto parkway belt.

Essentially setting a completely new principle.

There was the Haldimand-Norfolk government and with it the last of the regional system.

In future regional governments will be based on the county system.

There was the Moog affair and Hydro; and with it a chastened, and apparently more hard government politically.

There was the reformation of the Workmen's Compensation Board and the appointment of Mike Starr as chairman. A move which should be very significant.

And these are only a few developments of the session.

There were many, many more. And in total they add up to one of our most constructive legislative meetings.

As it happened, of course, the members voted themselves a raise in pay.

But as they analyze their work, they earned it.

A Look At Meals In School

Editor
The Intelligencer,

Further to my letter captioned "The Cost of Education," I would like to draw to the attention of the public the generous gift currently being enjoyed by the well-paid professional staff members of the Ontario School For The Deaf in the matter of lunch.

This establishment comes under the Department of Education, one of Ontario's most bureaucratic empires. Meals are available to all members of the staff regardless of their status or ability to pay, these meals available for 50 cents including everything. I think in these inflationary times, this would have to agree that a full meal for 50 cents is very good buy.

One may ask how such a phenomenon can occur. Unfortunately the cost is subsidized by the taxpayer.

Many community extends to other educational facilities, the cost to the taxpayer becomes evident.

In cities all over the province of Ontario are many poor, elderly and underprivileged citizens who would welcome the opportunity to purchase a full course meal for 50 cents. Maybe the Ontario School For The Deaf should demonstrate its empathy with our less fortunate citizens by opening the doors of their restaurant to these people.

The $40,000 fountain which decorates the front of this school during the summer months did nothing to enhance education for deaf children. Better money spent in improving the facilities in the dormitories of the school.

Today In History

Guglielmo Marconi received the first transatlantic wireless signal at St. John's, Nfld., 72 years ago today—in 1901. The inventor of wireless telegraphy flew a box kite trailing 400 feet of copper wire to a telephone to pick up faint electrical sounds transmitted from 2,000 miles across the ocean at Poldhu Wireless Station in Cornwall, England. Today, the hill on which Marconi stood is called Signal Hill.

1853—The art gallery of Hamilton, Ont., was opened by Governor-General Viscount Massey.

1951—The St. Lawrence Seaway Authority was established.

1966—New York was chosen as the permanent site of the United Nations.

1839—The Scottish poet Robert Tannahill died.

1642—Dutch navigator Abel Tasman discovered New Zealand.

Story of Depression Told by Journalist

By JACK TRACY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

They made movies about the Depression—Dust Be My Destiny; songs—Dusty Shoes and Buddy, Can You Spare A Dime. Economists wrote about its probable causes.

Barry Broadfoot left his desk at Vancouver Sun two years ago and travelled 15,000 miles through Canada with a tape recorder to write a book, Ten Lost years 1929-1939. His book lets Canadians themselves tell about that hard decade.

His theme is that few under the age of 50 know about the Depression. He thinks it should be taught in senior-grade schools—"Can 10 years be chopped out of a nation's history?"

So his book, subtitled Memories of Canadians who Survived the Depression, contains the stories of 600 Canadians who talked to his tape recorder.

Many of the stories are told by Westerners—Broadfoot, who styles himself a child of the Depression, was born in Winnipeg 47 years ago. It was in the West that nature's savagery combined with the vagaries of economics to produce great hardship.

In the prolonged drought, top soil blew away and much of the wheat that might have grown and been marketed at low prices was eaten by grasshoppers.

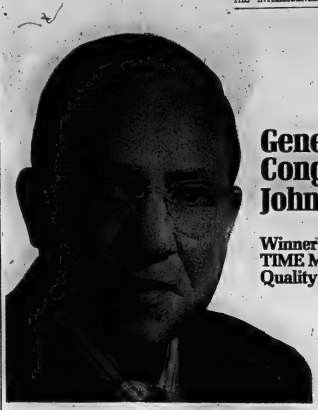
But he covers Canada from coast to coast. There was the teacher in the hard-hit Saskatchewan district whose pupils could no longer use the school's tattered texts which the trustees could not afford to replace. So she taught the students with Eaton's catalogue.

A French-Canadian farmer accepted a few dollars and sent seven of his 16 children off to work for neighboring farmers—for nothing—so he wouldn't have to feed them.

There is also the story of how a bobo-chasing railway policeman was crucified against the side of a box-car.

One thing the book brings up is the pride of many Canadians who were reluctant to apply for relief—they called welfare—and that might have been only $10 a month per family.

Broadfoot brings out another side to life in the 1930s—prejudice. Many who talked into his microphone used racially pejorative words—words rarely heard in the public today—such as kike, hunky, bohunk and wop.



In a heading on a chapter devoted to prejudice, the author says:

"There always had been prejudice in Canada—lots of it. But when it was a case of too many men struggling for too few jobs, then the prejudice became deeper and more vicious."

Broadfoot is thinking about a sequel and asks in a sort of epilogue for other Canadians who have stories to write him through his publisher.

Living It Up

LONDON (AP) — The high price of entertaining Communists—4,000 for a six-day stay by the mayor of Moscow and four colleagues—is going to raise some questions among taxpayers, said Frank Smith, a member of the Greater London Council. "They'll find it puzzling that Communists, who are always preaching equality, can live it up to such an extent," he said.

Plan Parties with Punch

If you haven't been to a party yet this month, you're probably going to one this weekend. Or just as likely, are planning to give a party yourself.

December is an ideal party month because the traditionally festive season gives hostesses a starting point.

Of course, it presents problems too, since you may not want to drag out last's year's dreary milieu. Trying to think up startlingly original Christmas party ideas is just going to give you a headache.

Unless you have some help for your party planning.

Seagram's has, free for the asking, a handy little paperback book called "The Spirit of Hospitality".

The book covers entertaining ideas, recipes, information about wines and bartending, and invaluable suggestions for both business and fund-raising parties.

Of all the seasons for a great party that the book gives you, one is the key to all others: organization.

The book includes planning systems, step by step, for all types of parties, large, small, formal and impromptu. (Even a spur of the moment get-together is better if you've planned to have plenty of party supplies already on hand.)

If you're not a list maker by nature, giving a party demands that you become one. Keeping track afterwards of your lists of supplies and costs makes the next party easier to plan for.

On your list of things to do today, put "The Spirit of Hospitality". Since the book is free, it'll only cost you an eight cent stamp to write away for it, to P.O. Box St. Toronto-Dominion Centre, Toronto, Ont.

If you are one of the season's party-givers, interested in keeping entertaining expenses down, you might consider serving punch instead of mixed drinks. A pretty punch bowl can add to the room's decorations, and if it's placed on a "serve yourself" basis it keeps the guests circulating throughout the evening.

Here are a few punch recipes from the Seagram's book, plus some punches and holiday drinks from other sources.

Happy partying!

Christmas Rum Peach (cold)
- 8 oz. orange juice
- 4 oz. lemon juice
- 4 oz. pineapple juice
- 1 cup diced pineapple
- 4 oz. Triple Sec
- ½ cup diced maraschino cherries
- 1 bottle (25 oz.) rum
- 1 orange and 1 lemon cut into thin slices

Place all ingredients in punch bowl and chill for two hours. Add chunks of ice just before serving. Serves 12 to 15 people.

Egg Nog Punch Canadian Style

The whites and yolks of two dozen eggs (separated)
- 25 oz. rum
- 50 oz. brandy
- 2 quarts heavy whipping cream
- 2 cups sugar
- ground nutmeg

The day before, mix the brandy, rum, cloves and sugar. Allow to stand for 48 hours. Remove the cloves. Add well beaten egg yolks, a little at a time. Cover the bowl overnight.

Just before party time, add stiffly beaten whites and cream separately, a little at a time. Sprinkle with nutmeg. Serves 25 people. If, at the end of the evening there is any left over, freeze it for dessert the next day.

Quisiri
- 3 jiggers brandy
- 3 jiggers dark rum
- 4 bottles white wine
- juice of 8 lemons
- juice of 8 oranges

Combine in punch bowl with a block of ice and fruit to garnish. Just before serving pour in 4 bottles of chilled soda water. Serves 50 to 60.

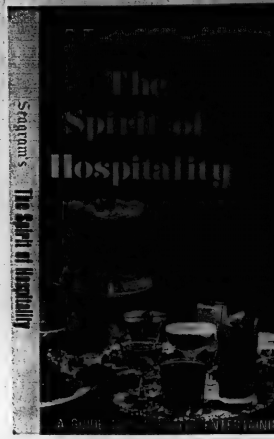
Aloqua Booze
(A Scottish New Year's drink)
- 1 cup clear honey
- 1½-2 cups heavy sweet cream
- 2 cups Scotch whiskey
- 1 cup oatmeal
- 2 cups water

Soak oatmeal in water overnight; strain through a sieve and keep the water. Heat the honey when it thins, add the water and cream, stirring constantly. Heat the mixture but do not boil. Remove from heat and stir in the Scotch whiskey. May be served hot or cold.

Because of its richness, small servings are appropriate.

Wassail
(Traditional English Christmas punch)
- 1 dozen apples, cored and baked

Combine the following ingredients in a saucepan and boil for five minutes:
- 1 cup water
- 4 cups sugar
- 1 tablespoon grated nutmeg
- 2 teaspoons ginger
- ½ teaspoon ground mace
- 6 whole cloves
- 4 allspice berries
- 1 stick cinnamon



Beat until stiff but not dry,
- 1 dozen egg whites

Beat until light in color,
- 1 dozen egg yolks
- Fold whites into yolks, using a large bowl. Strain the sugar and spice mixture into the eggs, combining quickly.

Heat almost to the boiling point, in separate pots,
- 4 bottles sherry or Madeira
- 2 cups brandy

Incorporate the hot sherry or Madeira with the spice and egg mixture, beginning slowly and stirring more briskly with each addition. Toward the end of this process add the brandy.

Now just before serving and while the mixture is still foaming, add the baked apples.

People and Events

There was a large turnout recently for the annual Holy Rosary Parish Bazaar, held in Georges Vanier School.

A special feature that attracted many families was the Children's Room, where children helped run the games, and where articles were displayed that had been made by classes of Holy Rosary, Georges Vanier and St. Michael's school.

A table of children's wear and stuffed dolls and animals was convened by Tina O'Sullivan. Shirley Cain convened the handicrafts and Alexis Davidson took charge of the children's room and games, assisted by a group of young adults.

Jean Molsworth and Mary Smith were kept busy all evening at the bake table, and Teresa Hogan's "touch and take" table was also well attended. Mrs. Fred. Bedard convened the apron table.

The tea room was convened by Jennie Richardson, and refreshments for the apron table, the children were provided by Margaret Bissette's hot dog stand and Mrs. Foot's candy stall.

After Santa Claus paid a visit, the evening ended with a raffle, won by M.S. Lajoie of Gaspe, E. Schreider of Etobicoke and M. Kerik of Belleville.

The ladies of Roslin Presbyterian Women's Missionary Guild were entertained at the home of Rev. and Mrs. A.E. Toombs in Campbellford recently, where they held their Christmas meeting.

The St. Andrew's United Church Women in Marmora held their annual Christmas Bazaar recently, based on the theme "Christmas Around the World". Booths in the Christian Education Hall depicted various countries.

Bazaar convener was Dorothy Glover, assisted by Marie Cook and Nancy Peters who did the decorations.

President Ella Potts and Nancy Peters greeted guests at the door.

The countries represented and the conveners were: Holland, Marietta Kotulski; Germany, Lydia Spambower and Betty Welch; U.S.A., Salva Rothermel and Edith Wyatt; Scotland, Mary Lavender; Ireland, Zella Reynolds and Kathe Parsons; England, Ethel Nobes; Mexico, Doris Smith and Canada (Indian), Marg Gray.

Many unusual and unique items were for sale such as a piece of the Blarney Stone, shoo-fly pie, Scottish scones and German chocolate.

The international motif was carried out in the tea room convened by Rita McInroy and Vera Vanstone.

The Deloro group had charge of the home baking table, and St. Andrew's junior choir sold homemade candy under the direction of Barbara Sandercock.

Precautions

TORONTO (CP) — Clothes should not be subjected to an agitation wash cycle beyond 10 minutes, warns the Consumers' Association of Canada. Agitation washing beyond this point does not remove additional dirt and causes unnecessary wear on the fabric.

Communication Clears the Air

PROVO, Utah (AP) — "Five, four, three, two, one . . . you're on the air," whispers floor director Bruce Jorgensen.

Anchorwoman Lynn Lambert looks up as a music introduction fades. She leans over a microphone and begins reading the evening news to her television audience.

Lynn is 12, a sixth-grader at Edgemont Elementary School. So are the floor technician, programmers and assistant announcers and cameramen.

It's Kids' News, a regular weekly feature of Brigham Young University's TV station KBYU.

Lynn led off her broadcast with an item on rising meat prices in local supermarkets. Reporter Cathryn West spiced up the story with an interview with the owner of Petersen's Family Market.

Another news item dealt with children's reaction to Watergate.

"Wasn't that a mess made in a hotel back East?" said a youngster during a kid-on-the-playground interview.

"I hate Watergate because it takes over the morning cartoons," snapped another.

Robert M. Wilson is the production supervisor for Kids' News and executive producer of KBYU.

"By giving sixth-grade kids a chance to gather, assemble and produce news, we feel we are providing them a great opportunity to learn the whole field of broadcast journalism," said Wilson. "We bring them right here into the studio so they can learn by doing, something they could never achieve in the classroom or through a simple tour."

Lynn and her associates finished their broadcast, which includes items on a lost puppy, fly tying and a bicycle race.

Cathy Lambert instructs the youngsters. "I was afraid the kids wouldn't remember what they were supposed to say but I didn't have to worry—they did a great job," she said after the telecast.

The idea originated at a Friends of Public Television convention earlier this year. Claudia Wright, KBYU's promotion director, attended the convention and learned of five-minute spots of kids' news aired during the morning hours by WBGU in Bowling Green, Ohio.

Susan Saros embraces daughter Niki as she prepares to leave Montreal for Plattsburgh, N.Y. where she is studying for her doctorate in counsellor education at the State University of New York. She drives 130 miles twice a week to attend the university. At rear are other daughters, Lynn (centre) and Jeannie (CP Photo)

Drive for Doctorate

MONTREAL (CP) — A suburban Montreal housewife and mother of three wants a doctorate so badly she is willing to drive a gruelling 130 miles—twice a week—to attend University of New York courses at Plattsburgh.

Susan Saros, a Czechoslovak-born Town of Mount Royal resident, refused to become discouraged when McGill University turned down her application for the doctor of philosophy program in educational counselling.

She struggled against financial and linguistic barriers to earn a bachelor of arts degree from Sir George Williams University, partially fulfilling a dream which began when she arrived in Canada 21 years ago. But the dream included the lofty PhD, so Mrs. Saros applied for and was accepted in the nearest similar program at University of New York.

Mrs. Saros leaves for school early in the morning and returns at about 7 p.m.

"Then I do the housework and all the things I would do normally, like making the dinner," she said. After household chores are finished, she finds time to study.

She said her daughters, Jeannie, 18, Lynn, 11, and Niki, 10, have suffered from the demands placed on her by simultaneously running a household and getting a higher education.

"They would want me to go somewhere with them and I would have to say: no, Mummy is studying."

Mrs. Saros said her first hope after arriving in Montreal was to attend McGill. As soon as her broken English and equally broken finances" would allow she began taking non-credit courses there.

Eventually she transferred to a full-credit program at Sir George Williams where, attending part time, she earned a BA with distinction in four years.

She describes this period as "the richest and most fulfilling years of my life."

Resolving to continue her work at McGill, she became part of a field of 120 PhD applicants,"the university accepted 30.

"That was what was so heartbreaking," she said. "After seeing me work so hard, my daughters couldn't understand why I wasn't accepted."

Mrs. Saros said she is well-fitted to advise and counsel young people. As an immigrant, she said she understands the problems of young university students, many of whom are also immigrants.

Indian Parents Want Co-Ed Schools

BOMBAY (CP) — Reports reaching the Indian government show that in more than 100 villages parents have asked for establishment of co-educational schools.

In most of these villages, the trend was in favor of separate schools for boy and girl only five years ago. 8

This change in favor of co-education is considered extremely significant by educationists, government officials and politicians.

As Kashinath Sharma, a school teacher in Udaipur, Rajasthan province, put it at a seminar on school education: "This shows that the shackles of orthodoxy are crumbling. Even villagers now are supporting co-education. Ten years ago this would have been unthinkable."

Rajasthan province in northern India is considered the most tradition-bound area in the country. The bulk of it was ruled by rajas, big and small, during the British administration and these princes saw to it that girls were segregated in schools.

So strong was the prejudice against mixed schools for boys and girls even in April, 1963, that mothers in the Jaipur area of Rajasthan demonstrated against co-education.

Officials say that the trend in favor of co-education is also noticeable in other tradition bound provinces like Uttar Pradesh, Orissa, Bihar and Madhya Pradesh.

Though no target dates have been fixed, the Indian government wants as many schools to switch over to co-education as possible. .

One senior education ministry official said: "We do not make a public fuss about it since the subject still is a sensitive one. For instance, a formal government decision favoring co-education in rural areas may give a handle to orthodox elements to whip up public feelings."

Indian educationists think that co-education will not only help to modernize their nation quickly but is also economical in the long run.

For instance, a survey in Madhya Pradesh has shown that wherever co-education is followed schools find it cheaper to set up science laboratories, libraries and other facilities.

"Co-education makes better students," a girl wrote in the Bombay magazine March of the Nation.

"There can be no case against co-education and it was introduced in every one of our schools and colleges. After all, we don't want to produce a race of saints," wrote another student in the magazine. He was obviously referring to the complaint of some parents that mixed schools "corrupt the morals of the young.

Student groups in Rajasthan Uttar Pradesh and West Bengal are planning seminars on co-education.

"The old India is vanishing," said Govind Deshpande, a Bombay professor.

Successful Living
Flirting Mom Causes Grief

By DORIS CLAIR

"Dear Doris: My wife who is 45 and trying to act like a teen-ager is causing my daughter a great deal of sorrow. She is having quite a serious flirtation with her young son-in-law. My daughter is totally unaware of it and regarded as to her husband's actions. .

She always was a nervous child due to her mother's criticisms: she a'e too much, too fast, and whatever else her mother could put her down with. Now her husband has caught on to her faults and he is carrying on where the mother left off. I would like to explode and bring this out in the open but I am supposed to have rocks in my head, so suffer in silence as to my daughter's suffering.

Please Help.

Dear Please: Clear the air with your wife, pronto!

Don't start off with accusations, but level with her about your feelings and what you think is happening to your daughter. Be careful not to play any games; you must be completely frank and honest with each other.

Suffer in silence long enough and you'll prove you have rocks in your head. If you need a professional social worker for personal discussion and moral support, get one.

Then in the case of your daughter's mental health, bring your wife into line. Explode!

Dear Doris: Where in this city can a nice 21-year-old girl meet a nice 20-ish man? I belong to several organizations, but no luck there. My friends are mostly all married and they don't seem to know any unattached young men. .

Do you think changing jobs and making new contacts would help?

Dear Lonely: If you work only with women, maybe shifting jobs would help. But this is not your first move. Married friends may be helpful, but you can't count on them, either.

Certainly you need new contacts. Have you thought of taking an evening course at your community college? Or doing volunteer work in a male-female setting? Or trying what a holiday trip will produce?

Studying the stars — or astrology — has produced romance before now. Keep circulating. You only need one really "nice" man

Dear Doris: After reading "Any Excuse" letter, I wonder if she knows that she can collect the Canada Pension for widows, as it is payable after seven years of common-law living, if her man died. Is this day and age there are so many living common-law that only very few narrow-minded people worry or look down on people who are not married.

I lived that way for 15 years, yet when we got married my friends made a party for me. And this should be a lesson to others: If your common-law husband's wife is still living, have him make a will or you can lose it all. Not Hopeless. Dear Not Hopeless: Thank you. My consultant says since October of this year, through a ruling of the Supreme Court, each case must be considered on its individual merits.

Any Hope - - and any others similarly situted should contact the Canada Pensions office in her area and arrange for a personal appointment.

(Anonymous letters are bad manners and may be ignored. When writing in care of this newspaper, give Doris your right name and address. It will be kept confidential.)

Ann Landers

Mad at Ann, She'll Chew Tacks

Dear Ann Landers: I am so mad at you I could chew thumbtacks. According to the scoring on your newly up-dated Know Thyself Test, at least half the kids in our school are "Condemned" and the other half are "Damned Fools" or "Messed Up and Heading for Trouble."

A 15-year-old junior girl, an acquaintance of mine, rated a "Normal and Decent." I happen to know she has been busted for drugs and has had an abortion. The questions in that monstrous test were bad enough, but the scoring was out of sight. Are you sure you've got all your buttons, Annie?

Please take a second look at this generation and stop trying to classify people by what they do or don't do.—84 But Normal And Holding In Denver

Dear 84: First, spit out those thumbtacks before you swallow one. Now listen to this: That test was not mine. I didn't make it up and I had nothing to do with the scoring. It came from a committee of teen-agers—two boys and two girls, as I said in the column. I made no comment either for the test or against it. I merely printed it as an example of what some teen-agers are thinking about these days.

Dear Ann Landers: I was glad you printed that letter from the mother on welfare who was made to feel like a parasite when she paid for her groceries with stamps. She signed her letter, "You Could Be Next," and how right she is.

I have some additional figures put out by the League of Women Voters. I hope they will make an impression on those folks who keep saying: "We're fare bums will be the death of this country. If they won't work, let 'em starve. I don't want to support loafers."

Please print these statistics, Ann. They are correct.

Out of every 100 poor people in America today, 34 are children under 14 years of age.

Nineteen are people over 65.

Five are disabled or chronically ill.

This means 58 out of 100 people on welfare in this country are too young, too old or physically unable to work.

The next time someone in your crowd takes a crack at "welfare moochers" please have the courage to clip these figures.—Lackier Than Most

Dear Lucky: I have. And I will continue to do so. Those figures are not new to me. Thanks for writing.

Dear Ann Landers: My parents were happily married for 31 years. Last July Mother passed away. Dad went into a depression — for almost two weeks. Now he is so busy taking out every widow and divorcee in town we can't keep track of him.

We are concerned about Dad. He doesn't mention his arthritis anymore. He has had it for years. It can't have suddenly disappeared. He used to ask me to buy him medicine for his sinus trouble, but now he claims he has plenty of medicine and says I should stop worrying about him. We are afraid he is neglecting himself, although everyone says he looks better than he has in years.

Last night I tried to phone Dad and gave up at, 11:45. He wasn't at home. I am concerned that he is going into a second childhood and that he might drop dead of a heart attack. He and Mother lived a very quiet life and he is not accustomed to this new pace. What advice can you give us, Ann?—Concerned

Dear C.: Leave your dad alone. It sounds like his second childhood might be better than his first.

Sable Island Horses Protected by Law

HALIFAX (CP) — There has always been lots of speculation about the origin of the Sable Island ponies.

It is generally believed they have been on the barren, wind-swept island, 170 miles east of Halifax, for about 400 years but no one knows how they got there.

The most popular theory is they swam ashore from ships wrecked on the sandbars and shoals of the island; known by sailors as the Graveyard of the Atlantic because of the hundreds of vessels that have come to grief there.

Others believe that in the 16th century either French or Portuguese settlers or explorers left the horses there.

The horses' closest relations appear to be a strain of horses found only in Spain, the Ukraine and Mexico lending speculation to the theory they may have been from wrecked Spanish galleons.

Whatever their origin, the horses now are protected by the federal government. In 1960, the horses were declared surplus and offered for sale by the Crown Assets Disposal Corp.

A hue and cry raised by animal lovers across North America prompted the federal government to proclaim that "The horses of Sable Island and their progeny will not be removed but left there unmolested to roam wild and free as has been their custom for centuries."

Many people have believed the animals were in fact ponies or stunted or dwarfed horses. But they are comparable in size to the average mainland horse and a typical adult Sable horse stands in excess of 14 hands (56 inches) and weighs between 500 and 700 pounds.

This summer, there were 376 adults and 60 foals. They are dispersed along the 30-mile-long island in 40 to 50 family herds and several bachelor herds, along with a few old, fierce stallions who have lost their herds.

The fierce winters on the island kill off the sick and old.

Competition can be severe among the leaders of each group to protect their mares and territory.

Attempts have been in the past to remove some of the horses from the island but most ended in failure owing to the difficult approaches. Some animals were removed by the federal government between 1930 and 1939 but the 1960 legislation now protects the horses.

There has always been concern the animals have eaten the sparse island vegetation and are standing on a fast disappearing tract of land in grave danger of extinction.

But during most of the year, a rich, nourishing vegetation covers the island which is dotted with fresh water lakes and ponds containing excellent drinking water.

On one occasion, in response to public demand for food for the horses, tons of baled hay were dropped on the island by the government. Some were kicked apart by the horses and blew off the island while the rest was too tightly packed to be of any food value.

Other efforts to aid the horses, such as erecting plank shelters and windbreaks, proved unwanted by the horses which kicked them apart.

Young mainland stallions were liberated on the island to "improve" the herds but they were killed in combat by jealous native stallions.

Ronald Peterson of Odessa, Ontario, recently shot a brown and white deer on the farm of his father, Clifford Peterson, at Arden, Ontario.

The part albino deer did not have the pink eyes usually associated with albino animals.

Mr. Peterson Senior, states that there is a story saying that anyone who shoots an albino deer will have ten years bad luck. This evidently does not apply to part albino deer, because Ronald shot an eight-point buck the following day.

Gravity Student Modern Recluse

COLLINS, Ont. (CP) — Wendell Bleckwith is one man who has little to fear from an energy shortage.

Mr. Bleckwith, 58, is a modern-day recluse who left his executive suite, his wife and four children 19 years ago and who has been living for the last 10 years in the Northern Ontario wilderness about a 4-mile canoe trip from this tiny railroad settlement, 399 miles north of Thunder Bay, Ont.

However, the popular image of hermits seems strangely few simple tools—furniture and two story-book log cabins.

He learned to construct a birchbark canoe without the use of metal tools, and found the secrets of starting a fire by rubbing wood.

His hours are filled with a mixture of mental\-mathematical exercises and physical labor in cutting, carving and building.

Mr. Bleckwith's only visitors are a number of Indians and—three or four times a year—bush pilots who fly in his food supplies, paid for by a San Francisco business executive who underwrites his research by paying his $1,200-a-year food bill.

Occasionally, Mr. Bleckwith goes out to Armstrong, Ont., a small railway community from which his supplies are brought by plane.

Often he meets the plane, handing the pilot another grocery list and saying: "I'll see you in about four months."

He said about two years after his arrival, a Canadian immigration official flew in wanting to know why he didn't declare himself an immigrant when crossing the border.

"I explained that I didn't declare myself because I wasn't a citizen of the United States or any other country," but a citizen of the world, he said. A compromise was made to stay which involves applying regularly for a visitor's visa.

Mr. Bleckwith said that when he est ect on his quest, he was seeking not only solitude, but a particular place on earth that fitted his mathematical calculations.

Eleven years ago he was in northern Wisconsin, but a meeting with the San Francisco executive resulted in an agreement to build a cabin in the Canadian wilderness. He thought that he should be as much northerly placed, he said. The cabin he now has is at the exact latitude and longitude which coincided with his calculations.

He said in the first few years, the executive came up to visit the cabin, but has not been back for about six years. However, he continues to send him lengthy and detailed reports each year.

Generous To A Fault

TORONTO (CP) — A man who bought drinks all round in a bar was undone by his own generosity. The bartender called police, who later charged the man with a bank robbery earlier that day. The man had fled with $600 after demanding money from the teller.

Hotel Guests Leave Variety of Articles

OTTAWA (CP) — What do you find in a hotel's lost and found department?

Lisa Charlton, assistant manager of a Holiday Inn here, says clothing is the most common item left in rooms by guests but radios, tape recorders, eyeglasses, briefcases, books, wallets and even dentures are often forgotten.

The hotel's lost-and-found storage area is about six feet by 10 feet, "and it's packed with stuff all the time," Ms. Charlton said.

The policy is to send hotel guests their possessions by mail if the address is known. Goods grist its share of gloves, scarves, umbrellas, car keys, costume jewellery, watches, books, mitts, toy rubbers, hairpiet, pipes and a few sweaters and hats.

The arts centre security chief, Gaston Charbonneau, says the most unusual article found so far is a bra.

Many Mints Made

TORONTO (CP) — The Life Savers Co. reports that enough Life Savers, the candy mint with a hole in the middle, have been made to create a hole a quarter of an inch wide and more than one million miles long. The company, which started production in 1913, recently made its 35 billionth roll.

Ice Cold Swim

Belleville police shocked quite a few people during yesterday's noon hour when they went swimming in the Moira River, just underneath the Lower Bridge. They weren't searching for a body and they weren't crazy. It was simply all in the line of duty. An investigation into a shoplifting case that occurred over the weekend revealed that one juvenile and two adult shopifters had stashed their stolen goods under the bridge and the police were looking for them. They found several cosmetic items that will be used as evidence in court. Divers involved in the case were Constables Dave Leavey, John Walker and Ed Cox. Traffic Safety Sergeant Bob Hall served as lookout on top of the bridge.

Water to Be Point Anne Problem

Point Anne homeowners will present a petition to Thurlow council within the week to get the wheels rolling for a township application for aid under the Local Improvements Act.

As the June 30, 1974, deadline for withdrawal of water service by Canada Cement Lafarge Ltd. nears, residents are beginning to fear they will be left high and dry with empty taps.

The company's Pt. Anne operation was shut down several months ago, but company officials agreed to continue services till June 30, 1974. For many years, Pt. Anne residents have been receiving water from the company's water filtration plant at no charge.

Tuesday, a delegation from Pt. Anne requested council that it aid them in their attempts to get funds for the construction of water treatment facilities. This purification plant and pump house would serve 24 homeowners in the community, now nearly vacant after the withdrawal of the town's largest employer to Bath, Ontario.

The petition to council is the first step in the long process to get Local Improvement funds for the construction of water facilities in this rural community east of Belleville. Under act provisions, a partial grant is obtainable. The remainder of the construction costs would be borne by town residents debentured over several years.

In September, at a special meeting with Thurlow council, the homeowners decided to incorporate, hire a consulting engineer to bring down a cost estimate and, subsequently, finance the filtration plant themselves.

However, paying for the plant, estimated by the engineer to total about $28,000, proved to be not feasible.

Speaking before council yesterday, spokesman Chester Sheppard said, "We have to consider the one who can pay the least, and govern ourselves accordingly."

Each resident would have paid between $1,200 and $1,400 in a lump sum to finance construction. Some homeowners can't afford this, said Mr. Sheppard. Borrowing the money, at present-day high interest rates, was not the answer for some of the town's elderly residents. Some would need to assume a second mortgage, he said.

Another resident, John Storring told council if Local Improvement money was used for hooming, then the residents' association will check every method of possible funding over again.

Council came out in wholehearted support of residents' search for funds, though cautioned provincial money could be slow in coming. Councillor George Beer said, "We can only help you in so many ways, but we'll go as far as we can go."

Councillor Beer told the delegation he will make an effort to arrange a meeting between residents and Clarke Rollins, MPP Hastings, as soon as possible. He hoped Mr. Rollins could provide some advice on the availability of grants.

Had Parts, Fined $400

A Belleville man, who was yesterday convicted of possessing stolen car parts, was fined $400 by Judge J.L. Clendenning in provincial court here.

Douglas Peter Jones, 24, of 271 Foster Ave., Apt. 7, was arrested by police after they found $229 worth of stolen automotive parts in his apartment.

The car parts, a steering wheel, an aluminium tank, five wheels and pieces of a carburetor, had been stolen from a 1966 Corvette that had been kept in storage at the Rod and Custom Club on South Front Street.

Jones, who pleaded guilty to the charge of possessing stolen goods valued in excess of $200, had told police that he bought the automotive equipment in a late October or early November knowing that it had been stolen.

In speaking to sentence, Crown Attorney Glenn Deline told the court that he hoped Judge Clendenning would consider giving Jones a substantial fine, since this type of crime was becoming more and more prevalent.

A severe sentence would deter others who were inclined to encourage thieves by providing them with a market for their stolen goods, he said.

Metered Spaces May Break Law

Local motorists parking their cars at some street meters spaces in Belleville could be breaking the law.

This has been brought to the attention of the city traffic committee and reports from the city engineer and city police chief seem to bear out a claim of inconsistency in the city's parking regulations.

The trouble is that certain parking meter spaces apparently infringe on distance limitations with respect to fire hydrants and walkways at street corners.

The city traffic bylaw provides for no person to park within 10 feet of a fire hydrant or within 30 feet of a crosswalk at an intersection.

But at the same time there are a number of metered parking spaces closer to the hydrants and crosswalks than the city traffice bylaw allows.

The question is whether the nonconforming parking at such parking meter spaces would be breaking the law.

Police Chief D. T. Crosbie agreed that the traffic bylaw appeared to be operating against itself but said there had been no complaint of the inconsistency.

The chief said that if any meter space does encroach on a corner, hydrant or other prohibition, the necessary adjustment should be made with appropriate signing and removal of the parking meters.

The traffic committee referred the matter to the parking authority for information as to how many meter spaces might be affected.

A Spoonful of Batter

Bradley Grills, 10, wasn't sure whether he wanted to taste a spoonful of batter, but Jimmy Hardy, 10, had no such qualms. Into his mouth went the leftovers of the chocolate chip and walnut cookies the boys helped bake for their Queen Mary Elementary School grade five Christmas party. Yesterday, the youngsters baked a batch of batter for their party under the supervision of a student's mother who provided the recipe and some needed advice.

Walkout Uncertain

Quinte Teachers Angry

Teachers here are said by their spokesman to be "angry" over education minister Thomas Wells' bill banning strikes.

Judy Carty, communication officer for district 19 of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation, comprising Hastings, Prince Edward and Lennox and Addington counties, said teachers are annoyed by the way the government went about finding off a threatened strike by teachers with 17 provincial school boards.

But students here probably won't know until Monday whether or not their high school teachers will join the one-day walkout called for next Tuesday to protest the minister's action.

Meetings and polls will have to be held in schools and on the county level before OSSTF members here make a decision on walking out Tuesday.

Mrs. Carty, a Centennial Secondary School teacher, said the minister, with his draft bill introduced Monday, took away teachers' rights "without any discussion at all." Teachers, she said, are particularly concerned by the "retroactive nature" of the bill. It outlaws mass teacher resignations, already given by their staffs in 17 boards of education in Ontario. At the time the resignations were made, Nov. 30, such action was legal.

Teacher-board relations in Hastings county have been harmonious in the past. High school teachers here have said obey the edict of their provincial executive last September to withdraw voluntary after-school services to students.

A feature of the draft legislation proposed by the minister is a compulsory

Alarm Box

Belleville firefighters responded to the following call for assistance during the 24-hour period ending at 8 a.m. Wednesday:

4:40 p.m. Tuesday, false alarm, behind the sales barn on North Park Street.

County Council Meets Monday

Hastings County Warden Horace Casey has called a two-day session of county council to convene next Monday, Dec. 17.

The two-day December meeting will be the last regular session for 1973 when council committees to give their final reports for the year.

Also at the December session, council will be asked to deal with a number of resolutions from other municipalities, including one from Wollaston suggesting a bounty at least $100 be placed on wolves in the county.

Another resolution from Marmora village asks for provincial regulations that would bar the sale of used funeral coaches to anyone but funeral directors.

The Highlands of Hastings Tourist Region is requesting provincial financial assistance for the maintenance of tourist roads in Hastings and the county of Lanark wants the provincial and federal governments to guarantee adequate supplies of newsprint to all weekly newspapers throughout the province. The resolution states that weekly newspapers are considered to be an integral and essential part of cultural, business and municipal affairs.

20-charge Guilty Plea

A Belleville woman, convicted on 20 charges of fraud and false pretences which involved a total of $897, was remanded in custody pending the preparation of a pre-sentence report, after she appeared before Judge J. L. Clendenning in provincial court yesterday.

Marilyn Diane Malcom, pleaded guilty to all of the false pretences charges as well as to additional charges of possession of marijuana, ritsin and petty trespass.

Arrested by police early this month, Miss Malcom was charged with the fraud and false pretences offences after she spent the month of November touring Hastings County purchasing merchandise from stores with cheques drawn on a bank account that had had a balance of nil since May.

The fraudulent purchases were made in Belleville, Madoc, Tweed, Trenton, Stirling and Belleville.

Using her own name and an alias, Caroline Wendy Green, Miss Malcom purchased clothes, clothing, a radio, records, a cassette tape player, two hide-a-beds, a woman's electric shaver, some electric hair curlers, a necklace, a set of earrings, shoes and a purse.

The narcotics possession conviction arose from an incident in which police found two hand pipes in her possession that had been used for smoking marijuana. The pipes were found in her purse while she was being questioned about the false pretences charges.

The petty trespass conviction arose from an incident at her step-father's house in Belleville in September.

Judge Clendenning sentenced Miss Malcom to four days in jail on each of the narcotics and false pretences charges and remanded her in custody for sentencing on Dec. 20 on the false pretences charges.

Police indicated that they expected to have several more charges of false pretences to place before the court against Miss Malcom at that time.

Deadline Tomorrow

If you haven't mailed that Christmas card to your aunt Sadie in Saskatoon, the post office advises that tomorrow (Dec. 13) is the deadline for out-of-town mail.

Those sending Christmas mail within the city itself have until Sunday, Dec. 17 to do it.

Now all that remains is to face those bustling mobs of shoppers downtown and at the malls to find that box of Christmas cards you have been looking for.

Contract Award Next Week

The contract for the Belleville Utilities Commission's new offices, adjacent to the existing service centre, will be awarded to one of five builders early next week.

Five tenders were opened by utilities chairman Lyle Langabeer and manager Neil Britton yesterday afternoon for the single-storey building expected to cost $205,000. The cost excludes architect's fees and furnishings. Final cost is expected to be $300,000.

Tenders for the building on the southeast corner of Sidney and College Sts. were called in mid-November based on two cost estimates —one for a winter start, the other for a spring start.

At present, architect Paul Wiegand is reviewing the tenders and expects to bring down a recommendation before the commission early next week. Commissioners will subsequently award the contract.

Council Will Set Fees

City Council will, from now on, regulate the fee schedules for the variety of licences issued by the Belleville Police Commission.

It was revealed at last night's meeting of the Police Commissioners that the past practice of having the commission incorporate fee schedules into the bylaws drawn up by them ran counter to regulations laid down in the province's Municipal Act.

The commission last night passed a motion that will effectively place the setting of licencing fees in the hands of City Council.

The Job Process

Interviews that may result in jobs at Thompson, Man., mining centre are being held for Quinte workers at Belleville Canada Manpower offices. Involved in the work-finding process are Jim Staveley, chairman Point Anne job relocation committee, (left) Manpower counsellor Bob Best, and Stan Hayter, International Nickel official.

Point Anne Family Set For Another New Home

Josef Pertschy may soon be moving on after work — again.

But, this time he'll have company — and a job.

Mr. Pertschy is among applicants from the Quinte district being interviewed in Belleville this week by International Nickel for work at its big Thompson mining community in northern Manitoba.

It's a centre of 17,000, neither isolated nor socially inactive, with opportunity to realize initiative, says its spokesman.

"I think vibrant describes the community," declares Stan Hayter. Eight years ago he started at Thompson as a young laborer. Now, he's the company personnel officer conducting the Belleville interviews among them Josef Pertschy.

Mr. Pertschy shares common situation with some of the applicants: He is among former Canada Cement Lafarge workers now idled by the recent phase-out of the company's Point Anne plant.

He may have a proven mobility edge over some others. At bough it's 30 years since his last move, Mr. Pertschy is used to migrating after work.

His background: A refugee at 16 from a Communist slave state, settling in Austria, then England; arrived in Canada in 1951, settling in Belleville a year later with Point Anne job.

Along with adaptability has come versatili y. He's been a professional gardener, farm worker, crane operator, tractor-trailer driver, among others.

Tuesday, he and his wife took the interview with Inco at the city's Canada Manpower Centre. He was accepted — pending his medical report.

Granted there are things he'll miss, says Mr. Hayter, Thus men are interviewed with their wives and fiances.

It's the women who ask many of the questions about Thompson's life style, he says.

What they learn': With daily bus, rail and plane service, and a highway 400 miles south to Winnipeg, there's no reason to feel isolated.

A modern community incorporated as a city in 1967 — it has all the social and cultural amenities.

Living is further secured by the work fringe benefits — the company pays 100 per cent of life insurance, pensions, weekly indemnity and dental plant.

It's youthful — the average age is 24 and most newcomers adapt to the surroundings very quickly.

Josef Pertschy doesn't see the location making that much difference.

"After all," he says, "it's all the same country."

For jobs in that location the company leans to married workers. People like the Josef Pertschys, with their three children, four to 14 years, are "really independent," can adapt more smoothly.

"It's less difficult for married men to make that adjustment. In essence he takes his community with him," says Mr. Hayter.

POP TOPIC:

WHICH CANDY IS FAVORED BY BILLIARD PLAYERS?

ANSWER: THE _ _ _

Unlikely But--

Oil Tax Could Go To $4 Per Barrel

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal export tax on crude oil could be boosted to $4 a barrel by legislation proposed to the Commons Tuesday.

But the prospect is highly unlikely, Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said after tabling a formal ways and means motion clearing the way for introduction of the bill, possibly Thursday.

As announced last week, the measure will raise the tax from its current $1.50-a-barrel rate to $2.20 in January. It also will give the cabinet power to adjust the rate monthly on advice from the National Energy Board.

The House was debating an emergency bill that would grant the government sweeping powers to cope with potential oil shortages this winter. Introduced last week, it would set up a special allocation board with authority to ration oil supplies immediately at the wholesale level and move later to individual rationing if necessary.

Mr. Macdonald said the $4 export tax figure is "the highest conceivable limit" the levy could reach and he doesn't expect it to go that far. The figure is included in the bill only because parliamentary tradition requires tax measures to have a ceiling, he said.

"The House doesn't like to give the government a blank cheque."

Oil Prices Must Rise In Years Ahead--PCs

OTTAWA (CP) — Oil prices must rise in the five western provinces to ensure enough fuel to heat homes, run cars and power industry in the years ahead.

This is the message from three Conservative energy critics taking a tough stand against the government decision to continue the petroleum product price freeze until the winter heating season ends.

Alvin Hamilton (Qu'Appelle-Moose Mountain), James Balfour (Regina East) and Peter Bawden (Calgary South) said in interviews Tuesday the government broke its word and threw the oil industry into confusion by extending the freeze past the original Jan. 31 cut-off date.

All three said prices should have been allowed to rise gressively after Jan. 31 to guarantee continuation of vital oil exploration work.

Mr. Hamilton, agriculture minister in the government of John Diefenbaker and now chief Conservative energy critic, said the oil industry would have agreed to a long-term series of controlled increases, easing the impact on the public.

Peter Bawden, a millionaire oil driller who entered politics in 1972, said the increases could have been spaced "over a period of a year or two or maybe longer."

A time frame of 12 to 18 months was suggested by Mr. Balfour, a lawyer currently drafting a new Conservative energy position paper.

Conservatives Bitter About Latest Defeat

OTTAWA (CP) — The Liberal-New Democrat energy alliance has spawned renewed bitterness in the House of Commons.

The Conservatives, a handful of seats short of dethroning the Liberals in last year's election, once again have been thwarted in their 10-year struggle to snap their arch-rivals' grip on power.

The Conservative benches exploded Tuesday, showering the government, the New Democrats and particularly Mr. Trudeau with abuse.

The trigger was the rising cost of living and Conservative dissatisfaction with Mr. Trudeau's answers, or lack of them, on the subject.

Mr. Trudeau, remained calm and even showed some of the old style which his critics have called arrogance and contempt.

Mr. Trudeau replied mildly that if the Conservatives would not shout so much, they would hear his answers.

"I just want to add . . . that it is not my habit to raise my voice, as the honorable member does, to cover the shouting."

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield had a similar complaint against the prime minister a few minutes later. He said Mr. Trudeau uttered "one or two words very quietly" to prevent the House hearing them and to annoy the Conservatives.

"He did it deliberately to affront the House and to try to create a situation," complained Mr. Stanfield.

There was more chaos later when George Hees (PC—Prince Edward Hastings), also complained of Mr. Trudeau's conduct.

"He sits in his chair and sulks. He is an absolute disgrace."

That brought an explosion from the Liberal benches and some comments that apparently irked Mr. Hees even more.

"If any of you guys want to step outside, well, I'm ready for that too," he shot back.

To Buy Goods

WINNIPEG (CP) — The provincial government is establishing a Crown trading corporation to buy products manufactured by Manitoba companies for resale on the national and international markets, Industry Minister Leonard Evans announced Tuesday.

Share Work Load

HERTFORD, England (CP) — A gang from Hertfordshire County council recently dug a hole in the main road of the village of Bushey to repair some cables. When they returned from a tea break they found a gang from Bushey urban council filling it in. The mixup happened because the hole was on the border of the two groups' work areas.

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Ontario Motor League
Eastern Ontario Club

QUESTION: Is the speed limit 50 miles per hour all over the United States?—

ANSWER: Yes. The speed limit is 50 miles an hour on all highways in the States now unless a lower limit is posted. Going through towns and cities and near schools it would be lower. We are hearing of Canadians being fined because they are exceeding the speed limits. This has been on television news and in all the newspapers, so all Canadians should know and abide by this. They may not have all the new signs up yet, but you'll still be fined if you go over fifty.

QUESTION: Have you heard anything new on the gas shortage in the United States?

ANSWER: We have been asking our members to let us know if they have had trouble getting gas on their way down. So far, any reports are to the effect that they haven't had any. Gas sales now are prohibited from 9 p.m. Saturday night to midnight on Sunday. For the last two months we have been advising our members not to drive on weekends, to keep gas tanks fill a ng along the way, also to travel only on Interstate and Turnpike highways and to get gas before 4 p.m. weekdays. This may be a good reason for them not having any difficulty. The A.A.A. office in St. Petersburg Florida, has received a few complaints from Canadians refused gas at U.S. service stations. They say these are isolated cases and they remind all Ontario Motor League members to report this to their nearest A.A.A office if it happens to them. The OML also vises strongly against carrying additional cans of gas in your car. Not only is the practice dangerous, but you are liable to a $700 fine if caught in New York State.

QUESTION: We are thinking of taking the auto-train from Lorton, Virginia to save gas. Please give us their time schedules.

ANSWER: Starting December 1st 1973, there are two auto-trains running daily between Lorton, Virginia, 20 miles south of Washington on Interstate 95, and Sanford, Florida, just a short distance from Disneyworld. One leaves Lorton at 4 p.m. and arrives in Sanford at 7.30 a.m. the next day. You must be there two hours before the scheduled departure time to get your car on board. The second train leaves Lorton at 8 p.m. and arrives in Sanford at 11.30a.m Again, a two-hour arrival before departure applies. The auto-train fully insures your car for damages during the trip. They do not, however, insure the contents of your car and suest that you lock your

Financial Hardships Helpful

VANCOUVER (CP) — Author and former publisher Lovat Dickson says aspiring writers should not deprive themselves of financial hardships and should give up if the rejection slips keep coming.

"You must teach yourself to write, and it's a painful process," says the 70-year-old Dickson. He adds that government grants cushion writers from hardship and may impair their development.

"And it's an equally painful mistake to encourage someone to write who simply hasn't got it in him.

"If a writer keeps pulling rejection slips it's a good indication he should not be writing."

Mr. Dickson, the author of several books including Wilderness Man, a biography of Ontario naturalist Grey Owl, said in his years as a publisher every book worth publishing was printed because publishing companies are constantly in search of good material.

"On the other hand, I've seen and heard of many books that didn't deserve to be published," he said. "They're cheap books and they make cheap readers. There's a lot of them around."

Mr. Dickson moved to Toronto in 1967 after 36 years in London, England. His breakthrough in the publishing world came in 1932 when he published Pilgrims of the Wild by Archibald Belaney, the self-declared half-breed known as Grey Owl. The book made a fortune for both author and publisher.

In 1938, Macmillan of London bought Mr. Dickson's publishing company and gave him a job as assistant editor. He worked for 35 years with Macmillan, during which he saw the appearance of many best-sellers, including Gone with the Wind.

His advice to writers is to try writing articles before attempting a book. And, even more important, he says, don't be afraid to live—to feel hardship, disappointment and, hopefully, success.

Welcome House Proves Success

TORONTO (CP) — The success of a welcome house, opened late last year to assist Ugandan Asian refugees in adapting to North American culture, has prompted the provincial government to extend the service to all immigrants in Toronto.

The government recently approved a $200,000 two-year experimental program to turn an old government building into a welcome house for seeping new Canadians into the mainstream.

Program co-ordinator Diana Eaton says immigrants have three basic needs—employment, housing and friendship.

"We'll try to deal with all three needs," she says.

The Ugandans welcome centre assisted about 800 immigrants during the six months it was in operation.

Counsellors at the new centre will help immigrants with such basic problems as filling out forms for the Ontario Hospital Insurance Plan, social insurance and family allowance benefits.

Counsellors from Canada Manpower and the Ontario ministry of labor will assist them in finding suitable employment.

The welcome house will also keep a list of available rooms, apartments and houses within the means of the immigrants.

A citizens' committee will try to put the immigrants in touch with Canadian families and their own ethnic groups in the city.

The centre will also offer English lessons.

Frank Moritsugu, acting director of the citizenship branch of the ministry of community and social services says:

"Once a new arrival has a sense of his community and knows where the milk store is and where he can obtain the services he needs, then he probably won't need the welcome house.

"That could be days, weeks or months after his arrival and we certainly won't turn him away if he still feels he needs to come to the house."

Bush Beef Preferred

THABAZIMBI, South Africa (AP) — The government is urging farmers of marginal land to switch to "bush beef" and raise wild animals such as eland, kudu, and springbok instead of domestic cattle.

Government experts concluded after years of study that everyone would benefit from the change: consumers, farmers and the animal kingdom itself.

Prof. John Skinner, of Pretoria University's mammal department, said there is no reason why wild animals can't be farmed.

The eland can even be milked and Soviet scientists discovered the butterfat content of eland milk was higher than that of the domestic cow.

The Soviets were the first to become interested in farming game. In 1892 Russian explorers took four eland bulls and four cows back to Askaniya-Nova and since have bred 400 animals in captivity.

Apart from the high butterfat, the Soviet scientists found eland milk has twice as much protein as cow's milk, is richer in several minerals and keeps longer.

But South African interest in the eland and other game is as meat animals.

A decade ago two researchers staked off equal areas of land and stocked one with game, the other with domestic animals.

After years of studying the numbers of animals, calving percentages, carrying capacity, mortality rate and so on they found the game areas produced more meat and, at current market rates, six times as much money for the game farmer.

The government report said that as wild animals were better suited to their natural environment they made better use of it.

Old Folks' Home Bar Stops Heavy Drinking

LEAMINGTON, Ont. (CP) — John Harvenck runs a tight ship in the bar of the Sun Parlor Home for the Aged.

Mr. Harvenck, 73, is the resident bartender in the lounge, opened last June for the 275 residents of the home in this town 35 miles southeast of Windsor.

"If they get too rowdy, I just cut them off," he says.

Mr. Harvenck, a former commercial baitender, built the portable bar and now runs the concession. He is given a free drink each day for his efforts.

"We were trying to control the amount of liquor that was being brought into the home," said administrator Clarence Holland.

"It was getting so bad that the nurses' stations were becoming a dispensary for spirits and the nurses were more like bartenders."

Mr. Holland said amendments to the Liquor Control Act made it legal for residents to have alcoholic beverages in their rooms. "We couldn't control the situation."

There were problems with some of the residents getting drunk. Others were fleeing downtown each day to the liquor store and local taverns.

The suggestion to have a bar was approved by the residents' council and, after a trial period, sanctioned by Essex County council which runs the home. It is one of a few facilities in the province.

The bar is patronized regularly by only about 10 of the residents.

"What we have here are mostly residents from a generation in which drinking was not always approved," says Mr. Holland.

"But in about 10 years there will be a new generation of residents who will feel differently about liquor." At 2:55 p.m. John Harvenck is behind his bar, setting up the bottles of rye, gin, vodka and rum and unlocking the beer cooler. A couple of his regulars are waiting for the opening time.

The resident buy six tickets for $2 and are supposed to have only two drinks during the hour the bar is open.

At precisely 3 p.m. the first drink is poured. And John Harvenck pours a full shot. "We don't cheat anyone here."

In a few minutes the number of patrons had grown to six. And like a good bartender, John Harvenck is joking and talking with the regulars.

"I think the bar should be open for two hours a day," he says.

There is a chorus of agreement from the patrons.

Mr. Holland said he feels the social hour has been a success. It has cut down on the amount of liquor brought into the home and introduced some control over the situation.

He said a drink or two each day was shown in one home to have cut down on the tranquillizers and other drugs by 50 per cent.

"Besides, if a person went through life accustomed to having a drink, he should be able to have a drink here," he said.

"It has given many residents something to look forward to each day, especially the ones who are confined to the home and are unable to get out to town."

About half the residents are bed-care cases.

"A report in the current issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association, says the use of mild alcoholic beverages can have favorable physical and psychological effects on many elderly persons.

Dr. Thomas B. Turner of Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine, Baltimore, reported on a controlled study group of elderly persons who were given daily dosages of beer and wine over several months.

"Most of the patients became more alert, friendlier Others developed better appetites and sleeping patterns and some showed improvement in work performance," he says.

"There is one thing about this job," said bartender Harvenck. "I don't have to check any birth certificates."

MPs Back Enforcing Vote Law

OTTAWA (CP) — An amendment that would provide for a commissioner to enforce expenses provisions of the Elections Act was pushed through the Commons elections committee Tuesday.

New Democrats and Conservatives joined forces to defeat the Liberals who opposed an amendment by Andrew Brewin (NDP—Toronto Greenwood) calling on the chief electoral officer to appoint "someone who shall ensure that provisions of the Elections Act be complied with and enforced."

Allan McKinnon (PC—Victoria) said that in the last general election 207 candidates did not file returns on election expenses and politicians would continue to "ignore and defy the law unless some means of enforcement of the Elections Act provisions were imposed.

Paul Dick (PC—Lanark-Renfrew-Carleton), also supported the amendment, said the last prosecution for contravention of the Elections Act was in 1935.

Privy Council President Allan MacEachen said that, "enforcing provisions are in the bill and it is therefore self-enforcing."

The committee has already adopted more than 30 amendments to the bill that would limit campaign spending by candidates and parties in federal elections.

WILLIAM DAVIS

Equitable Deal

TORONTO (CP) — The government is taking the "equitable approach" by paying those land owners in the park way belt the going rate as of last June 4 instead of today's prices, Premier William Davis said Tuesday.

June 4 was the date the premier revealed the route of the proposed green belt, which will run from Oakwes to Dundas, Ont. near Hamilton.

"I think one can say that the market price per se for anyone purchasing within the parkway belt today is very substantially less than it would have been on the 4th of June," the premier told the legislature.

Shun Boycott

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government has refused to participate in the California grape and lettuce boycott involving a contract dispute between migrant farmer workers and the growers over working conditions. Premier William Davis told the legislature Tuesday that the boycott is a matter of personal choice.

Had Hair Cut

STURGEON FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Richard Danis, 28, and Robert Devost, 26, both of Kitchener, were charged Tuesday with robbery with violence following an incident at a party in this community about 15 miles west of North Bay.

Police said Ben Legault, 26, of Sturgeon Falls was beaten and had his shoulder-length hair cut by two men. On demand, he gave them $30.

Seek Asylum

SANTIAGO (Reuter) — About 40 persons seeking asylum from the Chilean military junta slipped into the West German embassy here Tuesday in a last rush to leave the country, diplomatic sources said. They joined 30 already inside. The junta had set a deadline of midnight Tuesday night after which anyone taking shelter with foreign embassies or international organizations in Chile will not be considered eligible for safe-conducts out of the country.

See Shortage

CHATHAM, Ont. (CP) — Present indications are there will be shortages of fertilizer for farmers in southwestern Ontario in 1974, Al DeWitte of Blenheim, Ont., about 19 miles south of here, said Tuesday.

Mr. DeWitte, manager of Kehl Fertilizers Ltd. and past president of the Ontario Plant Food Council, told a meeting of the Kent Soil and Crop Improvement Assoc. that most dealers will be supplying only their regular customers.

Bill Presented

OTTAWA (CP) — Solicitor-General Warren Allmand rejected Tuesday a demand from Quebec for about $362.1 million dollars which the province says is compensation owing as the federal share of Quebec police costs.

The bill, for $362,110,746.91, was presented the solicitor-general by Quebec Justice Minister Jerome Choquette in a two-hour meeting.

He said later that Mr. Allmand treated his demand coldly but that "I'm not leaving it there, I will continue the fight."

Mr. Allmand said later that the federal government owes no money to Quebec for police services and, at any rate, he has not the legislative authority to agree to such compensation.

Mr. Choquette said the money is owing to Quebec because the federal government has paid part of the costs of the RCMP services provided eight provinces—all but Quebec and Ontario—who contracts with the national police force to provide provincial and sometimes municipal policing.

Vote to Evict

TORONTO (CP) — Metropolitan Toronto council voted Tuesday to evict 60 residents from their rented land on the Toronto Islands by the end of next August.

Gay Protest

NEW YORK (AP) — A young man posing as a college student disrupted a live broadcast of The CBS News with Walter Cronkite Tuesday night, appearing briefly on camera in a protest against the network's coverage of homosexuals.

"Well, a rather interesting development in the studio; we have a protest in the studio," said Cronkite with a smile after the youth interrupted and the cameras were shut down briefly.

Frustrated

MELBOURNE (Reuter) — Suddenly it all became too much for Australian earthmoving contractor Jim Hutchings.

He was having trouble keeping up the payments on his bulldozer, the machine would not start in the mornings and parts needed constant replacing. Then his wife walked out, taking their son and daughter with her.

Jim asked his wife to return.

When she refused, he hopped in his bulldozer Tuesday drove it at the r $25,000 suburban home, and started to knock the house down.

But with the job only half completed the bulldozer broke down.

Six Killed

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Six men were killed Tuesday when fire broke out aboard the aircraft carrier Kitty Hawk about 700 miles east of the Philippines, the United States Navy reported. The blaze left 38 other men suffering from minor burns or smoke inhalation. The cause of the fire was not determined immediately.

Air Said Clean

SAN FRANCISCO (Reuter) — The $100-billion effort to clean up air pollution is nonsense, a professor said Tuesday. He said United States air has been getting cleaner since the turn of the century. Hugh Ellsaesser challenged scientists at a meeting of the American Geophysical Union to prove that the hundreds of people who died in the so-called air pollution disasters such as that in London in 1952 were killed by smog. The air has always been polluted by dust, forest fires and man's dom of metal burning, and modern pollution has been more than offset by a switch to cleaner fuels, he said.

Check Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons elections committee began a second clause-by-clause run-through of the elections expenses bill Tuesday in an attempt to approve some of the more agreeable clauses.

Earnings Modest

FILEY, England (CP) — The new morality is cutting into earnings from rental of beach changing huts, a councillor in this Yorkshire town reports. "People are not so modest now," he said. "They are not worried about showing a bit of leg or bottom" while changing under a beachwell to save a seven-pence rental fee."

Blakeney Ready To Sell Oil Below Its Value

REGINA (CP) — If the federal government wants Saskatchewan oil to be sold in Canada at less than its international value, the Saskatchewan government will co-operate, Premier Allan Blakeney said Tuesday evening.

Provincial co-operation would be forthcoming "so long as this is not done at the expense of the Saskatchewan taxpayer (nor) without full compensating benefits to Saskatchewan in return."

"I'm sure that the taxpayers of Saskatchewan would be prepared to contribute to a national policy of keeping energy prices down all across Canada if Saskatchewan received concrete and effective help in furthering our policies of establishing secondary industry, of stabilizing farm income."

The premier made the remarks in a speech prepared for delivery on a province-wide radio and television hookup.

In his speech, the premier described the oil and gas conservation bill his government introduced in the provincial legislature Monday.

The bill, he said, would conserve oil for future Saskatchewan consumers, give the people of the province the benefit of higher oil prices and encourage further development of Saskatchewan petroleum resources.

Davis Warns Against Panic Over Energy

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis warned Tuesday against creating panic and public fear over the extent of the energy crisis.

Speaking in the legislature, the premier said he will not be a part of any movement to create public fear.

The premier said there are many unknowns involved in the energy situation and it is important that people in positions of responsibility do not create artificial unrest or pessimism.

He reiterated his belief that Ontario's economy is related to the situation in the United States but said "there has not been any pattern set in the United States as it relates to their economy."

Provincial officials were monitoring the U.S. situation on a daily basis.

However, the premier stressed that in Ontario "there is a reasonable degree of security with respect to the energy supply."

He also predicted that Ontario manufacturers will be able to take advantage of energy problems in other jurisdictions and become more competitive on international markets.

Opposition Leader Robert Nixon asked the premier who he was talking about when he mentioned the artificial undermining of public confidence.

"Is it Stanfield?" asked Mr. Nixon.

"If there is any one man at the national level who can stimulate confidence in the future of Canada it is Robert L. Stanfield," said Mr. Davis.

Mr. Davis also said the government has a winter works program ready to go if the need arises.

"We have had nothing yet that indicates there is a need for it but if there is we will be there and we will be ready," said the premier.

Legislature Okays Labor Law Changes

TORONTO (CP) — New Democratic Party leader Stephen Lewis said Tuesday the provincial government is finally entering the 20th century with its labor legislation.

The legislature gave approval in principle to legislation amending the Employment Standards Act.

When finally approved, it will shorten the work week, make vacations with pay mandatory and protect workers when a plant is shut down for environmental reasons.

Mr. Lewis used the debate to attack the government's labor policies.

With the public galleries jammed with teachers waiting to hear debate on compulsory arbitration, the NDP leader said Labor Minister Fernand Guindon was doing too little too late.

To applause and laughter from the public galleries, Mr. Lewis charged the provincial government with acting only after public pressure forced it to move.

He singled out for criticism the termination pay clause in the legislation. He said a number of major provincial plants had closed shop without giving employees proper termination pay.

The government legislation, he said, was aimed specifically at the Environmental Protection Act.

However, he said the government knows that a court action is pending in Toronto to close a lead plant under the Health Act.

Mr. Lewis said it was "perverse" not to include the Health Act in the legislation.

Mr. Guindon said he has diligently tried to "humanize the workplace in the province."

"I can tell members opposite that my integrity as minister of labor is unquestionable." Mr. Guindon said.

If he accepted the opposition party's amendments and added the Public Health Act to legislation requiring termination pay it could cost one industry $51 million overnight."

Under questioning, Mr. Guindon said the $51-million figure had been plucked out of the air.

The legislation when approved will make the employers responsible when a plant is shut down for environmental reasons.

Debate on the legislation continues today.

Checkerboard Plans Law Is Given Reading

TORONTO (CP) — Legislation aimed at clearing up the chaos and uncertainty resulting from checkerboarding land plans passed its major legislative hurdle Tuesday.

After day-long debate the legislature gave second reading to the legislation which will give the government authority to validate land titles resulting from checkerboarding if a municipality so requests.

The debate Tuesday centred on technicalities and the government beat back nearly a dozen opposition party amendments to the bill.

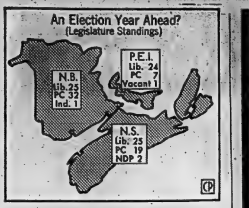
The legislation was prompted by land development methods pronced by developers, called checkerboarding.

Checkerboarding has been ruled by various courts as an attempt to circumvent the planning act, and people who purchased lots under the plan have had difficulty getting clear title to their property.

Also under the legislation, ministerial approval will not be required for appointments to the planning boards and redevelopment will not need municipal board approval but will come directly to the minister.

Both opposition parties objected to the legislation as being too hurried and complained about the lack of consultation with those affected.

The legislation now needs only the formality of third reading and royal assent to become law.



Marchand Rejects Plea To Delay Head Tax

OTTAWA (CP) — A request by the Air Transport Association of Canada (ATAC) that the government delay its new airport "head tax" has been rejected by Transport Minister Jean Marchand.

He told the Commons Tuesday the request is not reasonable and he can see no point in delaying its implementation, scheduled Jan. 1.

A meeting of ATAC members concluded this week that the charge is "administratively unworkable" at the moment and would take time to implement, said ATAC President Angus Morrison in a telegram to Mr. Marchand.

Pubs Become Popular In Many Countries

LONDON (CP) — Popping down to the boozer is becoming a popular pastime in many countries outside Britain where British-style taverns seem to be sprouting.

While pubs still are few and far between in North America, many now can be found in European countries, Australia, Lebanon, the Bahamas and Japan.

Pub features like draught ale, a well-stacked barmaid and possibly a dart board appear to be attracting many more patrons than conventional bars and drinking parlors, especially in Europe.

Indeed, pubs offer far more than a place to down beer or liquor. As Dr. Samuel Johnson, the 18th-century literary genius and lover of the good things in life, once remarked:

"There is nothing which has yet been contrived by man by which so much happiness is produced as by a good tavern or inn."

Pubs—more correctly known as inns—have played a unique part in British life for centuries. They have always been more than drinking avenues; in almost every community they serve as social centres and meeting places where business can be mixed with pleasure.

The inn had its beginnings in the monastery rest house of medieval times, providing food and shelter for travellers. They developed into "church houses" which offered both succor to the traveller and a local meeting place. Church houses were equipped with brewing facilities to cope with local feasts and celebrations.

These feasts, known as "ales", were held to mark religious occasions and weddings and in aid of charity. In the west of England it still is possible to find "church house inns."

Besides having an important social role in the community, the inns played a part in the growth of the British legal system—inns often bougnt local courts of justice. Local government evolved from the discussion groups at village inns.

Many of Britain's 75,000 pubs now have television and in recent years the breweries have spent huge sums modernizing the decor, improving catering and providing such facilities as children's rooms.

Publicans have also dreamt up various entertainments to attract customers—ranging from go-go dancers and male "drag" acts to fully fledged stage shows.

The most popular pubs with tourists are those with historical or literary associations. In London they include Ye Olde Cheshire Cheese in Fleet Street and the Prospect of Whitby in dockland.

Other favorites are the 16th-century Spaniards Inn in Hampstead, the Samuel Pepys, the Sherlock Holmes near Trafalgar Square and the Escape, which features the relics and souvenirs of Second World War prison camp escapers.

Licensing hours can be affected by a pub's position and clientele. The night workers of London's Covent Garden fruit market have their own pubs which open in the early hours of the morning—and an outsider may have to convince the landlord he has been working as a fruit porter all night.

There is some argument about which is the oldest pub in Britain. The Trip to Jerusalem inn in Nottingham claims to be 1,000 years old and is generally thought to be the tiltebolder, but the Fighting Cocks at St. Albans, north of London, retorts that it stands on the site of an even older inn and there are several other claimants.

At one time, most pubs were privately owned and often brewed their own beer. Some landlords were particularly skilful with old country wines and there is a suspicion that much of the rare old claret laid down in one Cambridge college is in fact elderberry wine produced by a wily country publican with a large supply of forged bottle labels.

Nowadays, however, most pubs are owned by one of the big brewing companies and "free house" selling several makes of beer are few and far between.

The biggest brewer of all, Guinness, whose beer is sold in almost every pub in Britain, owns only one pub itself, and that is a free house. It is the 17th century Castle Inn at Bodiam, southern England, which is set in Europe's largest hop farm and close to a moated castle.

Nigeria To Export Ogogoro

LAGOS (AP) — Ogogoro, Nigeria's popular and potent moonshine, has won official approval and brewers are looking for a world market.

Known locally as "illicit gin," ogogoro is actually fermented palm wine, a pungent-smelling drink widely consumed up and down the palm-fringed West African coast.

Palm wine comes from palm trees and is collected much like maple syrup and rubber by "toddy tappers" who drain the sap into gourds.

Because it ferments so quickly, palm wine collected in the morning and stored in a calabash is ready for consumption the same afternoon.

The tappers skilfully scamper up the swaying palms in their bare feet using a rope.

Now the drink that has satisfied Africa's rural villagers for centuries is coming under scientific scrutiny.

Chemists at the University of Lagos, working for two Nigerian distillers, used ogogoro produced by village moonshiners to test purity and refine the drink. Their experiments have produced an entire range of alcoholic beverages.

The two firms hope to begin mass production of ogogoro within two years and sell it at home and abroad.

The government, meanwhile, is drafting new laws to control the sale and quality of ogogoro. The rural villagers who produce ogogoro, sometimes called "the water," will in the future have to sell to a registered agent rather than directly to the public.

The agent can sell the crude product to approved distillers whose refined product is subject to quality control by the government.

Soon, says Femi Odeyemi, a lecturer in the University's department of chemistry, "the world can speak of sake in Japan, whisky in Europe, vodka in the Soviet Union, rum in Cuba and ogogoro in West Africa."

Touring Theatre Company Plans 65 Workshops

TORONTO (CP) — A touring theatre company managed by the Toronto Arts Foundation will give 156 performances and hold 65 workshops this year in secondary schools throughout Ontario.

The Theatre Hour Company was founded 10 years ago under the Great Theatre and the Ontario education department and performances in Metropolitan Toronto were so successful that provincial tours were started.

A sister company was formed two years ago through the theatre department of the National Arts Centre in Ottawa, making the program available to more schools. Seventy-two thousand students saw Theatre Hour performances last year.

Come on Son! Win, Win, Win

By Doug Walsh
Sports Editor

There are some knowledgeable hockey people who believe our youngsters are being introduced to the competitive aspect of the game too soon.

They argue that the practice of forming leagues and spending most of the ice time, running games, is wrong at least until the player is 12 or 13 years of age.

The point these people are trying to make is that more attention should be focused on skating, learning to handle the puck and so on.

From the time a boy first takes to the ice, he is placed on a team and away it goes. It's accepted.

Instead of learning the finer points of the game who get it by going through instruction in the fundamentals, he suddenly finds himself caught up in a whirl which is certainly not of his own making.

Too many of these neophytes become carried along in the wake of the rush of some grownup who is hell bent on proving something ... to someone ... at any cost.

Before he has discovered any fun in the game at all, the youngster is taught one thing ... WIN!

And don't think for a moment that this does not always in all-star circles. It's far too prevalent in the house leagues as well.

Too many of the minor league coaches and in some cases of the players are somehow convinced that there is no honor in going out there for the game, giving it your best, and losing.

Anyone who knows anything about young hockey players knows that five minutes after a loss, the thoughts of most of the little guys are miles away from the arena, and the game. There are so many worthwhile things to occupy a fellow's mind.

There's that game of ball hockey when he gets home.

He'll be out with the other neighborhood kids ... just having fun. No adults to mess that up.

Why can't adults take defeat?

Does it tarnish dad's image if his son happens to be on a losing team?

The minor leaguers don't want it to be that serious.

Sure, they like to be on a winner but it isn't the end of the world if the other guy scores out on top.

With win, win, win crammed down their throats, it is surprising that some of the players begin to learn bad habits in an effort to avoid the humiliation of defeat?

Can't catch a fast skater? Trip him .. hook him .. slash him .. but stop him.

The other team has a star player? Give him the butt end of the stick and get him along the boards.

Sound far fetched?

It isn't.

Norbert Neeld of Vancouver, B.C., was quoted recently as describing hockey as "a game of skill but butchery has taken over".

Neeld's son Greg is in a Toronto Hospital. A defenceman with Toronto Marlboros of the Major Junior A league, Greg was struck in the eye by a stick during a game in Kitchener last Friday.

Greg Neeld may lose the sight in his left eye.

Belleville Bobcats lost star forward Al Hartford with a serious eye injury earlier this season. He, too was the victim of an errant hockey stick.

Incidents like these happen in hockey. Accidents? Thankfully, most of them are.

But if there is even the slightest bit of evidence to substantiate Norman Neeld's claim, hundreds of Canadians should be making a silent vow to change things now.

The place to start is minor hockey.

Two Nine-goal Splurges

Nine seemed to be the number in the Gas House Hockey League last night, as two of the three games ended with that goals.

Golden Mile shut out Stanley Structures 9-0, while Fraser and O'Neil defeated Dollies' Lumber 9-1. In the other contest, a short staffed Doctors' team played Chuckwagon Foods to a 2-2 tie.

Randy Lambert, Dave Middleton and Jerry Lucas each had two goals for the Millers in their romp over Stanley. Wayne Brown, Terry Pope, and Bob Revoy added the others, while Carl Boomhower contributed six helpers.

Bob Harrison recorded the shutout, his third of the year.

Glen Fraser scored three times for Fraser and O'Neil, and added on assist to help his team. Brian Ace and Larry Pascoe fired two each, while Art Martin and Wayne McGeachy added singles. Bevan Clarke had four assists.

Scott MacLennan rulled goalie Jim Parker's shutout bid with Rollins' only goal.

Boat Show Dates Set

The 16th annual Toronto International Boat Show begins on Friday, February 1 and runs to Sunday, February 10, 1974 in the Automotive Building in the CNE, Toronto.

The Toronto show attracts over 125,000 visitors every year; over 140 exhibitors display their wares during its 10 day run. Showcased in this tremendous marine display are motors — both inboard and outboard — sailboats, cruisers, dinghies, trailers, marine models, publications, government services, accessories and clothing.

One of the largest and best organized shows of its kind in North America, the Toronto International Boat Show's proceeds are devoted broadly to conservation activities and to the encouragement of interest in the Canadian outdoors.

The 1974 Boat Show will feature, among many other attractions, wood carver Jack Whitehead who will be carving a figurehead for the Brigantine "Pierfaict", a ship vessel in the Brigantine Sailing Program. Queen Elizabeth II named the vessel during her visit to Canada last summer.

Rollins Peewees Shaded 4-3

Belleville teams dropped a pair of games in DMHA League action last night as both the Majors and Minor Peewees lost.

Kent Pierson scored at 17:46 of the final frame to give the Kingston Peewees a 4-3 win over the Rollins' Construction Peewee Majors. Other Kingston marksmen were John Lisemonte and Larry Garrah.

Scoring for Belleville were Greg Sproat, Billy Rowe, and Clarence Brockma.

Meanwhile the Dixie Lee Minor Peewees were dropping a 10-0 decision to their Kingston counterparts.

Kingston scored four goals in each of the first two periods and added two in the third in their romp. Dennis Pernock led the Kingston crew with three markers, while Mike Frew and Ian McInnis added two each. Scott Arniel and Mary Stower scored one each.

Brian Abrams recorded the shutout for Kingston.

Dukes Take Second

All teams saw action Monday night as the Belleville and District League opened the middle third of its schedule.

The SNAP Duke dropped only one double enroute to a 10-1 stopping of the Game-smith.

The win moved the Ducks in to second spot, seven points off the pace.

The Belleville Yardmen continued their winning ways, trimming the shorthanded 418 Mosquitoes 7-4. The victory moved the Yardmen into a share of fourth position with the slumping Foreigners, who took their third defeat in a row being upset by the Elks, 6-5.

The final contest saw the Smoke-eaters fail in their bid for first place, and drop to third as a result of their 7-4 loss to the first place Barflies.

Desjardins Gets Call—Wins

By IAN MacLAINE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Gerry Desjardins has a self-styled philosophy about playing goal.

"I don't mind sitting on the bench as long as the team is giving 100 per cent," the veteran New York Islander said Tuesday night.

But what does upset him, he said, is that when the team's other goaltender, Billy Smith, is "letting up easy goals, then I should be getting playing time."

Easy to say, but difficult to justify.

In the eight games Desjardins had played this year prior to Tuesday night's home game with California Golden Seals, rival teams averaged 4.04 goals against him.

Smith had yielded a paltry 2.94 in 19 contests.

But coach Al Arbor, a stickler when it comes to defense, yielded to the odds with the Islanders in the throes of a four-game losing streak.

In went Desjardins and the hapless Islanders responded with a 6-3 win, only their fifth of the year but enough to move them into a seventh place tie with Vancouver in the National Hockey League's East Division after the Canucks rebounded for a 3-3 standoff with Montreal Canadiens.

Billy Harris converted Denis Potvin's rebound for a power-play goal at 5:22 of the third period to break a 3-3 tie. Bob Nystrom added his insurance score at 19:38 and 16 seconds later Potvin completed the rout.

Elsewhere Tuesday night, St. Louis Blues crushed Toronto Maple Leafs 7-3 and Bill Goldsworthy's three goals paced Minnesota North Stars past Los Angeles Kings, 5-3.

Philadelphia Flyers are at Chicago Black Hawks for a key West Division game tonight while Buffalo Sabres visit New York Rangers and Pittsburgh Penguins entertain California.

Canucks Edge Flyers 3 Vancouver 2

Rookie Paulin Bordeleau capped Canucks comeback with his first NHL goal to salvage the tie at Vancouver with less than three minutes to go in the game.

The Mahovlich brothers, Frank and Peter, broke up a goaltending duel between Canadiens' rookie Michel Larocque and Vancouver's Gary Smith to send Montreal into a 2-0 lead.

St. Louis 7 Toronto 3

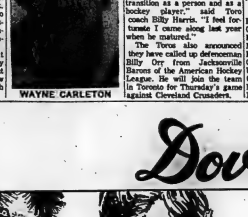
Gerry Unger ended a eight game scoreless drought with three goals against the disorganized Leafs whose starting goaltender, Doug Favel, became so upset after the St. Louis centre's second goal in the second period, that he skated off the ice.

Both Unger goals followed defensive lapses by veteran Leaf defencemen Jim McKenny and Brian Glennie at the Toronto blueline. The St. Louis star stole the puck for easy breaks on both occasions.

Bruce Wilson finished the game, giving up another Unger goal—a gift offered up by sloppy clearing in the Toronto goal area—and defenceman Jean Hamel's first of the year.

The young goalie played strongly in the final 30 minutes and blocked the Blues. But Rick Kehoe was the only Leaf to beat St. Louis' rookie, John Davidson, in the period, supplementing two earlier Toronto goals by Ron Ellis.

Minnesota 5 Los Angeles 3



Goldsworthy scored three straight goals—at 1:33, 2:01 and 7:35—in the first period to start the North Stars away and lift Minnesota to within one point of the fifth-place Kings in the West.

Toros' Carleton Strikes It Rich

TORONTO (CP) — Wayne Carleton, who took over last week as leading scorer in the World Hockey Association, Tuesday signed a new five-year contract with Toronto Toros.

Team president John F. Bassett said he believed the contract made Carleton the third highest-paid player in the league, behind Bobby Hull and Gordie Howe.

The Toros also announced the appointment of the Sudbury, Ont., native as team captain, a position that had been vacant this year.

WAYNE CARLETON

Carleton, who once scored 42 goals in 56 games with Toronto Marlboros of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series, had a disappointing career in the National Hockey League before jumping to the WHA last season.

With Ottawa Nationals of the WHA las season, he scored 42 goals and 49 assists and made the third all-star team. He moved with the Nationals when they were shifted to Toronto during the off-season.

This season he has 16 goals ad 25 assists with the Toros.

When he was a junior, Stafford Smythe, the late owner of Toronto Maple Leafs of the NHL, decribed him as the best junior prospect he ever saw.

But knee problems slowed him in an NHL career that took him to the Leafs, Boston Bruins and California Golden Seals. In his best season, 1970-71, he had 22 goals and 24 assists.

"Wayne has made quite a transition as a person and as a hockey player," said Toros coach Billy Harris. "I feel fortunate I came along last year when he matured."

The Toros also announced they have called up defencemen Billy Orr from Jacksonville Barons of the American Hockey League. He will join the team in Toronto for Thursday's game against Cleveland Crusaders.

Fighting Saints Three Off Pace

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The sometimes over-used adage "there's a difference in year makes" doesn't necessarily apply to Minnesota's Fighting Saints, although there are enough similarities in the standings at this stage of the respective seasons to cause one to wonder.

The Saints beat Chicago Cougars 5-3 Tuesday night to bring their World Hockey Association record to 15-15-1, identical to their mark after 28 games in the 1972-73 season.

But there the similarity ends, and the differences seem to augur well for the Saints and make some of their off-season deals more meaningful.

Their goal production is up 107 to 90, and while they've allowed more scoring, the Minnesotans are in a more challenging position than they were a year ago to move up on the

Tops in WHA

Wayne Connelly of Minnesota Fighting Saints picked up a goal and two assists in a 5-3 win over Chicago Cougars Tuesday night to move into a tie for ninth place in the World Hockey Association scoring race.

Connelly has 16 goals and 18 assists for 32 points, nine behind leader Wayne Carleton who has 41 points.

Western Division-leading Edmonton Oilers.

The Saints, paced by Mike Antonovich's two goals at Chicago on Tuesday night's only WHA game, closed to within three points of the Oilers. A year ago they held second in the division, 11 points behind Winnipeg Jets.

The Oilers, in a slump in recent games, are at home Thursday to Los Angeles Sharks, playing their best hockey of the year under new coach Ted McCaskill.

Elsewhere, Quebec Nordiques are at Vancouver Blazers, Houston Aeros visit Winnipeg, Toronto Toros play New England Whalers at Boston and Cleveland Crusaders entertain New Jersey Knights.

Despite their challenging position a year ago, the Fighting Saints tailed off badly after the New Year and were hard pressed to grab a post-season berth, beating the Oilers in a sudden-death game to determine the fourth and final playoff spot in the West.

This year, prepared to put a winning team on ice at all costs, raided the rival National Hockey League for malcontents whose contracts had expired and came up with Mike Walton from Boston Bruins, Rick Smith from California Golden Seals and Steve Cardwell, unhappy in Pittsburgh Penguins livery.

With Smith giving the Saints muscle on defence, Walton has been the big front-line producer the team was looking for and stands second in the WHA scoring race with 39 points, two behind Toronto's Wayne Carleton who Tuesday renegotiated his Toros contract for the next five years.

Selects Unseat Knights

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Moscow Selects, No. 2 team in the Soviet Union, romped 9-3 over London Knights Tuesday night, their third successive win over top-flight junior opposition during a cross-Canada tour.

The Selects, who now have scored 25 goals in three games, scored three times in each period against the Knights of the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A team.

Sergei Kapustin, a 23-year-old physical education student, scored two goals last 16 seconds apart midway through the first period to get the Soviet team started.

It gave the Selects' ace nine goals in the three games. He hit for five against Quebec Remparts last Friday and added two in the game at Chicoutimi, Que., Sunday.

Victor Schallmov also scored twice and added three assists while veteran Evgeni Zimin or the Soviet national team connected for a pair, one while the Selects were shorthanded. Alexandre Golibov, Mikhail Titov and Alexandre Lobanov completed the rout.

Terry Martin, Paul Nicholson and Stan Jonathan scored for the Knights, Jonathan was one of six players from Peterborough Petes added to the London roster for the international exhibition game.

The Selects took five of the six minor penalties assessed by referee Bob Nadin.

Hawks Shrink Petes' Lead

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

St. Catharines Black Hawks moved to within two points of first-place Peterborough in the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A Tuesday night and, in the process, surpassed a 10-year-old team record.

Hawks' 5-3 victory over Oshawa Generals was their 13th consecutive game without a defeat, breaking the old mark of 12 games established in the 1953-54 season.

St. Catharines led 4-0 early in the second period and then held off a three-goal Oshawa comeback before Rick Hampton scored an insurance goal with less than five minutes to play.

Wilf Palement, Rick Addison, Dave Salvian and Mark Brandl also got on the scoresheet for St. Catharines goals, Brian Drumm, Rod Stefanski and Vic Sirko replied for Oshawa.

In other games, Toronto Marlboros defeated Kitchener Rangers 4-2 while Sudbury Wolves outscored Sault Ste. Marie 6-3.

Marlboros 4 Rangers 2

Mark Napier, Bruce Boudrenu, John Anderson and Mike Kitchen scored for Marlboros who led 3-2 after two periods. Dwight Foster and Mike McGeary scored for Rangers who outshot Marlboros 25-21.

Wolves 6 Greyhounds 3

The Wolves' victory was their third consecutive win by a 6-3 count and moved them into fifth place.

Mike Marson led Sudbury with two goals while Bill Best, Don McLean, Rod Schutt and Jim Szelist got the others. Charlie Simmer, Cary Farell and Jack Valiquette replied for the Greyhounds who were outshot 42-35.

No games are scheduled tonight with Kingston in Peterborough on Thursday.

Turner, Keech Find the Mark In 6-4 Loss

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Two power-play goals by Welland late in the final period snapped a tie and gave the league leaders a 6-4 victory over Buffalo in Southern Ontario Junior Hockey League action Tuesday.

Randy Montgomery and Doug Mason got the power-play goals after Buffalo came back from a 4-1 second-period deficit to tie the game in the final period.

In other league action, Detroit defeated Windsor 3-1 on Gerry Sawchek's winning goal midway through the second period. Team-mate Larry Grodzinski got the only goal of the first period and Dave Anderson replied for Windsor in the third.

Other Welland scorers were Robbie Bullock, Norm Pinder, Jim Tunny and Dan McCourt.

Neil Turner, with two goals, Wally Rudnicki and Dave Keech replied for Buffalo.

Keech's goal came on a penalty shot after Welland goaltender Jim Hopgood threw his stick at a loose puck.

Beavers Second

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sherbrooks Beavers moved into second place in the Quebec Major Junior A Hockey League's West Division Tuesday night by defeating Hull Festivals 4-2 in one of two games.

Elsewhere, a goal by Bernard Noreau at 2:02 gave Laval Nationals a 7-6 win over Trois-Rivieres Draveurs.

Boom Boom's Flames Serious Contenders

ATLANTA (AP) — "I don't think this year is as tough," says coach Bernie (Boom Boom) Geoffrion of his surprising Atlanta Flames, who remain solid contenders for a National Hockey League playoff berth in only their second year of existence.

"Remember," says the colorful Geoffrion, "last year was our first year and we were playing with 19 or 11 first-year players in the league.

"Yes we played outstanding in the first half before the more experienced teams began smelling the playoff spot."

The expansion Flames fell off in the final stages a year ago, winning only two of their final 15 games to fall 11 points out of a playoff. However, their 25 victories and 65 points had to be considered remarkable for a first-year team.

"This year is different though," said Geoffrion Tuesday. "I don't think it'll be as tough because we are playing with great confidence now. And last year we had added year's experience. That is a big difference."

The Flames are currently five points ahead of their pace of a year ago, lodged in third place in the West Division with a 12-8 record.

"Right now we have the confidence which we need," adds goalie Dan Bouchard, the 23-year-old youngster who has a string of 25 goals-against average.

"The thing we have to do is keep our confidence," says Bouchard. "The only thing I care about is making the playoffs."

General manager Cliff Fletcher also speaks confidently of his young team.

"We've accomplished quite a bit in just over a year," says the 38-year-old Fletcher.

"We have more depth in our farm system now and we feel that six or seven players are tremendous prospects. Last year we traded to get players to help us and we can get help from within our own organization.

"Just look at Tom Lysiak," explained Fletcher, of the Flames No. 1 amateur draft choice, who is leading the team in scoring. "We would have been foolish ourselves to think he would play this well. But we know he was a tremendous prospect, a potential super star. He has played beyond our expectations."

The 20-year-old Lysiak, a strong centre, has seven goals and 12 assists in 27 games after leading the Western Canada Junior Hockey League a year ago with 35 goals and 96 assists.

"We don't dream in color," says Geoffrion.

"But I think we can do a lot better than we did last year. Everybody will be taking us a lot more seriously but we've upgraded our roster and I think we've got a great chance of making the playoffs."

Magic Number Five for Hawley

LAUREL, Md. (CP) — Another two winners at Laurel race track Tuesday moved jockey Sandy Hawley to within five of his goal of 700 wins this year.

Hawley rode Milkfleet to victory in the first race and closed the day with win No. 695 aboard Virtu in the ninth.

It was Hawley's 10th win since he matched Willie Shoemaker's 30-year-old record of 681 wins last Thursday.

The 24-year-old Whitby, Ont., native also rode Classic Tudor to a third-place finish Tuesday in the fifth race.

Milkfleet returned $8.80, $5 and $4 and set up the front end of a $181 daily double payoff. Virtu returned $3.20, $2.40 and $2.20. Classic Tudor paid $6.20 to show.

Gibson Sparks Boston Braves

BOSTON (AP) — Boston Braves' erupted for three first-period goals, two by centre Doug Gibson, as they topped Providence Reds 5-3 in an American Hockey League game Tuesday night.

Boston goalie Ken Broderick, in his first start since coming on special loan from Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League, posted the win.

Craig Sarner put Boston ahead to stay four minutes into the game before Gibson notched his first midway through the period and added a power play tally at 17:34.

Providence Reds Clairemont bolstered the lead early in the middle period, before Norm Dennis spoiled Broderick's shutout bid at 15:26.

Right winger Al Blanchard brought the Reds back to within two at 17:34 of the final period but Richie Lemos sealed the victory a minute later on the power play.

Warriors Come Back To Nip the Leaders

CARLETON PLACE, Ont. (CP) — Brockville Warriors fought back from a 7-6 second-period deficit Tuesday to knock over league-leading Smiths Falls Bears 9-8 in the Central Junior Hockey League.

After leading 3-2 going into the second period, it took a goal by 12:34 of the third period by Brian McCarey to eventually gain the win for the Warriors, who now stand fifth in the six-team league.

Doug McLean scored twice for the winners with single goals scored by Ken Dubnage, Jim Johnson, Jac Donald, Ron Purnell, Bob Mitchell and Dave Dunne.

Barry Kerfoot scored three times and Brian Trimble twice for the Bears while Dan McKay, Gary Nichol and Des Allen added single goals.

There were only four penalties, three of them to Smiths Falls, in the game, one of several to be played here during the season.

League action tonight has Pembroke Lumber Kings in Brockville in one of two games postponed earlier in the year because of poor brick ville ice. The other game had been scheduled Oct. 12 and Dec. 4.

Next scheduled league action is Thursday with Rockland Nationals in Gloucester against the Rangers.

DRIVER CRITICAL

ONTARIO, Calif. (AP) — Race driver Lee Kunzman, 29, of Guttenberg, Iowa, was critically injured Tuesday when his Indy-type auto crashed into a wall at about 190 miles an hour during tire tests at Ontario Motor Speedway, officials said.

Russell Proves He Is Not No. 6

At the beginning of the National Basketball season, Cazzie Russell was slandered to be sixth man on the Golden State Warrior team.

Russell however was first in the hearts of the Warrior fans Tuesday as he scored 40 points to lead Golden State to a 114-109 victory over Houston Rockets.

It was the most points ever for the former Michigan star who got a chance to start this year when Clyde Lee was hurt.

In other NBA games, New York Knicks beat Phoenix Suns 105-97, Chicago Bulls beat Kansas City-Omaha Royals 105-104, Milwaukee Bucks smashed Seattle Supersonics 130-91, Buffalo Braves beat Atlanta Hawks in overtime 132-127, Capital Bullets beat Portland Trail Blazers 97-82 and Cleveland Cavaliers bea Los Angeles Lakers in overtime, 126-120.

Braves 127, Hawks 127

Ernie DiGregorio scored eight points in overtime to complete a Buffalo comeback. Bob McAdoo scored 37 points for Buffalo.

Kings 105, Bulls 104

Cliff Ray and Jerry Sloan, connected for eight points in the final 90 seconds to help the Bulls win their fifth in a row and 22rd in 30 tries.

Bucks 130, Sonics 91

Lucius Allen scored 14 points in the first quarter and totalled 28 for the Bucks who held Seattle to two field goals in the first seven minutes and 11 seconds of the second period.

Knicks 105, Suns 97

Dave DeBusschere scored 28 points but it was Phil Jackson who provided a decisive five New York points late in the game.

Cavaliers 101, Lakers 100

Fred Foster brought Cleveland home a winner with a jump shot with 20 seconds remaining in the overtime period.

Archie Clark sank six free throws in the last 1½ minutes to lead a comeback for the Bullets who had trailed by 11 early in the second half.

CHRISTMAS ENTERTAINING

This year plan to give a family meaning to Christmas. Bring back the traditions of an old-fashioned Christmas, for the joys of Yuletide are steeped in tradition and continuity. Year after year, families relive the warm memories of their childhood at Christmas.

The place of food in holiday activities deserves special mention. Christmas is turkey, plum pudding, fruitcake, mincemeat, shortbread and all the other family favourites transmitted from one generation to another. Every family has a collection of favourite recipes.

The unusual demands of holiday entertaining and shopping will become burdens instead of pleasant events if you are not well organized. Plan ahead. List the type of entertaining you will be doing, plan corresponding menus, then draw up the shopping list. Add a few items from this shopping list to your regular grocery shopping each week—this will spread the high cost of entertaining over a period of weeks.

In order to avoid disappointment, give your guests sufficient notice—book them well in advance. The party season is at its peak at this time of the year and last minute invitations may find your favourite people busy.

May you have happy gatherings of family and friends throughout the festive season!

Bangladesh Fights Unpublicized War

BOMBAY (CP) — An unpublicized war goes on in the forests and coastal areas of Bangladesh.

Two years after its bloody liberation from Pakistan the young south Asian nation has to reckon with remnants of the Pakistan army.

According to reports in the Bangladeshi and Indian press, the Bangladesh army has launched a vigorous drive to flush stragglers of the Pakistani army out of hideouts in the Khulna, Sunderbans and other areas.

These reports say that the fighting has been intense, with the Bangladesh army gaining the upper hand over the Pakistanis.

Details of the fighting have been kept secret by the Bangladesh authorities. One reason seems to be that the Bangladesh army does not want any publicity for its plans to surround the Pakistanis and get them to surrender or, destroy them completely.

Another reason for the news blackout appears to be the Bangladesh government's anxiety to prevent material aid reaching the Pakistani army stragglers from elements hostile to Prime Minister Sheik Mujib's ruling Awami League party.

According to a United News of India report from Dacca, the Bangladesh capital, government forces are facing stiff resistance in some coastal pockets. It spoke of casualties on both sides.

The Dacca correspondent of the Delhi Hindustan Times reported that the Pakistani army stragglers and members of two outlawed pro-Pakistani organizations—the Razbr and Al Shamsh—have been joined by a militant left-wing group led by a revolutionary politician named Siraj Sikdar.

The Bangladesh authorities have been hunting for Sikdar for almost 18 months, it is reported. He is described as a Maoist taking orders directly from Peking.

In one speech in a Sunderbans village, Sikdar is reported to have said: "It is true that the Pakistanis butchered the people of Bangladesh. But the past should be forgotten. What matters now is the battle against Sheik Mujib's administration. To do this, we should take help even from the Pakistanis who, after all, are close friends of the Chinese."

Giving some idea of the fighting, Hindustan Times quotes Bangladesh newspapers as saying that 50 motor launches have been requisitioned by the government to aid the army campaign.

The Times says that four armed posts of the government's forest department near a place called Sharasbhola were over-run by the battle forces which were able to capture a sizable quantity of arms and ammunition.

Gas Station Owner Also Serves Horses

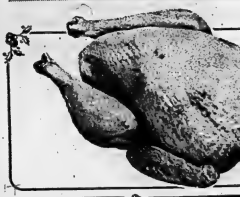
VERSCHOYLE, Ont. (CP) — While many service stations are feeling the crunch because of current oil shortage, business at Roy Bain's service station in this tiny hamlet near London, Ont., is booming.

Hidden away among the tools at the back of his station, Roy Bain can be seen most days over the bright flame of his well-used forge making horse-shoes.

Occasionally he steps into the world of the automobile to fill an empty gasoline tank, but it is the horse that occupies his station more than the horseless carriage.

When everything went mechanical, Mr. Bain said, he and his late father built the garage near the barn that housed the old shop. That was in 1946. Now the garage is gradually being turned back into a blacksmith's shop.

Is business on the upswing?



"It's going to decrease 'cause I'm going to decrease," Roy said. I'm doing no advertising and I'm afraid that's what you're doing today.

"I'm cutting it down 'till I get that pension," he said. "A few more years and I'll quit."

Mr. Bain, 58, and a smith for almost 40 years, makes horseshoes over the winter months to try to get ahead of the demand. He has orders from as far away as Alberta.

Blacksmith shops are scarce, but there are "lots of fellows" travelling around shoeing horses. In the smithy, the shoe can be made to fit the hoof and burnt into place.

British Won Canada By Ruse and by Luck

By R. J. ANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A thin line of redcoats scrambled silently up a narrow defile in the forbidding, 200-foot-high rock face.

Through a ruse, they got by the first line of defence, ill-guarded, where 20 alert men could have held off an army.

It was early morning, Sept. 13, 1759. The redcoats and American irregulars gained the heights and went on to win the battle of the Plains of Abraham that decided the fate of Canada.

It was a day of glory and death for Maj.-Gen. James Wolfe, at the head of the largest army North America had ever seen.

After three fruitless months of frontal attack, Wolfe had got in by the back door to Quebec, the French stronghold that was the key to the New World.

It was a day of defeat and death for his opponent, Lt.-Gen. Louis-Joseph Marquis de Montcalm.

In Battle for a Continent, Quebec 1759, Gordon Donaldson tells again the thrilling story of the conquest of Quebec with a vividness and sweep that brings to majestic life the men who made history more than 200 years ago.

Here unfolds the story of French corruption that bled New France white, of a despondent Wolfe who came so close to defeat, of intrigue in London and Paris. . . .

Canada was not won for Britain that day. Wolfe's last order—"cut off the retreat of the fugitives from the bridge"—was not carried out and the final conquest had to wait for a year.

Even then Canada was almost lost. Inept British generalship the following April, in the second battle of Quebec, came close to bringing disaster to the British forces defending the town against a French force from Montreal.

The French generalship was worse still the fate of a continent was changed. It also paved the way for the American Revolution 18 years later.

Donaldson has been a journalist and television commentator and now is with the CTV network in Toronto. In his first book, Fifteen Men, he made a study of Canadian prime ministers.

Battle for a Continent, by Gordon Donaldson; $8.95; 341 pages; Doubleday Canada.

False Profit Stolen

LONDON (CP) — Thieves broke into the offices of the magazine Games and Puzzles. They got away with several thousand pounds in Monopoly money, police said.

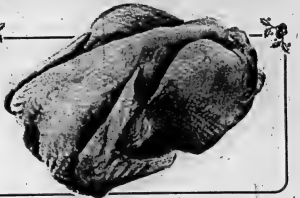
Tweed Personals

Tweed — Eric Osmar manager of Stedman's store, recently presented Jean Blake with the bicycle she won in a national contest.

The North Addington Guild is planning Showcase '74 an arts and crafts show to be held in the summer. Anyone interested in exhibiting may contact the following area conveners: Kaladar, Carla Hinkens; Flinton, Mrs. Carty; Mrs. V. Hunkinson; Northbrook, John Wagner; Harlowe, Kay Wright; Cloyne, Aileen Ball; Denbigh, Evelyn Petzold, Ida Fritsch; Matawatchen, Carol Ann Kelly.

Marmora Arena is without a manager since John Luker of Trenton resigned. The arena committee is looking for a local man to oversee the arena.

Linda Boldrick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Boldrick of R.R. 2 Tweed, is now nursing at the Trenton Memorial Hospital.



The Tweed Senior Citizens Club travelled to Centre Hastings Secondary School in Madoc last week where they spent the day as guests of the staff and students.

The visitors were given corsages and entertained by the school band in the auditorium. Students guided them on tours throughout the school before they all had lunch in the cafeteria. The senior citizens met many teachers and students from Tweed and had a social time throughout the day.

PLAN FOR CHRISTMAS DINNER NOW
Whether or not you buy the poultry or meat for your Christmas dinner this week, at least decide what it will be. If it's to be a frozen turkey and you have the necessary freezer space, shop right away for widest choice of sizes and grades. Fresh turkeys and chickens will be at your Miracle Food Mart closer to Christmas.
If you decide for goose, duck or rock cornish hens, you'll find a good range available now, with Grade 'A' your probable choice for such a festive occasion as Christmas. But remember that utility grade poultry is 'A' grade and no less than 'B', with perhaps a leg or wing missing — fine for holiday buffet casseroles.
Should you want to serve an impressive big roast of beef for Christmas or New Year's ask the manager at your Miracle Food Mart for anything up to a full 7 ribs standing rib of beef.
And look for recipes to help in preparing your holiday meals in my Happy Holiday Recipes folder at the information desk.

NUTRITION NOTES:

What about Fun Foods—the ones you don't have to eat, to be healthy. Should you eat them or not?

As long as the basic nutritional needs are taken care of in the daily menu then enjoy the Fun Foods too.

This is the miscellaneous group of foods that satisfy the sweet tooth—candy, chocolate cake, pancake with syrup, gelatin dessert, carbonated beverages.

Many fun foods are strictly for fun, others make the basic foods more enjoyable;—like salad dressing sugars and sauce. Fun foods are mostly energy food that add flavour and variety to every day meals and snacks.

Beware—don't let them get out of hand. If they crowd out the necessary foods you could have health problems. If you consume too many you could have a weight problem.

QUESTION:
Are cooking oils less fattening than margarine or butter?

ANSWER:
NO. 1 tablespoon of salad or cooking oil has 125 calories. 1 tablespoon butter or margarine has 100 calories.

KEEP THE FUN FOODS—FUN!

Reilly Asserts Davis Attempted to Gag CBC

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative Peter Reilly produced a letter Tuesday which he said shows Environment Minister Jack Davis tried to discipline the CBC for political reasons.

Mr. Reilly (Ottawa West), a former CBC reporter, gave reporters copies of a letter Mr. Davis wrote to Prime Minister Trudeau about a CBC radio program he said attacks the government.

The letter, dated Nov. 8 and written on environment department stationery, said CBC Goodmorning radio program in Vancouver is the worst offender in that city for relentlessly attacking the government.

"I can see no reason why this practice should not be stopped," the letter said. "The Canadian Radio-Television Commission (CRTC) should be alerted and it should discipline the CBC."

In the Commons, Mr. Davis told Mr. Reilly he will not make the letter public, but outside the House he acknowledged the communication.

Mr. Reilly said a copy of the letter was delivered to him anonymously but he "authenticated it through my own sources."

He said it is dangerous "when a minister asks that a news disseminating agency be disciplined."

"If they can't take criticism, they should quit being politicians."

Mr. Reilly said that during his reporting career he was aware of political pressure being placed on the CBC from time to time "but I haven't seen anything as palpable as this since the War Measures Act."

That act, declared during the 1970 Quebec terrorist crisis, imposed certain restrictions on news organizations.

Mr. Davis' letter carries with it the potential of infringement of press freedom, Mr. Reilly told reporters. The media should be free to say anything "subject to the laws of libel . . . but certainly not subject to the whim of a Grit cabinet minister."

Outside the House, Mr. Davis said the CBC did not attack him personally but the items he objects to are "not the kind of thing, regardless of party, that should be carried by the CBC."

In his letter to the prime minister, Mr. Davis said the Vancouver program "goes to great lengths to obtain derogatory comment from freelance journalists and provincial government and opposition MPs."

He said he was allowed, after repeated attempts, to make a three-minute statement on the program, but the rest of the program was given to "an NDP cabinet minister from Victoria . . . to counter anything and everything I said."

CBC personnel responsible for the program were "less than after it again."

co-operative" and had refused to make tapes available to Liberal Senator Ray Perrault.

Mr. Reilly said there is nothing wrong with asking the CRTC to check tapes of the program "but I object to use of the word discipline."

He would give the matter a day or two to develop, but if nothing happened "then I'll go

Plane Use Defended By Trudeau

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Tuesday the use of fuel and the main purpose ment plane to avoid inconvenfencing and annoying the public.

He told Alfred Hales (PC—Wellington) he "established the practice" of using government aircraft about five years ago and does not intend to change it.

Whenever he had used public airlines, flights were delayed frequently by bomb scares or airline personnel holding back aircraft to await his arrival.

This had caused complaints and led to demands that the government pay damages to passengers affected, he told the Commons.

Mr. Hales had asked why the prime minister used a government Jetstar to fly to Vancouver last weekend. The aircraft burned 6,000 gallons f fuel and the main purpose of the trip was to attend a Liberal fund-raising dinner, he said.

Besides the dinner, Mr. Trudeau said, he took part in several government matters, including ceremonies to turn over a piece of defence department land to the city of Vancouver.

He told Conservative House Leader Tom Bell he asked about the possibility of using a commercial flight, but the RCMP advised against it.

Christmas Proposal Vetoed

TORONTO (CP) — Whatever Santa will be driving this year, it won't be Toronto's historic 1921 streetcar. A suggestion that the Peter Witt streetcar be dressed up for Christmas and used during the holiday in the downtown area has been rejected by the Toronto Transit Commission on the grounds that it would cost too much.

Chic Pigalle Now Sin Strip

PARIS (Reuter) — To 19th-century Parisians the Pigalle district was the essence of chic, with the Moulin Rouge at its heart where wasp-waisted ladies and monocled escorts sat open-mouthed watching the latest dance craze, the can can.

Today the temple of the 'can can is still in evidence but that is about all the resident of a century ago would recognize.

Now the sails of the famous windmill look down over streets peppered with neon-lit sex shops, striptease joints and ladies energetically plying the oldest trade in the world.

The district's deterioration has inevitably weighed heavily on the box office receipts of the famous cabaret but its director, Robert Rouzaud, a fervent fan of the Moulin Rouge's illustrious past, refuses to change location.

Sitting in his office under a photograph of perhaps the cabaret's most famous star, Maurice Chevalier, he said:

"This area is a disaster for us nowadays. When we opened here in 1889 it was a very smart neighborhood.

"Still, you cannot uproot us and put the Moulin Rouge on the Champs Elysees—it's an old tradition our being here."

A recent business survey of the Moulin Rouge's audience potential proved just how noble Rouzaud's intentions were.

It was calculated that box office takings would increase by 30 per cent if the Moulin Rouge were transplanted to the Champs Elysees to vie with the other top nightspot of Paris, the Lido.

The Lido is situated on the famous tree-lined avenue and both before and after the show audiences tend to linger and explore the area.

But for Rouzaud, a bouncing figure blessed with a very sense of humor to calm every staff crisis, the case is very much the reverse.

"We cannot but deplore the neighborhood we work in," he said. "We have audiences that come to our show but never look around the surrounding area."

But his sense of history prevails. Visitors are proudly shown a faded sepia print of La Goulue, the dancer whose uproarious can can was featured forever by the sweeping brush strokes of Toulouse-Lautrec.

"We certainly have had a strange mixture of dancers. One of them, Maurice Boukay ended up as a government minister."

Rouzaud boasted that the quality of the clientele has not dropped. "The other day a woman from Monte Carlo hired an airplane and brought all her friends here to celebrate her birthday.

In summer 80 per cent of the audience are tourists, with the big-spending Japanese taking over the top spot from dollar-conscious Americans. What shot is the attraction?

Most unusual star on the bill is Kiki, the dolphin whose great aquarium rises from under the stage. To earn her daily mackerel Kiki plucks off a girl's bra under water, squeaking with merriment throughout the act.

"We started the aquarium and now everyone in the world is copying us," Rouzaud said.

But undoubtedly the top attraction is still the dance that launched the Moulin Rouge to fame.

Rouzaud said: "We now same time. The can can has vastly changed from theo id have 20 girls doing it at the days and our version is really much more energetic and acrobatic."

French TV Viewers Like Quebec Shows

PARIS (CP) — French television viewers have been captivated by a remarkable "before and after" look at Quebec contained in a series of six television shows.

The programs, chronicling a decade of change in Quebec, were made by Jean-Marie Drot, one of France's best-known television directors.

Mr. Drot had travelled in Quebec in 1963, returning with an interesting series of programs entitled Journal of a Trip to Quebec.

These shows told French viewers, four years before the voyage to Quebec of Gen. de Gaulle, many unrecognized facts about Quebec: The growing constitutional crisis, the existence of the Quebec Liberation Front, the aspirations of French-speaking Quebecers and of francophone writers and artists.

To see the changes that 10 years' have produced in the Quebec in 1973 to film the new series.

The first show consisted of extracts of the 1963 series, serving to highlight the changes portrayed in the following broadcasts. It also contains a sequel covering the de Gaulle trip of July, 1967.

The second show compared political groups of today and yesteday, sometimes including talks with persons who were interviewed 10 yearsago.

The Right to Speak is the title of the third show which concerned itself with linguistic problems. The issue was raised again in the fourth program, A Look at Quebec Artists.

The final two programs showed how the decade has affected the Quebec woman. Featured were comedienne Michelne Mercure, singer Pauline Julien and artisan-weaver Micheline Beauchemin.

The programs were well received by the French public, although critics wMe that the series presented "a microcopm which is not representative of the whole of Quebec."

The series was also criticized for failing to focus on the life of the average Quebec worker.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Thursday, Dec. 13

Aries (March 21-April 19) You may feel lucky where chance is concerned, but confidence isn't justified. It's not your day for what appears to be a sure thing.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Try not to boast when talking to others about your family or possessions. You'll impress them but not the way you'd like to.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) Today you'll be tempted to make hasty decisions. They'll not represent your best thinking. Errors will result. Be factual in what you commit to paper.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) You must be very cautious at this time if handling someone else's money or goods. Mixups could have legal complications.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) You'll base important decisions today upon the way you'd like things to be, rather than the way they are. Be more realistic.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You're susceptible to flattery. Someone who wants something from you will be extra generous to manipulate your generosity.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You're likely to devote far too much time today to less-productive interests. Later you'll race to catch up on what you should have done.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Today you'll feel a need to exaggerate a bit to justify your position because one you want to impress makes you feel insecure. Be yourself.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Screen any advice you get from others very carefully. Someone has some big ideas for you. They won't serve your needs.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't count embarrassment today by asking to borrow something you could be turned down on. Make do with what you have.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your generosity will get you a hand today. You'll wonder why you made such a lopsided bargain. Let the other guy make some concessions.

Pisces (Feb. 20 - March 20) This will be one of those days when you'll want to sweep work that should be done now under the rug till later.

THAT POUR LETTER WORD

HOME — means everything to the happy family. To have its fullest meaning it must be your own. There is no security in rented accomodation. Let us show you one of our models now nearing completion on Dunbar Boulevard. This house with attached carport has L-shaped living room, large kitchen with ample eating area for average family and 3 bedrooms. Basement divided for future rec room.

A BAD FOUR LETTER WORD

MOVE — can you tell when circumstances on the part of your landlord will force him to utter this ominous word? When it happens it's not much fun. Preclude this happening with a home of your own. Why should your children have their schooling disrupted because your landlord can no longer look after your accommodation. For their sake have the foresight to own your own. For as little as $1,500.00 down we can offer 3 bedroom home with accommodation that is your very own. We have a model suited to show you.

THE BEST FOUR LETTER WORD

GURS — not only is it pleasing to the ear but it is pleasing to the pocket book. Once your payments are set they fluctuate very very little for the term of the mortgage, not so with rent. It continues to climb and what is worse it leaves no equity for your family to look to in the years ahead. There is no way to accumulate money quicker than in owning a home. We have a model in West Belleville the plan of which we built last year in the east end and has recently sold with a $13,000.00 profit. Who is to say it won't happen again. May we see our many houses in all parts of the city.

African Witch Doctors Group Therapy Experts

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dr. that similar programs, modified Thomas Lambo, a psychiatrist, says African witch doctors know more about group therapy than Freud did.

The deputy director-general of the World Health Organization (W.H.O.) said he first began using tribal medicine men as assistants while he was employed on a mental health program in his native Nigeria in the late 1950s.

Dr. Lambo, former vice-chancellor of the University of Ibadan in Nigeria, spoke to the Vancouver Institute on the work of W.H.O. in underdeveloped countries.

He said W.H.O. expects its first major success to be the complete eradication of smallpox throughout the world—perhaps in as little as two years.

There are formidable problems still to be conquered, he said.

Sometimes underdeveloped countries seek complicated medical apparatus when something simpler—like good drainage systems—would be more useful.

Dr. Lambo said W.H.O. has noticed a significant brain drain from underdeveloped countries. Of more than 3,000 nurses regis-

Where Are My Desks?

Saskatchewan-born head of the Insurance Corporation of British Columbia, uses telephone on floor to check delivery date for desks for the corporation's head office in downtown Vancouver. He expects most things will be in ship-shape by next March 1, when the government-run auto insurance corporation opens for business. (CP Photo) Caption

B. C. Busily Preparing Car Insurance Program

VANCOUVER (CP) — Norman Bortnick, Saskatchewan-born head of the Insurance Corporation of British Columbia (ICBC) works 14 hours a day at a dead run.

He doesn't expect to slow down before March 1, the day the government-run auto insurance corporation opens for business after 14 months' concentrated effort putting together Canada's largest general insurance company.

When the New Democratic Party swept to power in the Aug. 30, 1972, B.C. general election, one of its early actions was to recruit the 46-year-old native of Maple Creek, Sask., to help it carry out a campaign promise to introduce government-run auto insurance.

He came with impressive qualifications — a chartered accountant with a sound knowledge of computer operations and 20 years experience with the government insurance office in Saskatchewan, the first province to introduce a provincial auto insurance program.

He was appointed a special adviser to the B.C. government at the beginning of 1973, heading a team engaged in the research, design and implementation of the insurance program and in April was named vice-president and general manager of the fledgling ICBC.

He says it was the challenge of building a new company from scratch that led him to resign as treasurer of the Saskatchewan program to move to B.C.

Mr. Bortnick is slim and dark-haired, with an outgoing personality that somehow makes him seem taller than his five-foot-six. He speaks chain-smoker's and his language tends to be colorful, especially under stress.

"He's a real live wire," an aide remarked. "He moves quickly both in conversation and in movement."

ICBC's headquarters take up nine floors of the Royal Centre office tower in downtown Vancouver. Some areas seem unfinished and others await furnishings and occupants.

She insurance industry, wary of the government's action in taking over all auto insurance business in the province and competing in the property and fire insurance fields, refused to provide ICBC with vehicle accident records or the Green Book, which provides claims information on which premium rates are based. Mr. Bortnick says even if he had the records "I don't know whether I would use them."

"Suppose you drive out here and get clobbered. Are you automatically a bad driver? I don't think so. Accidents are indigenous to life. They're part of the social system.

"Maybe that's the reason for government insurance. You can't have a simplistic view of accidents. They're very complex—caused by road design, weather, street signs, the car, our state of affluence."

Under the B.C. system, automobiles and drivers will be insured separately. Premiums for compulsory vehicle insurance will be based on the value of the vehicle, type of use and at least a minimum amount of public liability coverage.

In addition, every driver will be required to carry driver's insurance, with premiums based on the motorist's driving record, maintained by the provincial motor vehicle branch which assesses demerit points against drivers found guilty of infractions.

Premium rates have not yet been set but an ICBC spokesman said motorists with clean driving records would pay only a nominal amount but that premiums would rise sharply for those with bad records.

"This means," the spokesman explained, "that if your neighbor borrows your car and has an accident because he was careless he'll be the one facing higher premiums instead of you being assessed because you happen to be the owner of the car."

A considerable portion of the head office space is taken up with banks of computers, a field in which Mr. Bortnick insists he is "really an amateur" although he has been involved in the previous computer installations. "The technology changes too quickly for me to keep up."

But from the outset, he has made use of computers. They helped "correlate the complex job of meshing in proper order all the activities connected with getting ready for business. Each week new staff is hired.

The head office staff, less than 100 late in October has grown to 500 by mid-November with some already handling household and fire insurance. By March 1, when the compulsory auto insurance scheme takes effect, the head office staff will number about 700 with another 800 employees manning claims offices around the province or working as claims adjusters and estimators.

Mr. Bortnick expects the corporation will run into teething problems until both ICBC and the government have been at some pains to prepare the public for them.

"Some things won't be as good as we'd like to see them," he said, mentioning fast handling of inquiries as one possible weak area.

"And the claims centres won't all be ready until May or June. That doesn't mean we'll abandon the West End. And he has had no time for recreation.

"I don't feel I have to get out and play some golf. I really like my work and the time spent at it doesn't bother me."

Cold-water Fish Doomed In Simcoe and Couchiching

ORILLIA, Ont. (CP) — Clarence Steele, a man who says "Lakes Simcoe and Couchiching are my life," predicts the virtual extinction of cold-water fish species in these lakes over the next few years.

Mr. Steele, who was raised on these lakes north of Toronto and now makes his living as a chartered fishing guide, attributes the decline in such species as lake trout, whitefish and herring to "the tremendous increase in smelt" in the lakes.

"I'm not as concerned about pollution in the lakes as I'm concerned about the loss of the herring run," Mr. Steele told members of the Orillia Rotary Club.

"The herring, a beautiful eating silver fish that used to run in the thousands through the Atherley Narrows (separating the two bodies of water), now are down to a trickle."

He also noted that small-sized whitefish and lake trout are scarce.

The culprits are smelt which feed on the fry of these species and the bait fisherman who has removed large numbers of minnows on which the smelt generally feed.

Mr. Steele said that he has observed in recent years that the average size of whitefish has risen to three pounds. These findings are deceptive because he has noticed few smaller whitefish that will comprise future catches.

"It's a wonderful thing to see such large fish but it's disappointing to see so few small fish that will take their place," Mr. Steele said.

Smelt prey on these game fish, Mr. Steele said, because there are 95 minnows in the lakes for them to feed on. The minnows are being taken in large numbers by bait dealers who sell them to fishermen for winter ice fishing.

The solution to the smelt surplus problem is difficult. To decrease their number is like "putting rid of flies," Mr. Steele explained.

But all fishing in the lakes isn't doomed Mr. Steele, who became a fishing guide in the lakes at the age of 15 and now is advancing towards middle age, said.

While whitefish, herring and lake trout are on the decline species like pickerel, largemouth bass and northern pike are on the rise because these species "thrive on smelt."

Pickerel fishing in Lake Simcoe is "coming along," Mr. Steele said.

But lake trout fishing in Lake Simcoe is virtually dead, according to Mr. Steele who takes 1,000 fishermen a season out in his cabin cruiser on both lakes.

"I'm dropping out of trout fishing altogether," Mr. Steele said, "because there is just no point in it any more."

"It used to be fairly easy to get a limit of trout. Now you can troll all day and maybe only get one fish. Years ago I would have had eight or 10 before noon," he said.

There is no pollution problem in the lakes, the fishing expert told the club. He said he still drinks the water anywhere in Lake Simcoe.

Algae in the lakes are also not up to problem proportions, he said. However, he noted a serious weed problem in Lake Couchiching caused by the lack of carp in this smaller lake to the north of Lake Simcoe.

"The carp used to dig up the weeds because they lived on the roots," he said. "They (carp) root like pigs."

Non-smokers Unite Against Cigarettes

OTTAWA (CP) — The cigarette addict's unassailable right to light up almost anywhere may soon go up in a cloud of smoke if a recently formed group gets its way.

The Non-Smokers Association of Ottawa-Carleton, which plans to put the heat on the ubiquitous smoker, is a lobby of 11 people led by Rebecca Liff, a longtime advocate of non-smokers' rights.

Mrs. Liff is a housewife who had never touched tobacco but whose involuntary subjection to smokers' haze over the years has left her fuming.

"In cafeterias or restaurants you can't find a place to be away from smoke," she said. "At hockey games it's everywhere."

She has sent many letters of protest against smokers to health and city officials, supermarkets and others.

Her latest offensive is the formation of the anti-tobacco team as lobby for non-smokers' rights, which she organized with the encouragement of the Ottawa-Carleton Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association.

Her group has three lines of attack planned to protect the non-smoker. The first is to segregate smokers and non-smokers by opening up non-smoking sections in public places, including the National Arts Centre here.

"Non-smokers have no choice but to sit in their seats during intermission," says Mrs. Liff. "The lobby is filled with smoke."

Their second plan is to reduce the energy forces. To do this the group will circulate a petition urging government to enforce a law prohibiting persons under 16 from smoking.

The third line of attack involves persuasive tactics. It involves encouraging the use of Thank You For Not Smoking signs in homes and offices.

"We are not trying to do this with a gun," says Mrs. Liff.

Floating Gardens

Highlight of a Sunday in Mexico City is a boat ride through the ancient floating gardens of Xochimilco. Tourists and Mexicans eat, drink, sing and dance on boats poled through the water by boatmen.(CP Photo)

Millions of Water Lilies Are Choking Tourist Trade

MEXICO CITY (Reuter) — Millions of water lilies are choking tourism in the floating gardens of Xochimilco.

Flower boats carrying tourists and souvenir vendors still glide through the sunlit canals, one of Mexico's major tourist attractions just outside the capital.

Gaily-dressed Mariachi musicians sing serenades under the willow trees.

But the leisurely trip down the winding waterways is getting shorter and shorter. Green masses of water lilies block the way and threaten to put 5,000 boatmen out of work.

The navigable stretch which was nine miles long early this year, has shrunk to four miles.

The union of boat owners of Xochimilco sends out 10 men each day to try to clean up the waterways.

But they are fighting a losing battle against the water lilies, which multiply like bacteria.

Boatmen say it would take at least 300 men working for a month to clear the waterways.

At the moment, the most beautiful stretches of the canals are unreachable and the boats get snarled in traffic jams, especially on Sundays when hordes of Mexicans descend on Xochimilco for picnics.

Sanitary and garbage disposal facilities in Xochimilco have also proved inadequate for the flow of tourist's many of whom bring packed lunches.

An old Indian settlement about 18 miles from Mexico City, Xochimilco has long drawn Mexicans and foreign tourists alike.

The "floating gardens" were originally large rafts with a thin layer of dirt planted with flowers and vegetables.

Today all the old rafts are firmly rooted to the bottom of Lake Xochimilco and the area now consists of canals cutting through islands on which flowers and vegetables are grown for Mexico City.

While Xochimilco fights an unhill battle against nature, Mexican developers are looking south to build new tourist attractions.

On the island of Cancun, the government is seeking to convert a deserted 14-mile stretch of gleaming white beach and a blue lagoon into a thriving resort washed by the Caribbean.

Situated at the northeastern tip of the Yucatan Peninsula, Cancun is not so much an island as a long, thin curved spit linked to the mainland at both ends.

It already has a new airport which can take big jets by the end of next year.

Twelve hotels are under construction to provide 1,783 rooms for an expected 60,000 visitors.

A new town is emerging in Cancun, complete with bungalows, apartment buildings, shop, theatres and golf links.

Within easy reach of the resort are ancient Mayan ruins in Chichen Itza, the seaside city of Tulum and many other archaeological sites in the jungle.

Jaguar, deer, tapir and peccary still roam the wild country south of Cancun and offer good hunting.

In 10 years, Mexican officials expect Cancun to be as popular a holiday resort as Jamaica, the Bahamas, Miami and Acapulco.

Sleeping Bag and $900 All Needed for Trip

TORONTO (CP) — All you need is a sleeping bag and about $900 to join the sixth Commonwealth Expedition which will take you on a four-month adventure to Europe, the Middle East, India and Southeast Asia.

For Louise Ribbans, 24, who works temporarily for the Ontario civil service consultation, it "is an unique opportunity" to travel to India.

"I have been to Europe and Greece and it is an opportunity to go to India and Asia because it's the sort of thing you don't do yourself—you don't go to those countries alone," said Louise, who graduated from University of Toronto last spring with an MA in French.

Thierry Sherlain, 24, who now helps co-ordinate the Canadian contingent, said he, was a graduate student at University of Windsor when he saw a Corner poster and decided to quit school to join the expedition.

"I had been going to school for 16 years and I wanted to get out and see some of the world instead of just reading about it," Thierry said in an interview. "It touches parts of the world that not everyone gets to see."

He said John Stevens of Windsor, Ont., the Canadian co-ordinator of Comex, has been travelling across Canada recruiting members and that already 99 of an expected 200 Canadians have signed on for the trip.

"All the provinces are represented except the Maritimes and we hope they respond to receipt 'publicity,' Thierry said.

Comex 6 will consist of about 200 Canadians and an additional 400 from other Commonwealth countries, he said. The aim is "to create greater understanding among the various Commonwealth countries and the non-Commonwealth countries visited."

The trips originated in 1965 when the late prime minister Nehru of India and Lt.-Col. Lionel Gregory, a British army officer who leads each expedition, decided it would be a good idea to get young people of the Commonwealth countries to go to India for youth festivals, he said. Since then it has expanded to include anyone more than 18 years old.

"It is not a packaged tour . . . it's an expedition, an adventure and it is not easy. In fact, it can be quite dangerous and difficult," Thierry said.

The expedition begins Jan. 5 in England where a 10-day training program prepares members for the trip, he said. Each contingent will include four crews of five each—a bus driver, a navigator, a mechanic, radio-operator and cook-barmen. Everyone has a specific job.

He said the $900 fee covers the cost of transportation, tents, groundsheets, cooking equipment, food, campsites, personal liability and medical expenses. The sleeping bag and pocket money are extra.

Wally Padykula, 27, and his wife, Lily, 25, both of Toronto, are also going on the expedition.

"I was working in a men's clothing store and the opportunity seemed worth taking advantage of," Wally said. "It's an educational, cultural offering . . . not something that comes along every day and it is not the type of trip possible on your own, considering the areas the expedition will travel through."

Deny Move To Quiet Criticism

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's deputy minister of community and social services denied Thursday that the proposed appointment of a senior official of the government's management board secretariat was designed to head off public criticism of major delays in revamping the government's computer network.

Thomas Eberlee said the appointment of T. Philip Adams as his assistant was solely because "he is an extremely able guy."

The Globe and Mail had made the statement in a copyright story Dec. 8.

Mr. Eberlee said the newspaper also erred in saying the job awarded to Mr. Adams was publicly advertised in the business press.

The deputy minister said he selected Mr. Adams as his nominee for the post after reviewing the government's senior staff inventory.

He said Mr. Adams's appointment was approved by the civil service commission's senior appointments committee Dec. 3, "subject to them finding a replacement for him at management board."

Mr. Eberlee said Mr. Adams's responsibility for arranging placement of computers within the government was bound to have made him some enemies.

"But insofar as I am concerned, that had nothing to do with his appointment."

Canada Advances Payment

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Canada announced Tuesday an advance payment of $500,000 on its assessment of $804,000 for the cost of financing the UN's Middle East emergency force.

The advance was announced by Canadian Ambassador Saul Rae as the General Assembly approved a resolution apportioning the cost of the $39-million peacekeeping operation among UN members. Canada's share is 2.18 per cent of the total.

Rae said the payment was in response to an urgent appeal by UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim for advances to finance the operation.

The General Assembly approved Tuesday the $39-million budget for the first six months of Middle East peacekeeping. The five nuclear powers will pay 51 per cent of the total under a special scale of assessment.

The vote on the resolution was 108 to 3 with Portugal abstaining and 21 members absent.

Under the special assessment formula, each of the five permanent members of the security council—the United States, Britain, France, the Soviet Union and China—was asked to contribute nearly 15.8 per cent more than under the regular scale.

Teachers Sign Pact

GUELPH, Ont. (CP) — Wellington County board of education secondary school teachers signed a one-year contract Tuesday, giving them a salary increase of eight per cent effective Jan. 1, 1974.

Union Books Thought Burned Said Seen in Hands of Trustee

TORONTO (CP) — A set of financial books belonging to a plasterers' union, earlier reported burned or stolen, were seen in the hands of the union's trustee following the blaze, the royal commission investigating crime in the construction industry was told Tuesday.

Mary Bellisimo, secretary of Local 111, Operative Plasterers and Cement Masons International Association of the United States and Canada, said on return to work following the fire, she found union ledgers scorched around the edges but nothing destroyed.

Earlier this month, the commission was told Charles Irvine, the trustee, had said the records for the local had been destroyed in the office fire or stolen shortly after.

Mrs. Bellisimo said she copied the information into new ledgers.

In late 1971, certain members were trying to take over the union local and Mr. Irvine took all the records, she said.

One week ago, an accountant investigating union records for the commission testified he had interviewed Mr. Irvine for 1½ days and had been told the records were all destroyed or stolen.

Emil Lubinski, former president of the local, testified he led one of the wings of the 1,000 member local in a breakaway.

He said he was elected for a three-year term in 1968 but was forced out in 1970 by Mr. Irvine and the local's three business representatives.

Mr. Irvine was appointed trustee in 1969 and "he never let go of control," Mr. Lubinski said.

He said elected executives of the local were never allowed to see detailed financial records. All they got was a typed sheet of figures which was read out to the men at general meetings.

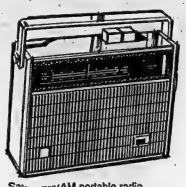
Earlier testimony revealed Mr. Irvine had established a combine amongst Toronto contractors, and employees were pulled off construction sites when contractors attempted to doublecross Mr. Irvine.

Mr. Lubinski said the removal of workers was part of a move by union officers to favor some contractors by giving them workmen at the expense of other builders.

Instead of a formal motion against Mr. Lubinski for his opposition to Mr. Irvine, retaliation came through a cutoff of his unemployment payments from the union's welfare fund, Mr. Lubinski said.

He indicated this order came from Angelo Bortignon, Local 117's business manager, who had earlier testified he usually acted on Mr. Irvine's orders.

Convicted Murderer Sues for Insurance



CALGARY (CP) — Keith Latta, serving a life sentence for the 1971 murder of Edmonton travel agent Bob Neville, is seeking damages from an insurance company.

A statement of claim filed by Latta's lawyers says London Life Insurance Co. hasn't made payment on a life insurance policy Mr. Latta held on Mr. Neville. The policy, which contained a double indemnity clause, was to be paid out $75,000 in the event of Mr. Neville's accidental death.

The statement of claim, which replaces one which was withdrawn in October, says Mr. Neville died from injuries caused by a person or persons unknown.

Latta, a former professor at Queen's University, Kingston, Ont., was once a partner with Mr. Neville in the travel agency business.

Bill Amended

Allow Teachers To Quit Aug. 31

TORONTO (CP) — After opposition members questioned its legality, a bill to prevent mass resignations of Ontario teachers was amended Wednesday in the legislature.

As originally introduced by Education Minister Thomas Wells, the bill would have invalidated the threatened resignations in areas where contract disputes exist.

The amended bill allows resignations to take effect Aug. 31, rather than during the school year.

Teachers also will be permitted to withdraw their resignations up to 30 days after compulsory arbitration results in a settlement, Mr. Wells said.

He made clear that teachers resigning for other reasons than "as a bargaining alternative to the right to strike which teachers do not have," will be able to do so.

When approved, the legislation will force compulsory arbitration in 16 school areas if contract disputes are not settled by the new year.

As the legislature debated second reading of the bill, the public galleries were jammed with watching teachers.

Opposition Leader Robert Nixon and Stephen Lewis, leader of the New Democratic party, called for the minister's resignation.

Mr. Wells provoked opposition ire Wednesday by saying the government could not allow the pupils to be used as "pawns" in a labor-management dispute.

He said it was the children who would be "victimized."

Mr. Lewis said the minister was appealing to the basest anti-teacher sentiment.

Mr. Nixon said teachers were not martyrs who had made a commitment to a low-paying job.

He said they were people who had every right to withdraw their services when such circumstances existed.

James Foulds (NDP—Port Arthur) said the legislature should be recalled in January if needed.

What the legislature was doing, he said was imposing wage controls on teachers.

Russell Roy (L—Ottawa East) said the government was trying to make political points by being anti-teacher.

He also noted that 15 of the 16 school boards involved in the dispute were separate school boards.

"Is this just a coincidence? Are the separate school boards getting less than public school boards?" he asked.

Opposition spokesmen continually returned to the theme of civil rights.

Mr. Lewis suggested the government was using "jackboots" to trample on the teachers rights.

He said the government was obsessed with the premise of compulsory arbitration.

The controversial issue is prolonging the sitting of the legislature.

Government strategists had originally planned on the house winding up by now but opposition spokesmen have made veiled references to sitting until Christmas Eve.

Ice Breaker

There may be just a little snow on the ground but the ice is already starting to form in Belleville's inner harbor. Yesterday, Ald. Stu Meeks spent his lunch hour clearing the ice from the inner harbor. Using his emergency patrol boat, he took several runs up and down the waterway breaking the eighth-of-an-inch-thick ice. Ald. Meeks hopes to keep the waterway open until the weather permits it to freeze solidly. An early freeze-up might encourage youngsters to try their hand at skating on the threatchero usly thin surface.

British Factories Cut Down To Three-day Work Week

LONDON (CP) — Signalling an end to prosperity hopes, Prime Minister Heath today announced a fuel austerity program, limiting industries to a three-day work week starting Jan. 1.

Meanwhile, effective next Monday, industries working round the clock will have their electricity consumption reduced to 65 per cent of current use, television will be blacked out at 10:30 p.m. and homes will be urged to cut their heating down to one room in some cases.

"For the time being, we shall have to postpone some of the hopes and aims we have set ourselves for expansion and for our standard of living," Heath told a somber House of Commons already upset by deep deficits in Britain's overseas trade for two consecutive months.

Women Teachers Approve Walkout

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Federation of Women Teachers' Associations is the latest to ask its members to stage a one-day walkout Tuesday in protest against the Ontario government's proposed legislation to impose compulsory arbitration in teacher contract disputes.

The federation's 23,000 members teach in elementary public schools of the province. A one-day protest next Tuesday already has been urged by leaders of 32,000 high school and separate school teachers.

At least one school trustee also has expressed opposition to the government bill which would prevent threatened mass resignations in January by teachers in 16 Ontario school districts where contracts are in dispute.

John Houseberger, for 20 years a school trustee in York County on the northern boundary of Metro Toronto, said in an interview:

"Teachers should be treated as trade unionists with the right to go on strike.

"They should no longer be considered professionals with individual contracts and job security against economic layoffs."

Mr. Houseberger said "a flaw in the government bill" is that it would not prevent an arbitrator from deciding teachers' salaries should take up 85 or 100 per cent of a school board's budget.

"That would make it fairly difficult to run a school system."

Uganda Arrests 33 'Mercenaries'

KAMPALA (AP) — Uganda arrested 33 foreigners, including an unknown number of Canadians, and claimed Wednesday they were white mercenaries trying to enter the black African country, Radio Uganda said.

A police spokesman said later the group claimed to be members of an expedition that already had visited Kenya, Nigeria, Ghana and other African countries. The spokesman did not indicate the type of expedition.

The 33 are being questioned and will be released when their identities are established, the police spokesman said.

The group included men from the United States, Britain, West Germany, Japan and Canada, the spokesman said.

The office of the British high commissioner in Kampala said it has been denied diplomatic access to the detained Britons.

"We were told to go through the foreign affairs office, but they have not told us the number of British nationals involved," the commissioner's office said.

The men were arrested Tuesday night as they tried to enter Uganda in five vehicles from Zaire, Radio Uganda said.

News Briefs

Strong Future Seen

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada has a strong economic future but urgent steps are needed to develop new energy sources, halt inflation and improve the quality of life, say government and community leaders attending a national economic conference here, which has brought together about 250 industrialists, trade unionists, senior civil servants and the members of the Economic Council of Canada.

Exchange Services

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal and provincial ministers have agreed in principle to exchanging corrections services which, among other things, eventually will result in most women prisoners becoming a provincial responsibility. The agreement was reached Wednesday at a conference on correction which also saw Ottawa agree to give the provinces more say in the parole system.

Housing to Be Allowed

TORONTO (CP) — Housing Minister Robert Welch says legislation likely will be introduced in the Ontario legislature next spring granting special status to the City of Toronto to allow it to build non-profit housing. Mr. Welch said in an interview Tuesday he does not expect any trouble in meeting the city's request for such status.

No Energy Crisis

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Canada does not face an energy crisis and is not likely to if the country adopts "new attitudes of confidence and dynamism," Alvin Hamilton, Progressive Conservative energy critic said Wednesday.

Vesco Safe

NEW YORK (AP) — The United States government will not appeal the refusal of a Bahamian magistrate to extradite American financier Robert Vesco, a federal prosecutor said today. "We will not appeal," U.S. Attorney Paul Curran said.

Whelan Promises Aid

CHATHAM, Ont. (CP) — Federal Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan said Wednesday he will recommend government intervention to help members of the country's farmers run short of supplies or are charged unduly high prices.

Councillors Rapped

MILTON, Ont. (CP) — Halton regional councillors were told Wednesday they were aggravating taxpayers and prejudicing the success of their regional government by voting themselves high salaries. William Thomson of Oakville, vice-president of the Ontario Progressive Conservative Association, said the councillors showed "a mixup in priorities" by voting the $8,500 salaries early in their first official business meeting.

Esso Will Pay Ransom to Poor

BUENOS AIRES (Reuter) — The Esso Oil Co. has agreed to pay a record $10-million "Father Christmas" ransom demanded by guerrillas for the release of kidnapped United States executive Victor Samuelsson, informed sources said here Wednesday.

The ransom will be in the form of food, clothes and construction materials, to be distributed in poor neighborhoods all over the country, the sources said.

Officials of the Argentine affiliate of the U.S. company were silent over whether negotiations were under way with the Marxist guerrillas of the Peoples Revolutionary Army (ERP) who kidnapped Samuelsson last Thursday.

The ERP made its demand Tuesday in a communique sent to news media here, but did not specify the means of payment.

The guerrillas attached a photograph of 36-year-old Samuelsson in captivity.

They demanded the money "as a partial reimbursement to the Argentine people for the copious riches extracted from our country by the company in long years of imperialist exploitation."

The ERP said in an earlier communique last Saturday that Samuelsson "will be submitted to trial," but did not specify the "charges."

He was seized by seven armed guerrillas at the Esso refinery canteen in Campana, 90 miles northwest of Buenos Aires.

Press Council Seeks Government Control

QUEBEC (CP) — The Quebec Press Council says in its first major statement of principle that the Quebec government should regulate ownership and sale of all mass media to prevent "abuses of financial concentration."

The council's report, endorsed by 15 of the 19 members, called on the government to "create without delay a body to supervise the transfer of title-deeds of news media defined as 'mass media' or entrust this duty to an existing body, while clearly stipulating that ... it would have no control over news content."

Council members include six representatives of the public, six of media owners, six working journalists and an independent chairman. The council began operation June 28.

Two management representatives abstained and two others issued a minority report opposing any government regulation of print media and calling for further study of the issue of monopoly ownership.

The council's report Tuesday followed a study of concentration of daily newspaper ownership in Quebec.

Gasoline Cut Story Fumbled

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new Federal Energy Office wants gasoline production cut by five per cent, a move that would leave the United States 25 per cent less gasoline than it needs early next year. But it fumbled badly Wednesday in an effort to announce the program.

Under the program announced, the average motorist may find himself even more than 25 per cent short of his usual needs, since priority users would take their deliveries before the remaining gasoline filters down to local service stations.

But in explaining the latest government move to counter the energy crisis, the agency charged with overseeing energy matters kept falling over itself.

At first the new office gave the public the right impression of the shortage by issuing the wrong figures. It then later revealed the right figures, but it created the wrong impression.

Finally, more than 12 hours later, energy officials managed to make clear both the production cut and the extent of the expected shortage.

Eight Unruly Arabs Force Bridge Closing

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Israeli troops closed the Allenby Bridge across the Jordan River today to prevent the return of eight Arabs expelled from their homes on the occupied west bank.

But the four-hour confrontation ended after the International Red Cross stepped in and promised the deportees that officials on both sides of the river will take up their cases.

Three of the Arabs succeeded in crossing the bridge before border guards and military police padlocked the gate in the steel fence on the Israeli side. The Israelis quickly threw up barbed wire in front of the three men and trapped them with the gate at their backs.

The other five Arabs on the Jordanian side carried placards saying: "Our deportation was illegal" and "We want to see our children."

A Doll's Christmas

Dolls have always been an important part of Christmas, but this year they are one of the highlights of the Christmas celebrations at the Hastings County Museum. Glanmore House is decked out with all the trappings of a Victorian Christmas and one of the special displays set up for the public features a doll collection on loan to the museum from Mrs. Mary Craig. The dolls, some of which date back to the early 1840's, are dressed in period costumes and bring a touch of their own history to the museum. Last night Sheila McMurray and Karen Wishart caught a sneak preview of the display. The museum is open to the public from 1 p.m. through to 5 p.m., Tuesday through Sunday.

Scouts Seek New Home

The Belleville District Scouting Council has decided to set up a feasibility study to look into the possibility of acquiring a building or a site for a District Scout House.

At present, the Scout House is located at 195 John Street and effective January 1 will be moving its headquarters to St. Thomas Parish Hall, third floor.

No date has been set for the committee looking into the matter to turn in its report. One problem brought up at the monthly meeting of district council Monday was having personnel present during the day at the Scout House.

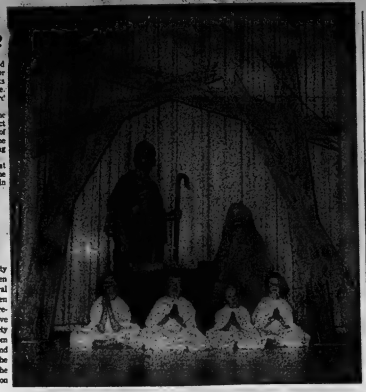
In other scout business it was decided to hold District Council's Annual General meeting on January 7 at 7:30 p.m. at St. Thomas Parish Hall.

Also in response to a request from Alderman Jean Smith, scouts will take part in the recycling of paper program. The scouts will make a pickup north of the CN tracks the first Thursday of each month.

For those living south of the CN tracks and west of the Moira River, the scout paper collection will be the second Thursday of the Mon h. For those south of the CN tracks east of the Moira River to and including Herchimer Avenue.

Mrs. Betty Fort reported at last night's meeting that the total number of scouts in Belleville District is 754.

New Contract System Approved by Board



Moira Secondary's additions and alterations will be done under a new "construction management procedure" n o w finding acceptance among Ontario school boards.

Until now, all schools constructed by Hastings County board of education have been built under lump-sum general contracting. It worked when costs were stable. But recently, sub-contractors have built into their tenders a safety factor to protect them from rising costs of materials and labor that accrue from the time of the tender until the time the subtrade is called on the job.

Under the new construction management procedure, the subcontractors are not called out for the job until it is ready to be done, and their tenders accurately reflect the true current cost of materials and labor.

Said former board chairman Donald Williams: "We don't have the same control over contractors with a general contract that we have now. Under the old system, any changes cost extra."

Alterations to Moira have been going on for a year. They are the minor phase of a general changeover that will begin next year. The gym will be converted to a library-resource centre and theatre arts lab and an addition will be built to encompass gym, music rooms and a greenhouse. The cost will be $1,189,000.

OSD Pupils Present The Nativity

One of only two Nativity presentations in this district will be presented this Friday and Saturday at 8.15 in the gymnasium at Ontario School for the Deaf. The traditional presen ation has been held every Christmas season for 26 years and attracts audience members from as far away as Ottawa. Director is Kenneth Graham and the role of Mary is played by Joyce Rogers and Joseph by Paul Landry.

Christmas with a historical twist is just around the corner. The Hastings County Museum on Bridge Street East is celebrating Christmas in the same style at the Americans this year. Last night work parties finished decorating the museum with popcorn and cranberry strings, cedar bows and paper chains. The last decorative touch was added to a 14-foot balsam fir tree, presented to the museum by Hastings County Council, by Marg Wiggans, the museum's Christmas committee chairwoman. The museum will start celebrating Christmas this weekend with free sleigh and buggy rides around the grounds between the hours of 1.30 and 3.00 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Tests for Copper

Mineral Drilling Ends Near Madoc

MADOC — A preliminary search for copper deposits northeast of here in Madoc township has ceased.

Any future exploration must now await assessment of geological testing in the Queensboro area, a spokesman for Freeport Explora tions of Toronto, said Wednesday night.

Freeport has been diamond-drilling in the district since early November.

Early Wednesday the drill crew returned to North Bay.

"Right now, further exploration wouldn't be justified until we have a chance to evaluate the data we've gathered in the past month," said Frank Blair, Toronto geologist, who has been in charge of the drill operation.

He said he had no idea "if, or when, we might return" to the area.

Mr. Blair said Freeport had a "considerable amount of acreage" under option although its actual extent was not learned.

Schoolhouse Becomes Community Centre

SHANNONVILLE — Tyendinaga Community Association firmly established here and with its own quarters, is now planning its first programs.

The group — first of its kind in the township — was proposed earlier this year with shutdown of the hamlet's schoolhouse. The small building was ideal for a community centre, local residents realized.

The Hastings County school board showed co-operation in the aim, says association president Don Ellis.

Now, the group has secured the schoolhc for a token $1 a year on a two-year lease. At the end of that time, there's an option to purchase for $7,500.

To that end, the association is launching a series of fund-raising projects. The first, a draw, will be held in the new community centre Dec. 21.

Euchre parties, dances, maybe bingoes, will be among events scheduled to raise the purchase money, says the president, who is a brother of Jack Ellis, Hastings MP.

Plans for use of the structure project installation of pool and shuffleboard facilities in the schoolhouse basement.

A community hall and library — the first in the area — are planned for the ground floor after it is restructured.

The facility will be available for all community groups — from young people to senior citizens — for meetings, said Mr. Ellis.

Other executive members are John Brasnma, vice-president; Vern Ramp, treasurer, Bernice Stratton, secretary.

The Big Move

Town treasurer Brian Fagan oversees arrival of $25,000 worth of furniture for Trenton's new town offices.

All office equipment had to be hauled up three flights of stairs while workmen complete last-minute adjustments to elevator. Town hall staff will officially move into the offices Monday.

New Town Offices Ready For Business Next Monday

TRENTON — Trenton's new municipal offices were a beehive of activity Wednesday as workmen moved in $25,000 worth of furniture.

Arrival of the furniture is the final episode of a move from the old to the new town offices located downtown on the side of the old post office.

Including cost of furniture and extras, the entire project is expected to reach $300,000 "in round figures," according to town treasurer Brian Fagan who spent much time Wednesday overseeing the move.

In all, eight offices, the council chambers, a committee room and the general office area were fitted with color co-ordinated equipment supplied locally.

Despite earlier hopes, the elevator was inoperable during the move, forcing workers to take to three flights of stairs, a point of some considerable comment from the men.

The offices are spacious and attractive in co-ordinated pastels of rust, yellow and orange tones. An official opening is expected early next year.

Council will hold its first meeting in the new offices Monday.

Mr. Fagan said among benefits of the new offices, would be brighter work surroundings for town staff. "They'll be happier working in this brighter atmosphere — they'll be more productive."

He said biggest bonus of the new offices is that all administration will be on one floor. In the old quarters frequent trips had to be made up and down stairs to get files from the storage room — which he refers to as the "dungeon."

The new offices will be open Monday and can be reached by dialling 392-2841. Now, with the addition of a central switchboard and receptionist, only one number is needed to reach any of the civic departments.

Worried For Weeklies

Farm writers are seeking federal help in assuring an adequate supply of newsprint for the country's weekly press.

Directors of the Eastern Canada Farm Writers Association have written Trade and Commerce Minister Allastair Gillespie, advising him their membership would appreciate any assistance to that end. The directors of the 118-member organization emphasized that the weekly newspapers of Canada are one of the few remaining publications providing a major contact with farm families.

Divided On Store Hours

PICTON — Picton merchants seem divided this year on holiday shopping hours.

Several stores remained open Monday night while others closed as usual at 5.30 p.m.

One merchant noted he does not, remain open nights because he is short of staff. He said that it would be impossible for him to extend his store hours without hiring additional help.

The storekeeper did not feel this would be economical. Evening business at this time of year is not large enough to justify the extra expense.

He plans to remain open evenings as Christmas draws closer.

Another Lady Mayor

We don't know how many lady mayors there are in Canada, but there are three to our knowledge, the best of whom is Eileen Dubbs, an attractive mother of eight children and a grandmother.

Mrs. Stubbs is the new mayor of Dartmouth, Nova Scotia, and the first woman to be elected mayor of any city in the Maritime province.

The other lady mayors of whom we are aware include a course Belleville's Robin Jeffrey and Claudette Millar of Cambridge.

Mrs. Stubbs is described as "articulate, charming, witty and wise" from her dozen years' experience in municipal politics and in raising a large family.

She has a good head, as the saying goes, with a no-nonsense approach. Like Mayor Jeffrey, she is making the job a full-time one. She wants to see more community involvement and says her door will always be open to people.

But there is a hint of dominance and a desire for a somewhat robot-like administration in statements such as this: "We're going to have better-informed aldermen because unless we work as a unit and know what each of us is doing, we'll end up with problems. There is nothing more disconcerting than finding that someone made a statement that doesn't fit in with what we plan."

Certainly it is an advantage to have everyone knowing what the other is thinking, but to expect this all the time is asking for the impossible. Besides, if individual aldermen cannot have their own opinions, which inevitably will differ on occasions, then heaven help democracy.

Mrs. Stubbs will find herself listening to many viewpoints. Indeed after a dozen years in municipal politics she will not need to be told. Democracy may be a tiresome process, but it is the one which comes closer to any other in ensuring the rights of everyone.

Pilots in Cutbacks

The energy crisis is resulting in cutbacks on fuel usage in many spheres, among them air travel, a situation that has also led to the laying off of hundreds of commercial airline pilots — a state of affairs however that affects in the main U.S. airlines, those in Canada scarcely at all.

At the high salary levels pilots enjoy their plight may not be as difficult as some. Nevertheless they have homes to maintain and families to support that somehow else so that the long-term prospects for an out-of-work pilot may not be rosy. Add to this the break in routine and inability to maintain pilot skills at the essential high level and their dilemma may be readily appreciated.

Meanwhile in Canada, where the energy problem is less critical than in some countries, interest in flying remains high. With a vast national territory to serve, as well as the needs of the armed forces at home and abroad, there is always a need for pilots.

Flying clubs are a prime source of training and the Belleville Flying Club wings parade is a reflection of how active is the flying tradition across the country. For the moment at least, Flying Club president Jim Marker says he does not expect any problems with fuel.

While some curbs may be warranted in the midst of the fuel crisis, the communications are such a vital factor in the national fabric that little change in the existing pattern of flying can be anticipated.

Ottawa's Man in Foreign Affairs

Public and Private Image of the Enigmatic Mr. Sharp

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

What kind of a man is Mitchell Sharp, our external affairs minister, and how good a foreign minister is he?

Almost no public judgments have been made of the former in spite of his familiarity to us from his numerous appearances on the tube, almost as many as the prime minister himself, about whose personal life we think we know a good deal.

Rather the attack, (because most of the press comment about Mitchell Sharp has been on the offensive against him), has measured his competence as external affairs minister.

And in this area though I have my own reservations based on Mr. Sharp's own reticence, I think he has been badly treated and over-maligned.

Mr. Sharp is enigmatic, let's face it. But not always. I have spent as long as most have been with him, the two of us talking privately in my old office in the defunct Toronto Telegram—foreign minister and editor breaching the restrictions of personal and bureaucratic privacy at a time when he needed a listening board.

Last summer during the press call for the global gathering of journalists at Ottawa's Commonwealth Heads-of-Government Conference, the two of us "jawed" about the conference, his view of the meaning of the monarchy (about which to comment, whether we could have dinner together, but) evening and why we couldn't. (Again no comment, the reason this time my reluctance and old-habit loosed with to be a respecter of persons).

And there have been other occasions notably when he was finishing up and outlined to me in his ample House of Commons office in a way which should be recorded as a document of ministerial functions, the role and restraints on Canadian finance ministers of the modern era.

At the start of the Trudeau era in 1968, what irrepressible Larry Zolf called the Athenian phase — when patrician Pierre held wide sway in the land, Mr. Sharp was faced with less-than-Athenian problems.

First there was the response to the cruel Biafran War which tugged at many heartstrings in a country long prideful itself on humanitarianism. Mitchell Sharp's very tough job, no doubt with a major assist from federalist Trudeau, was to persuade all and sundry the Trudeau government and Sharp himself did care. But our hasty recognition of Biafra, a breakaway region from another Commonwealth federal state, would seriously reflect on our own ability to linger as one country. Almost exactly two years later during the FLQ crisis, the solution to which was the prime minister's own bag, that wisdom—convention or latter-day—proved to be right.

Then there has been our much-criticized role in the ICCS this year, prompted by Mr. Sharp's near-defeat in Eglinton riding in the October, 1972, federal election, and followed by the widening hiatus between Canada and the U.S. on a host of issues.

The external affairs minister often tried to paper these over. Also his alleged deep regard for continentalism at a time of rising economic and cultural nationalism in Canada resulted in some of the strongest criticism of his methods and bywords.

In 1968 Sharp could not, but extensions of our sovereignty in the Arctic by unilateral means, including unilateral declarations of control around the Arctic islands and of extending our territorial water limit. Yet both became public policy in 1970.

Sharp the alleged Panamian working in the Trudeau years, can not justify a Pearson-style reputation as a major figure as foreign minister. He has been, or has tried to be, his own man. And no one knows how much Mr. Trudeau prevented that.

HAVING A BALL.

Rapeseed is a Battleground For Economic Theorists

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

The current rapeseed-marketing debate is a classic confrontation between the free-market supporters and the advocates of a state marketing system.

The issue is being resolved by means of a mail plebiscite of some 37,000 Prairie farmers, who produced about 30 million bushels in the latest crop year.

Traditionally, Canadian rapeseed has been sold on the free market, through the Winnipeg Commodities Exchange. The Canadian Wheat Board wants to add rapeseed to the wheat and feed grains—representing 76 per cent of the Prairie grain crop—that it markets as a state monopoly.

Rapeseed is currently quoted at just under $3 a bushel. Between mid-1972 and mid-1973, its price on the free market rose from approximately $2.50 to as high as $7.75.

Those improvements have been admittedly highly erratic over the past year, but no more so than competing oilseeds, both in the U.S. and overseas," comments James Richardson and Sons Ltd. of Winnipeg.

"Compared to the wildly gyrating markets of some such as soybeans, sunflowerseed and peanuts, our market has been relatively stable."

The wheat board has the support of the three Prairie wheat pools, in wanting to take over the marketing of rapeseed.

Their arguments in favor of such a step are that price fluctuations would be eliminated, growers would all receive approximately the same price, delivery quotas and marketing arrangements could be made more advantageous to the farmer, all do not.

There is also a good case to be made for the wheat board, in terms of rail distribution. Supporters of the wheat board argue that boxcars and terminal space could be employed more efficiently if one organization were responsible for the movement of both wheat and rapeseed.

Another point in favor of the wheat board monopoly proposal is the U.S. experience with foreign wheat sales in the 1972-73 crop year. That country, which ranks the free-market system just behind the flag and motherhood, found itself in an incredible crop shortage because a small number of grain brokers—with the approval of a somnolent department of agriculture—had sold far more wheat to the Soviet Union than the United States could spare.

Such mistakes can be avoided here, the free-market supporters reply, without sacrificing the farmer's freedom to make individual decisions.

"The Ottawa market provides a hedging medium for buyers and sellers alike that has yet to be improved on," according to James Richardson and Sons.

"We refer its critics to the farmers in the U.S. who operate under an open-market system, prospering over the years as no other producers in the world have.

"We firmly believe that should producers vote to place the marketing of rapeseed under the Canadian Wheat Board, importers will turn to other markets that afford a hedging medium, producers who favor the present system would cease to grow rapeseed, and the growth of the domestic crushing industry would come to an end."

Back From Ulster

Whitelaw Tackles UK's Economic Troubles

The Christian Science Monitor

One cannot help regretting that Prime Minister Edward Heath has found it necessary to call William Whitelaw back from his mission of reconciliation in Ulster.

Yet the reason for bringing him home was an urgent one: the need for someone of Mr. Whitelaw's caliber and negotiating skill to pull Britain out of its latest labor troubles.

Back in London the challenges awaiting Mr. Whitelaw in his new post of Minister of Employment are enormous. Mr. Heath intends him to be "a kind of supreme commander in the field of labor relations, pay, and prices. He will have much broader powers than his predecessor, Maurice Macmillan, who is moved to second in command at the Treasury.

The oil crisis is only one part of the British Government's present problems. Britain's miners and power workers are banning overtime, thus compounding the oil shortage. After turning down a government pay offer of 13 per cent, the miners are threatening to come out on a total strike, as they did nearly two years ago. A railroad strike is also threatened. Others pressing for wage rises are engineering workers, teachers, shopworkers, local government manual workers, some civil servants, and mailmen.

Some of the labor unrest are the restrictions under Phase 3 of the government's economic program, which sets a general ceiling of 7 per cent on wage and price rises. To top it all, the last balance of payments figures showed a huge deficit, and the stock market also has declined.

Mr. Whitelaw's task will be to prove to the restless unions that it is in their long-term interest to live with Phase 3.

The context of his new assignment is very different from that of Ulster. But Mr. Heath is probably right in estimating that there is no one better qualified to manage the government's wage and price policy in the present confrontation with labor.

Christmas And Issues Of Politics

Editor
The Intelligencer

As we prepare to celebrate Christmas once again, the bells ring out an angelus of glory and gratitude for the religious freedom we enjoy. Though the Herods of the 20th century may seek to remove carols and Christmas cribs from our schools, history indicates that "this too will pass into the dust of time."

Indeed, in the perspective of history, Herod, Cromwell and Lenin share the dubious distinction of having banned the celebration of His birth. On June 1st 1647, the Cromwellian government of England proclaimed an Act which banished Christmas celebrations. For 13 years Yuletides roamed the earth crying: "No Christmas!" Not until 1660, in the reign of Charles Stuart did the joy of Christmas return.

History repeated itself in 1917 when Lenin grabbed power in Russia. By 1945, seven percent of the world's population lived under communism and could only celebrate Christmas in secret. Today, some 40 percent of the world's population lives under the dictatorship of communism and are persecuted for their religious beliefs.

In 1973, the Christ Child is persecuted again — not by Herod, Cromwell or Lenin, but by the humanists who would do ho ho us into greed and gluttony devoid of spiritual foundation.

Yet Christmas remains as an oasis in a grey world. And while the world will probably continue to be filled with the grand arrows of doubters and despots, the truth of His birth, death and resurrection remains. This then is the message of Christmas 1973. Glory to God in the highest and heaven be in your heart as we sing: "Peace on earth to men of goodwill."

Best wishes to all my friends and associates.

MPPs Salary Is Raised

Proof to Barry
The Intelligencer.

Somewhat the role of Santa Claus does not suit Premier Bill Davis. His proposed $30 Christmas bonus to old age pensioners while advocating something like $4,000 for himself and his team of Tory bandits in the legislature is typical of his party's philosophy.

Ontario, the richest province in the Dominion must remain a state of its most miserly when it comes to caring for its people. Even in British Columbia where former premier Bennett goes to bed every night in trembling fear of the "socialist hordes" the minimum wage will soon be $2. an hour. The best we can do here still does not reach $2.00.

And today voters in Ontario really learned just how much our Tory masters care. Only three members of the cabinet were on hand to discuss and debate the legislature opened. Perhaps they hardly dare dreaming of how they would spend their raise hiestly $4,000 Bill by attempting to put into their Christmas stockings.

WILLIAM C. HOCKLEY

Liquor Question

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Non-Drinker's letter states some truths about drinking in a concise, logical form. If the issue involved were the possible consequences of drinking, it would be an admirable statement.

In fact, however, it is a red herring, and completely away from the point. The point involved is not the possible consequences of drinking per se, but whether or not one group in our society should be denied privileges which are granted to other groups without question.

I suggest that Non-Drinker address himself to the point. Their may well be good reasons why a Community College should not have a liquor license, but the case cannot be resolved by generalities; about the possible harmful consequences of drinking.

Soviet Students Are Amazed At Idleness of Canadians

OTTAWA (CP) — The average student club in the Soviet Union doesn't involve itself in such elementary pursuits as sitting around drinking coffee.

Viktor Gorshkov, member of a 36-student delegation from Moscow, Novosibirsk and Rostov-on-Don visiting Ottawa, was amazed to see so many students just sitting drinking coffee and listening to music at Carleton University Rossler's Coffee House.

"How can they get away with not studying? Isn't it hard to stay in university? In the Soviet Union university students study all the time because it is very difficult to get into school in the first place."

"We have students' clubs at our universities too," said Victor Batkin, a 28-year-old Moscow engineer. "But they are not at all like this. They're more serious. We meet and discuss important social issues and resolve problems."

The university students, an Komsomol (Communist party youth) or party members, spend a day touring University of Ottawa and Carleton University as part of a two-week exchange visit to Canada. Twenty-six Canadian students spent three weeks in the Soviet Union in 1957.

Wld si sofisas mentSu hom While some of the Russians are full-time students, most, including the director of a state collective farm, are completing post-graduate studies while working. They raged in age from 21 to 35.

(Notstanding academic achievements were the basis of their being chosen for the rare opportunity of visiting a Western country.

The Soviet students seemed surprised at the academic and social freedom Canadian students have.

A 22-year-old medical student from Novosibirsk, Natasha Dershenkh, said she thinks the Soviet system of education is better.

"We have complete institutes devoted to medicine, for instance, so we get a very good specialized education. Here you have only one department in a university," she said after a visit to the University of Ottawa faculty of medicine.

"But you do have better amphitheatres and laboratories than we do. I like them very much," she added.

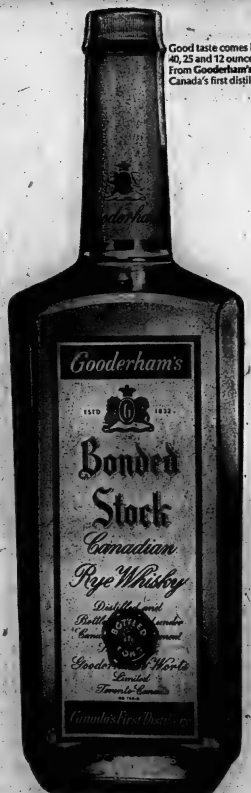
Throughout their university tour most of them spoke only Russian, running into a surprising number of students, professors and policemen who spoke their language.

This was the first time outside Eastern Europe for all of them and everything about Canada has impressed them, they said, except the food.

"You eat so much synthetic food here," complained one woman. With the notable exception of French onion soup, which is "wonderful, fantastic," Canadian food isn't filling enough to satisfy Russian appetites, a man student said.

Traffic Lights Recommended

Installation of traffic lights at the corner of Victoria and Herchimer Avenues will be recommended to city council by the Traffic and Light Committee.



Police Chief Douglas Crosbie Mosgley reported to committee members that six collisions had occurred at the intersection during the first 10½ months of this year with five being of the type that might have been prevented if traffic control signals were installed.

Three of the six accidents were personal injury mishaps, one of these being a pedestrian, occurring at a time when the intersection was not protected by a school guard.

The Chief reported that this was the first time in three years that the number of accidents at the intersection met the minimum warrant for traffic signals. Traffic volume at the corner would not normally warrant lights, it was stated.

The committee will ask council to install lights with the cost to be included in next year's budget.

It took the 19-year-old an hour to learn her job—sticking sealing crevices in car body joints—and two more hours to perfect it. Her foreman M. W. Day said Barbara is a "fast thinker and a good worker."

"And as to the probability of having a woman foreman some day, I'm all for it," she says right now! "They deserve a break too."

But tired bones and aching muscles come with this part of Barbara's training.

"I'm used to an eight-hour schedule of an easy chair-sitting school day," she said. "After a day here on my feet they go pretty sore. But that's all part of the job. Just got to grin and bear it."

Barbara decided to leave University of Saskatchewan after one year studying commerce after discussing the GMI course with a career consultant. Ann Landers

Unwilling Groom

Dear Ann Landers: Twelve years ago I met a handsome, charming man. It was "love at first sight." I became pregnant shortly after. His interest in me waned immediately but my family (she I) bulldozed him into marriage. (This was before Magdalena children were fashionable.)

Within four months he began running around with other women. He left me three times the following years. Then he returned. I became pregnant again. Six months later it was more of the same—chasing young girls, leaving me when they're fed. May I add, after another baby and more hell, I divorced him.

Ten months to the day he came back on his knees. Imagine my joy when he announced that he had finally recognized my worth and wanted me and his children back. (They are three of the loveliest kids in the world.) It was like a fairy tale. I was walking on air.

Two months later he was girl-chasing again—this time publicly, humiliating me before family and friends.

I filed for divorce again yesterday. The moral of this story is—and you have said it often—"An unwilling groom makes a rotten husband." I wish I had heat that first child out of wedlock and let the bum go his own way, which is what he wanted to do. Keep telling it like it is, Annabelle.—A Dozen Years Wasted

Dear Dee: The way it is, you have three lovely children that you would not have had if it weren't for the him. Look at it that way and go on from there.

Dear Ann Landers: My mother-in-law invites us for dinner every Monday night. I have said yes for two years. These Monday night dinners are beginning to get to me. It's like I'm not even there.

When I try to say something, they aren't interested. Either I am ignored or cut off in the middle of a sentence. My husband's 31-year-old sister, who hasn't had a date in 30 years, is very unpleasant. No matter what I say, she takes the other side.

I've told my husband how I feel and he says if I don't care for his family, I can stay home and, he'll go without me. He also said it plain that he isn't exactly crazy about my paper hat. Sir counts that I wear it because he won't go to mine. What do you say, Ann?—The Invited Daughter-in-Law

Dear In: If you're smart you'll stop knocking his tribe and go with him. You've tried fighting them and it didn't work, so now you'd better join them. This comes under the heading of "compromise." No marriage can survive without it.

Dear Ann Landers: Don't chew me out. Just tell me what to do. I have two "best" girls, one in the Midwest, another in town. The "in-town" girl is via filing relatives in the West Coast.

I wrote to them both last night. It was late and I was tired. After I wrote the letters I decided to walk to the corner and drop them in the mailbox.

This morning I have a terrible feeling that I put the letter to the blonde in the envelope addressed to the brunette. The reckoned is really Numero Uno and if she receives the blonde's letter, I am in real trouble. Can you think of something I can do in case?—Dunderhead

Dear Dun: Sorry, I can't think of a thing. Next time don't write to anybody when you're tired. And make it a rule never to mail a letter until you've let it sit overnight.

Reader Worried About Religion

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: Have you noticed how little mention is ever made of religion in any of the media? Saturday's paper covers a couple of pages of church news; Sunday one may be able to find an obscure TV program of a church service; and once or twice in a season some program, concealed by an innocuous title that dares to suggest that Christianity may have some merit.

I think I have seen some of your columns before and troubled and to seek help through a minister; yes, I'm sure I have, so don't be cross. But you know what I mean — and it scares me.

The old prophets delivered messages not only to the children of Israel in 900 B.C but to we Smartypants of 1973.

Thoughtful Christian.

Dear Doris: Please send me your pattern for "Dutch Boy and Girl" quilt. We make these quilts during the summer and auctions them off in the Hall at our tea and sale. We made over $100 on one such sale.

Moncton, Chbwoman.

Dear Chbwoman: I am not in the quilt business; but because of requests we did make mimeographed sheets showing the pattern you want. One is enclosed. (Note to other reader: If you would like this pattern, write in requesting it, enclosing 25 cents and a envelope.)

(Is it better to put up with misunderstandings or to begin talking thing over? Let Doris help you see the light. Send your letter in care of this newspaper.)

Dear Thoughtful: I must say I was startled when I listened to a speech by Barbara Ward (Lady Jackson) in which she referred to these times as the "post-Christian era".

Yet our whole way of life comes of our Christian background. Our laws are based on our concern for one another and our respect for human life. Something quite different from any non-Christian ethic.

I would like to make one remarkable exception to what you have to say about TV. Have you ever watched the "Man Alive" cries with Roy Bonisteel? Each week he poses questions that have to do with the spiritual side of man's life, and himself stands out as a poised and convinced christian.

Legal Abortion Brings Lower Death Rates

LONDON (AP) — The annual death rate from abortions in Britain has dropped by half since the operation was legalized five years ago.

And the number of back-street abortionists prosecuted fell to 34 last year from 75 in 1968.

The Abortion Law Reform Association said in its annual review that the figures prove business is bad for the illegal operators.

Secrecy Proves Key To Aiding City Grow

CAMBRIDGE, Ont. (CP) — Cambridge that's just the way nobody knows, in fact he is so secret about Murray does what he does. As his work that even city council industrial commissioner of his employer, doesn't know what he is doing.

"What's more," he says, "I don't even talk in my sleep."

Mr. Murray says he has to be necessary if new industry is to be attracted to the Cambridge area.

Since becoming industrial commissioner in 1972, Mr. Murray has brought seven industries to Cambridge and arranged for the relocation of 14 local plants.

He admits there are times when he would love to share confidential information, but adds he has never been broken a confidence and never has lost an industry through a leak of information.

He has a variety of dodges, including changing cars several times while en route to an industrial site with an important client, to avoid detection.

Only his secretary knows the location of his secret files which are to be turned over to the city administrator in the event something should happen to him.

About half of his clients demand absolute secrecy during their negotiations and he often does not know the identity of the firm he is dealing with in the initial stages.

First contact, he says, is often made by a consultant, lawyer or realtor on behalf on an unidentified firm.

Mr. Murray says he finds the business community is often more understanding than either politicians or the news media about the need for confidentiality.

"The news media seem to think it is the right of the public to know everything from the early stages."

Mr. Murray says when a client is finally ready to disclose his identity, he generally tells his staff, the union and then municipality, if he is not from out of town, first.

"That makes for good public relations all the way down the line."

The commissioner says it is the small industrialists who usually do not ask for secrecy.

"But I give it to them anyway. I only wind up saying who they are a little earlier in the game."

The World of Amway

A different world.

Amway's Sales and Marketing Plan has made it possible for thousands of people with little experience or capital to establish successful businesses of their own. These thousands of successful businesses are built on the solid foundation of marketing over—one hundred fifty fine quality products to American and Canadian households. In twelve successful years, millions of satisfied customers have purchased hundreds of millions of dollars worth of Amway household products—and come back repeatedly for more.

Amway distributors start their businesses with only the most modest initial investment—twenty-five dollars or less—and even that is refundable. Most start part time. They risk only their time. But with hard work, through serving others by marketing fine products, and through sharing their business opportunity with others, Amway distributors can build a successful part-time or full-time business with great rewards. And so Amway has become one of the world's largest organizations marketing products direct to the consumer. And the Amway business opportunity has brought financial independence and security to thousands of men and women.

Success brings imitation. But the Amway Sales and Marketing Plan is an intricate and finely tuned plan that is the product of over twenty-two years of experience by the founders of Amway Corporation. So as others have tried to emulate Amway's success, they too often have overlooked certain vital details. From time to time these other plans have been presented in the marketplace as "just like Amway," or "an improved Amway." Maybe. But usually not. Most have been warped into pyramid sales schemes, endless chain referral plans, wholesale buying clubs, inventory loading schemes, and unethical multi-level sales plans.

What is the difference?

1. The Amway Sales & Marketing Plan is basically a selling plan, not a recruiting plan. Amway's plan has as its foundation the retailing to households, businesses, and institutions of over one hundred fifty high quality, easily sold, reasonably priced products. Amway's products are of the type for which the need is well established—no high pressure sales tactics are necessary. Product sales are basic to the Amway plan, not incidental.

2. Amway's distributorships are not sold. You can't buy a position or title. There is no required inventory purchase and no minimum inventory requirement. You don't have to buy a garage full of products to become an Amway distributor. The initial investment is twenty-five dollars or less for a sales kit. Unused supplies and inventory are returnable for refund. Success with Amway is earned—it is not for sale.

3. All Amway distributors start the same way—by being "sponsored" by another Amway distributor. But there is no compensation to the sponsor for the act of recruiting—Amway pays no "head-hunting" fees. Sponsors are responsible for educating, motivating and supplying a new distributor and will profit only when their new distributor becomes a successful selling distributor. Success with Amway is a result of effort, knowledge, and personal involvement—not chance.

4. For Amway distributors, the principal rewards are based on retail sales and repeat sales to individuals, households, and commercial establishments—not on "finder's fees," franchise fees, or the resale of territories and franchises to others. Amway's plan is a sales plan—not a "buy-in" plan.

5. The Amway Sales and Marketing Plan does not degenerate into a "wholesale buying club" because the products can be sold at reasonable prices, have high quality and high repeat demand, and the plan is not overloaded with an unreasonably high discount structure.

6. With the Amway Plan, earnings quotations are based on data showing representative distributorships that have earned these sums regularly for realistic periods of time. Amway does not have to rely on unproven "potential" figures—Amway's long history of success is the sound basis for its claims.

7. The Amway plan is supported by millions of dollars worth of quality national advertising. Amway sets standards for local advertising, and monitors distributor claims relating to products and sales plan.

8. Amway conducts a widespread home office educational program to help distributors become successful. Amway distributors are independent, but not alone.

9. Amway Corporation develops and manufactures its own products; in its own plants, laboratories and other facilities representing a multi-million-dollar capital investment. It employs over sixteen hundred people, with a large staff of research specialists and quality control technicians. Amway's commitment to the future is strongly evidenced by its huge investment in facilities and trained specialists.

10. In the Amway plan there are no "free riders"—everyone must produce to participate. Sponsors must achieve a regular minimum retail sales volume to retain sponsorship privileges.

11. All Amway products are backed by a money-back satisfaction guarantee which is backed by the company. Years of customer satisfaction give proof the guarantee is more than just words.

12. Independent Amway distributors operate under a carefully designed Code of Ethics developed over years of experience to protect the rights of the customer and preserve the value of the business that each distributor develops.

Investigate before you invest!

If you are being asked to join a direct selling plan, look into it carefully before you invest your time or money. Use the above statements as a check list...they are the keys to a good sales plan. Ask yourself if the plan you're considering includes each of these features. The answer should be "yes" every time...otherwise you should proceed with great caution.

Better yet, if you are interested in a part-time or full-time business opportunity offering great rewards, consider the Amway Sales and Marketing Plan...contact your neighborhood independent Amway distributor...get all the details... and join the World of Amway!

Energy Debate Widens

PM Enrages Albertans With Bilingualism 'Dig'

OTTAWA (CP) — Bilingualism surfaced unexpectedly in the Commons energy debate Wednesday when Prime Minister Trudeau opened old wounds by suggesting that Alberta MPs are still divided on the language question.

The flare-up came in the middle of the daily question period when Gerald Baldwin (PC—Peace River) accused the prime minister of "letting them freeze" in eastern Canada by refusing to subsidize high imported oil prices.

Earlier, Mr. Trudeau told Elmer MacKay (PC—Central Nova) there is little the government can do about soaring prices because eastern Canada relies on imported oil and the price is set outside the country.

Apparently angered by Mr. Baldwin's remarks, Mr. Trudeau said he appreciated the former Conservative House leader's concern for eastern residents, then added:

"I wonder if he could secure the support of Alberta members in this matter."

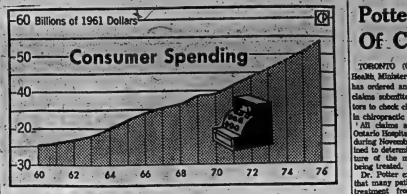
Douglas Roche (C—Edmonton Strathcona) called the statement a slanderous attempt, to paint Alberta MPs, all Conservatives as "bigots on the bilingual issue."

"We are not going to sit quietly in this chamber and be called bigots by the prime minister."

Mr. Trudeau denied any intention to do so, saying he meant to leave the impression that Quebec's concern for a bilingual Canada is greater than its need for Alberta oil.

"I hope the honorable member would support that with all his colleagues."

Sixteen Conservative MPs, many from Alberta, broke party ranks last spring to vote against government public service bilingualism policy.



Meanwhile, Energy Minister Donald Macdonald set the stage for what could be the next federal battle with the provinces over management of energy resources.

Speaking to reporters, he said the new oil policy announced by New Democratic Premier Allan Blakeney of Saskatchewan goes against the spirit of Confederation.

It was not appropriate for any province to beg needed resources and tell the rest of the country: "We won't supply you unless you do this and that."

T. C. Douglas, federal NDP energy critic and former Saskatchewan premier, said Mr. Blakeney would sell oil at a cheaper rate inside Canada if Ottawa comes through with concessions on issues such as rail freight rates.

Mr. Macdonald said cheaper prices for Canadians should be offered without conditions.

Belt Tightening

The Economic Council of Canada estimate consumer spending in Canada will be over $45 billion in 1973 and will be close to $55 billion by 1976. A government report indicates consumers were tightening their belt somewhat in the face of inflation. Graph is in terms of 1961 dollars. (CP Newsmap)

Potter Orders Probe Of Chiropractors' Pay

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Health Minister Richard Potter has ordered an examination of claims submitted by chiropractors to check charges of abuses in chiropractic treatment.

All claims submitted to the Ontario Hospital Insurance Plan during November will be examined to determine the exact nature of the medical condition being treated.

Dr. Potter expressed concern that many patients are seeking treatment from chiropractors for a wide range of ailments.

"I get very concerned when I see chiropractors supposedly treating multiple sclerosis, mesomelanosis, coronary conditions or gall bladder disease," Dr. Potter said in an interview. "We have to protect the public from being abused this way."

The health minister said the Canadian Chiropractic Association also has expressed its disapproval of such abuses, but he stressed that not all chiropractors are suspect.

"We have people practising chiropractic who are doing good work, work that should be done," he said.

Dr. Potter said, however, that chiropractic is no cure for poor diseases.

Average Incomes Up

The average income of all Canadian families rose $943 to $11,311 in 1972. The highest 1972 average family income was reached in Ontario, at $12,832 up $1,149 from 1971, and the biggest increase over the year was the Atlantic region, up $1,293 to $9,139 according to Statistics Canada report.

For unattached individuals the average income rose $359 to $4,805 and Ontario was highest in this group also at $5,234 up $545 for the largest annual gain.

Proximity to U.S. Erodes Land's Respect for Law

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canada's rising crime rate reflects an erosion, largely due to the close proximity of the United States, B.C.'s chief justice has said.

He pointed to the contrast between the case of fugitive vice-president Spiro Agnew and the 1955 case, over which he presided himself, involving Robert Sommers, then B.C. minister of lands and forests.

Sommers and Mr. Wilson-Gray were each sentenced to five years in jail after Sommers was found guilty of accepting bribes from Gray.

"I don't want to be smug, but in contrast to this Spiro Agnew business, where he is fined and put on probation, our system seems highly commendable," said Chief Justice Wilson.

He said that throughout his years on the bench he "tried to convey that there is no disparity in treatment under the law, particularly in sentencing, between the different classes in our society."

"Some people seem to think that just because a prominent citizen has been charged with an offence, the charge itself is sufficient punishment. Such an attitude lessens the public's respect for the law."

"A respectable plumber's reputation is just as valuable to him as is that of a mem ber of parliament or prominent citizen. The plumber has as much to lose by the publicity that may surround the charge."

Chief Justice Wilson won the deep respect of his fellow judges across Canada.

"In my opinion, his contribution to the system of jurisprudence and to the image of justice in Canada is almost without equal," said his successor, Chief Justice Nathan Nemetz.

J. V. Clyne, the retired chairman of MacMillan Bloedel, Canada's largest forest products firm, and a former justice of the B.C. Supreme Court, said Mr. Justice Wilson's judgments "were always based on a sound knowledge of the law, but he tempered his decisions with a deep regard for human values and a delightful sense of humor."

The retired chief justice, whose fitness helps him regain it of medium height, with closely-cropped silver hair, a neatly-cropped moustache and twinkling brown eyes.

As a youngster in Nelson, he dreamed of becoming captain of one of the old steamboats that plied Kootenay Lake. At the outbreak of the First World War, J. O. Wilson, then 16, lied about his age and enlisted in the army.

He went overseas as a private and was invalided home in 1918 as a lance-corporal after receiving a severe back wound at Lens.

He entered the University of B.C. in 1920, dropping out less than a year later to begin articling as a law student.

He married Ruth Helen Pyne in 1932, the year he was called to the bar. They have three children, 11 grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

He practised with his father, F. E. Wilson, a one-time county court judge in the East Kootenay area, who retired to private law practice at Prince George.

In 1939 J. O. Wilson was appointed county court judge for the Cariboo and still speaks with affection about the Cariboo people, then in 1944, he was appointed to the B.C. Supreme Court.

He frequently expressed regret at his short-lived university days, which were "due mainly to a lack of funds," and his lack of the classical education and formal training traditionally enjoyed by English high court judges.

His fellow-judges argues that such a formal background would have been superfluous.

"With his mental equipment, formal training was quite unnecessary," said Mr. Clyne.

The new chief justice concurred: "His written judgments, for instance, reflect a sparkling prose that is famous throughout Canada."

NO PLACE LIKE HOME

VIENNA (AP) — Fifty-nine per cent of Austria's workers spend holidays at home, mainly because they cannot afford to go elsewhere, the government statistical office said.

Retarded Infants' Home Suggestions Made by Juror

Hastings County Sheriff, Ross Bailey recently received a brief report outlining some of the problems being experienced by the staff at the Ontario Home for Mentally Retarded Infants in Pinkerfield.

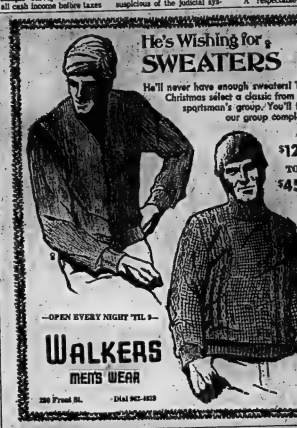
The report, prepared by Evelyn Cormier, a former member of the most recent Hastings County Grand Jury, was mailed to the sheriff's office as a supplement to the report tendered to County Court Judge R. C. Henry by the grand jury on Nov. 30.

In her three-page report, Mrs. Cormier told the Sheriff that the Pinkerfield home, that cares for 73 severely retarded infants, was "well organized and operated efficiently." However, she did make several references to the "evident lack of space" in that institution.

Mrs. Cormier made two recommendations to the Sheriff:

1) That the home be supplied with a mobile treatment cart capable of holding the variety of equipment and medicines needed for the institution's monthly hospital testing rounds. Such a cart could be supplied by the government or a service club.

2) That the home expand its storage facilities by building a new utility room in which it could store its cleaning equipment.



A copy of the report was also sent to Judge Henry.

Search for Science Policy Seems No Nearer Success

OTTAWA (CP) — The search for a Canadian science policy continued in 1973 with little sign of early success.

The debate was highlighted by publication in September of the third and final report by Senator Maurice Lamontagne, who had conducted a five-year study of the problem. It proposed reorganization of most government science functions.

When the Middle East oil supply tightened in October, there was talk of alternative energy sources but the discussion was extraneous to the general policy debate rather than a rallying point for it.

In November, an article in the London-published journal, New Scientist, said: "Science policy in Canada is in a state of turmoil at the moment."

Policy-makers are agreed that they need a better plan for spending the $1 billion in federal funds allocated to science this year, complaining of inefficient co - ordination among departments and agencies.

The experts give technology credit for 30 per cent of the growth of the gross national product and argue that better planning would benefit the economy.

Two years ago, the federal government set up a science and technology ministry with a mandate to fashion a science policy.

But the ministry, now headed by Jeanne Sauve, a former Montreal journalist, was given only advisory powers.

However, Mrs. Sauve said in an interview in December that the government intends to give her ministry more power to co-ordinate spending and review science programs.

But a precise way of doing this had not been decided.

There have been expectations from both inside and outside the department. The deputy minister, Dr. Aurele Beaulieu, said in April it was time Canadians threw off their "colonial mentality" and ceased to be a "nation of middle-men."

Senator Lamontagne, a Quebec Liberal and former economics professor, said in March, Canada must move manufacturing with the raw materials now shipped unprocessed to foreign customers. Otherwise, it would become "a ghost country, stripped of its natural resources and increasingly a satellite of the U.S."

In July, Mr. Sauve issued a statement calling for a go-ordinated ocean policy and urging government departments to give more thought to national interests in offshore planning. But critics said a junior minister would not get far telling the "real boys" how to run their departments.

Ministry officials continued to study science policies around the world but there were few apparent results.

The ministry had proposed in 1972 that more of the research done by government departments be farmed out to universities and private industry. The program got off to a slow start in 1973.

In mid-November, Prime Minister Trudeau told the Commons his government planned to act on science and technology matters. One "may find traces" of this interest in the next speech from the throne, he said.

But discontent was rife among the scientists. They were tightening their belts for still another year, in part because the government has other spending priorities — anti-inflation programs, an energy crisis and higher baby bonuses.

Complicating the scene is concern in some quarters that technology is running amuck, depleting resources and trapping Canadians in an alien lifestyle. The Science Council of Canada called in February for a more constructive kind of technology.

Dr. P. D. MacTaggart-Cowan of the Science Council sees one bright side to things, however. In a year-end review he said the science policy debate has improved, if only because the media are discussing it more intelligently.

PARISIANS WANT PEACE

PARIS (Reuter) — More than half of all Parisians would like to leave the French capital and escape to the provinces, according to a poll published here. Chief reason was the city's traffic problem—66 per cent rated parking as their No. 1 anxiety.

Parachute Rescuers Organize

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — Dense bush in the Sudbury district has often made rescue operations for lost hunters and downed aircraft difficult and lengthy. However, an air-rescue plan is being developed which may ease those problems.

Charles Horvath, chief instructor and team leader of the Manitou Sport Parachute Centre, is attempting to form an air-rescue group which would jump by parachute into an area to-and an injured man without having to wait days while rescuers travel through the bush.

Mr. Horvath, who has made more than 3,000 jumps in his 23 years of parachuting, has been working with just such a team at Sudbury airport. He said he believes this will be the first civilian team of its type in Canada although the armed forces already have a similar operation.

A former parachutist in the Hungarian army, Mr. Horvath has trained jumpers in Australia, Switzerland an Canada, including the 2nd Battalion, Irish Regiment of Canada (Sudbury). He is well aware of the hazards of a bush jump compared with sport jumping.

The team would be made up of four members who can jump, pilot a plane and perform first aid. A back-up crew of eight would be standing by. All the members are from Mr. Horvath's jumping class.

A doctor has joined the group and Mr. Horvath has recruited a nurse. The doctor, S. E. Van Heine-Wallace, now is learning to pilot a plane.

Because of the special conditions of bush jumping—never knowing where you are going to land, or on what—Mr. Horvath gives an additional training course. The bush-jumping course, taken twice a week, lasts for two to three weeks.

The team, said Mr. Horvath, is ready now.

Apps Suggests Ex-cons Make Good Jail Guards

OTTAWA (CP) — An Ontario minister called on his colleagues in corrections Wednesday to stop being poor salesmen and make use of the graduates of their own prisons.

Corrections Minister Syl Apps said at a federal-provincial conference on corrections that various jurisdictions should work together in developing new sources of recruitment, such as the ex-offender.

He said Ontario has found that the 157 ex-offenders it has employed during the last five years are well-motivated and good workers.

"I put it to you that we are prepared to use our own products, particularly since we are busily engaged in exhorting others to do so."

The minister also called for changes under which Ontario would receive more federal money.

He said basic standards for staff training and career development can be established for the whole country. This would touch not only on the correctional officer in a penitentiary but also on those persons who were in the community, such as parole officers.

Senate Approves Baby Bonus Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — Senate approval and royal assent to a government family allowances bill Wednesday ensured larger benefits in January for 7.5 million children. It also may have removed an obstacle to speedy delivery of December cheques.

The legislation boosts monthly family allowance payments to an average $20 a child from the current flat $12, effective Jan. 1.

It is the second increase in family allowance benefits this year. They were raised to $12 in October from an average $7.20 a month.

Total cost next year is expected to be $1.365 billion after $200 million is recovered through income taxes.

Quebec and Prince Edward Island will add extra benefits for large families and Alberta will pay payments to family size. Residents in other provinces are likely to get flat $20 payments for every child.

James McGrath (St. John's West) said in the Commons that December family allowance cheques are being delivered in post offices on orders from Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde.

Postmaster-General Andre Ouellet said he finds it "hard to believe" that the cheques were sitting in post offices undelivered. He would investigate the complaint.

Outside the Commons, Mr. McGrath said the welfare department wanted the cheques delayed because it was worried about contempt of Parliament. The cheques apparently were accompanied by a circular announcing the higher payments in January even though legislation covering the increases had not yet been approved by the Senate.

Union Official Paid $66,474

TORONTO (CP) — The business manager of a plasterworkers union local and his wife, the local's secretary, received $66,474 in pay and other benefits during a 14-month period, the royal commission on violence in the construction industry was told Wednesday.

Documents submitted to the commission indicate that Frank Amis, business manager of Local 598, earned $77,708 in overtime as well as a basic pay of 13.66 an hour.

His wife Sharon earned $6,033 in overtime and was paid a salary of $9,150.

The total also included $8,320 that Amis said was his pay for a six-month span when he was barred from the local.

Shafiel Minto, an accountant-investigator for the commission, said Amis's predecessor in the job was paid only $250 a week and $185 a month expenses.

He said Rafele D'Alessandro, who lost the job after a report that he had blocked Amis's membership in the local, did not receive any overtime pay.

Minto added that Amis did not declare his overtime, back pay and other payments on his tax return. Instead, the amount was listed by the union in its "organizational account."

Under questioning by Judge Barry Walsberg Mr. Amis admitted he received $17,000 in the last four months of 1972, but declared only $2,000 on his income tax returns.

"I didn't want to pay tax on the money," Mr. Amis said.

London Cyclists Are Encouraged

LONDON (Reuter) — Bolstered by widespread fears of a fuel shortage and backed by an array of experts and administrators, London cyclists are gaining new encouragement.

More and more Londoners are switching to pedal power as environmentalists, doctors and government officials begin to look to the bicycle as a possible answer to the capital's clogged-up traffic.

The British town-planners' magazine Design has said bicycles should be given the chance to produce a "traffic revolution," and an increasing number of cyclists are adding weight to the argument by slipping smugly through traffic jams.

All aspects of cycling are thriving—manufacturers report record output and export ports, clubs report growing membership, bicycle-hire firms say they cannot cope with demand and some influential support has been gained.

An undersecretary of the government's environment department, appropriately named Keith Speed, has suggested that special roads should be built for the bicycle, which he called "a healthy thing and a good thing."

"It would be difficult to introduce such a network in existing densely built-up areas, but a start could be made in new developments and extended as obsolescent areas were rebuilt," he said.

Two members of the House of Commons recently supported him with a bicycle "ride-in" although one fell from his machine in the process.

A professor in environmental studies at Reading University has proposed the creation by the year 2000 of five "cycle only" roads through London. Another recent study suggested the establishment of cycle paths along the banks of the Thames.

Design magazine warned planners against "blind devotion" to the car.

"You must adjust to the idea that the cycle is to be encouraged. It offers a golden chance to anticipate and encourage a traffic revolution. More cycling means greater freedom of movement for everyone."

It is quite possible for Londoners to cycle to work, since 3,250,000 of them travel an average of only 2.8 miles from home, the journal reported.

The Greater London council is considering imposing an additional tax on vehicles entering its territory. In rush hours a car can take an hour to cover just eight miles.

Leaders in public transport have said their services are in danger of grinding to a halt because of staff shortages.

The Daily Mail, has demoralized what cyclists have claimed to have known for years. It pitted a fast car against a cycle over a three-mile city course and the cyclist triumphed by nine minutes.

London's Water Board has said its officials can reach emergencies more quickly by cycle than by their fleet of radio-controlled vans.

The 62,000-member, 85-year-old British Cyclists Touring Club has just recorded its first membership increase in a decade, and its national secretary, Leslie Warner, says Londoners "are rapidly getting to the stage where a bicycle is better for travelling than a car.

"Cyclists do not pollute the atmosphere. They make hardly any noise and they won't suffer from any petrol rationing," he said.

"But we are being discriminated against by local and national governments which favor the motor car."

Quinte Teachers Support High School Walkout

Teachers in Hastings county will be advised to support the Tuesday walkout recommended by the Ontario Secondary Teachers' Federation.

The one-day walkout has been called by OSSTF provincial president Douglas Dinsmore to protest the legislation introduced Monday to end mass resignations and impose compulsory arbitration on teachers.

At a regularly scheduled meeting of the executive council of District 19 of OSSTF (comprising Hastings, Prince Edward and Lennox and Addington counties), held at Sun Luck Gardens in Belleville Wednesday evening, teacher-representatives from all schools in the district supported the provincial executive's move.

"The District 19 executive council supports the decision of the provincial executive as outlined in President Douglas Dinsmore's telegram of Dec. 12," said communications officer Judy Carty of Centennial Secondary School.

Gist of the president's telegram was the call for a one-day walkout of teachers to register protest against the bill to outlaw mass resignations (strikes) and to make compulsory arbitration the alternative.

The Ontario English Catholic Teachers' Association, involved in negotiations with several boards in the province, has added its support to the walkout.

The District 19 executive council is comprised of about 15 members. They are the presidents of each division (county) and staff representatives from those schools that do not have a member of executive rank. In effect, every high school in the three counties has a representative on the council.

Staff representatives now have to carry the district decision back to their schools, where teachers will be polled by a majority opinion.

Whether or not high school students in the three counties will get a holiday Dec. 18 is still up in the air.

The Ontario Public School Men Teachers' Federation teacher legislation. "The asst a telegram yesterday to provincial executive of the all its affiliates and the press stating its " strong opposition" to the emergency legislation. "The provincial executive is prepared to recommend that teachers go as far as closing down schools in protest," say the telegram.

A meeting for all elementary teachers in Hastings county was scheduled for 4:30 p.m. today at Queen Victoria School. The meeting will be for information only, to bring teachers up to date on the current situation.

Attending are members of the Federation of Women Teachers' Associations of Ontario, the Ontario English Catholic Teachers' Association, and the Ontario Public School Men Teachers' Federation.

Clare Dupnow, president of the OPSMTF here, announced the meeting at noon today. He said he expects at least one representative for every school in the county to be present, as well as the executive members of the teachers' affiliates.

Secondary School Teachers Confer

District 19 executive members of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation, met last night at Sun Luck Gardens to plan strategy to protest teacher legislation introduced by Education Minister Thomas Wells. From left to right are Harvy Gotfried of Picton, division president in Prince Edward county, Ian Davison of Bancroft, president of Hastings county division, Ken MacDonald of Picton, president of District 19 and Mrs. Judy Speagle, president of Lennox and Addington division. The executive council of the district supported the call for a teacher walkout Tuesday in high schools.

Quinte Builders Elect Officers

The Quinte Construction Association, celebrating its 25th year in the Quinte area, has elected its directors for 1974.

Brian Holmes of Cornerstone Builders was elected president of the association.

Elected first vice-president is Doc Dafoe, second vice-president is George Parry. On the directorate are Art Bonnah, Hans Suedbeck, Doug Collins, Gino Donatucci and Frank Miron. Don Sutton continues his appointment as QCA manager.

Bev Quinney, nominating chairman at last night's meeting held in conjunction with the annual Christmas party at the Bay of Quinte Yacht Club gave a brief history of the association.

He told the group of about 100 that it was back in 1947 when Belleville carpenters struck 90 cents an hour, that they decided to organize and get the Department of Labor to call a meeting to change the minimum rate for carpenters to $1.25.

The contractors decided to band together to counteract against these unheard of high raises. So an organization was formed and called the Belleville Builders Exchange which was then changed to the Belleville and District and Builders Exchange and eventually became the Quinte Construction Association.

The first president in 1948 was Edgar Rutherford. The first secretary manager was Jack White who, at the age of 85, lives on Turnbull Street in Belleville. The first offices were at 54 Alexander Street.

Newly elected president Brian Holmes outlined the six projects he hoped to undertake in the new year.

First, he said he planned to prepare a new constitution with a complete set of revised by-laws. The existing constitution set up in 1948 is out of date, he said.

Second, he planned to update the association's directory or "green binder" and try to put it in the hands of buyers of QCA construction. He said there will be additional copies of it printed if necessary.

Third, he mentioned the QCA leaving the Ontario Federation of Construction Associations (OFCA) which is planning to terminate early in the new year to be replaced with a new association. The Ontario Construction Association. He said the format of the new group is not well defined now but that it is indicated it will have a much broader and sounder foundation than the old OFCA group. "Only time will tell if the new association will satisfy the needs of our local group here in Quinte," said Mr. Holmes.

Fourth, he hoped that all publicly financed projects make use of the Bid Depository. Fifth, he hoped that a new up-to-date telephone roster would be prepared and distributed to members in the fall of 1974.

Last, he hoped that "We can reorganize the plans room in a more efficient manner and construct two or three "take-off" booths to assist the pricing of new work. He said that the plans room facilities are not nearly large enough to handle the traffic for the number of plans and jobs being

The Metre Is Coming!

With the metric system of measurement scheduled for adoption in Canada some time in the near future, The Canadian Department of Agriculture has commenced a program aimed at preparing farmers for the changeover.

To this end it has put out a pamphlet called The Metric System For Farmers, setting out conversion tables for changing feet into metres and miles into kilometres; acres into hectares, pounds into kilograms, and quarts into litres.

In the metric system, all measures of length, area, volume, capacity and weight are closely interrelated and are all based on the metre.

The most obvious advantage of the system is its decimal nature with conversion to larger or smaller units involving multiplication or division by multiples or submultiples of 10.

In spite of the simplicity, however, the government department admits that it will take time and effort to change a lifetime habit of inches and pounds and begin thinking in terms of metres and kilograms.

However, once it is realized that a metre is equal to about 3.3 feet, a hectare to about 2.5 acres and a kilogram a little over two pounds, a good start will have been made.

The pamphlet notes that since it was first adopted in France in the 18th century, the metric system has steadily gained acceptance as the international unit of measurement. Canada will be joining some 131 other countries already using the system.

It helps a bit, of course that the Canadian dollar is already based on the decimal system.

Also, many foods, toiletries, home care items and other products are already weighed or measured in both the customary units of measurement and the approximate metric equivalents.

Soon all items purchased in the supermarkets will be packaged or weighed in the metric system.

Already toothpaste, for instance, is put in tubes bearing only the metric figure.

Time for Change

The Chamber of Commerce elected its directors for the coming year. Richard Lumbers, left, past president of the Chamber, takes time out after the first meeting of the new executive to explain a few details to incoming president George Thompson. One recommended change will be holding future meetings in places other than the chamber offices on Front Street.

Santa Safe

Santa Claus wasn't hurt but a Sudbury man was rushed to hospital with cuts to his neck and head early this morning when he fell through a plate glass window at Wray's Home Furnishers on Front Street.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie reports that Norman E. Rose of Sudbury, fell through the four by eight foot window around 1:18 a.m.

Damage to the window was estimated at approximately $75.

Mr. Rose was treated and released from Belleville General Hospital.

Charlie Bristol, of Wray's Home Furnishers, reports that the Santa who lived in the store's showcase was only slightly dismayed by the intrusion. He hopes to have the window repaired sometime today.

Seniors' Housing Loan Announced

A Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. loan of $227,852 for the construction of a four-storey apartment building for Senior citizens in Belleville was announced today by Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford.

The building will contain one two-bedroom and 30 one-bed room units. It will be built by Frand Zepet Construction Co. Ltd. and will be located on the south side of Bridge Street between Dunnett Blvd. and Palmer Road.

Provided under the National Housing Act, the loan is for 50 years and covers 90 per cent of the cost of construction. The remaining 10 per cent will be borne by the province.

Sergeant Major Now Inspector

The Belleville detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police recently announced the promotion and transfer of Sergeant Major Ray Kowal. As of Dec. 16 he assumed the position of Inspector at the police department's general headquarters in Toronto.

Crown Trust Fund Gains $21.45

The Belleville police commission's trust account is richer by some $21.45 today after a motion of police commissioners voted Tuesday to transfer that amount of money to the account from some unclaimed duties in the police department's lost and found.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie reported that every year his department receives a number of cheques that lack any identification.

After keeping them for 90 days, the police are entitled to return the unclaimed wallets to the persons who originally found them. If they are unable to contact these people, then they may allocate the funds as they see fit.

Rescuers Commended

Three Belleville firefighters and a city police constable received the praise and thanks of the Belleville Police Commission at last Tuesday's meeting.

Firefighters Don Putman, Ray Ketcheson and Bruce Hall, along with police constable Bob McAlpine were commended for their "coolness and bravery" on the night of November 28, when they rescued a 24-year-old mother and her two young children from a burning building at 118 Front Street.

The four men took Mrs. Belleville Council, her two-year-old son Ricardo and her four-month-old daughter Elizabeth from the rear of their second floor apartment, when fire gutted and completely destroyed the building.

Constable McAlpine will receive a special letter of commendation from the Board of Police Commissioners, which will be attached to his personal police file.

Fire Chief Lee Culhane, has stated that he is "extremely proud" of the work done by his men and has already extended his personal congratulations and thanks to the men.

George Thompson To Head Chamber

George Thompson has been elected president of the 1974 Chamber of Commerce. He succeeds Richard Lumbers who will continue on the board of directors.

Mr. Thompson, born in Brockville, has been with the chamber for three years. He has been in Belleville for four years and is general manager at Bell Canada in the city.

Accepting his position, Mr. Thompson expressed his gratitude for the confidence of other Chamber members in him. He said he would continue the work started on the Tourist Information Centre and Convention Bureau.

He also said he would press for changes in the chamber's bylaws and in the standing committee rules.

Other members of the executive consist of the re-appointments of treasurer Larry Soden and secretary-manager Don Sutton.

The positions of first and second vice-president were deferred until new members of the chamber had a chance to know the other members and a chance to know what was involved in the positions.

Four new members of the 1974 board of directors were chosen. They are George Zegouras, Donald Leslie, John O'Flynn and Keith Allison.

The complete list of members of the 1974 board of directors of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce are: George Thompson, Richard Lumbers, Larry Soden, Bryce Flynn, W. L. Lewis, Michael Broadhurst, Donald Keller, Harold Isley, Joel H. Maser, George Zegouras, Donald Leslie, John O'Flynn, Keith Allison and manager Don Sutton.

It was also decided at the chamber meeting yesterday to hold following meetings in various locations throughout the city rather than at the chamber offices on Front Street.

District Realtors Form Association

Belleville realtor Gerald Joyce has been elected the first president of the Quinte and District Real Estate Board, a yet-to-be chartered corporation composed of the present members of Trenton and Belleville boards.

The Quinte board will swing into action officially Jan. 1, 1974, although an office and staff has been in operation on a caretaker basis since July.

The office acts as a clearing house for the Multiple Listing Service. During Wednesday's general meeting of the Belleville board, realtors voted to accept a new slate of officers.

President of the Belleville board since 1972, Mr. Joyce will take over the reins of a board with jurisdiction from Deseronto to Cramahe township on the west, and from Highway 7 to the southern tip of Prince Edward County.

Therefore, said Mr. Joyce, homes listed with the Multiple Listing Service will get a much wider circulation. This will benefit not only the owner, but the homebuying public who will have a larger market area to choose from.

Lee Woodward, past president of the Trenton board, will assume similar duties with the Quinte board. Phillip Bennett will serve as first vice-president. Hugh O'Neil as second vice-president.

Directors will be Robert Howe, Frank Barry, Doug Donaldson, Margaret Cooke, Gordon Robilin, Malcolm Barrett, Eugene DeMarsh and Ken Pinder. The new Quinte board executive will represent about 300 salesmen and brokers.

During Wednesday's meeting, realtors adjusted the Belleville board's commission rate structure in order to standardize rates with Trenton. The rate card, to be used in govern sales under Quinte board jurisdiction, outlines the minimum commission for properties listed el ber through MLS or exclusively.

The card structure will be subject to revision as the new board grows in the number and dollar value of sales.

Fourth Time Up

William Poppenk (left) presents Cec Ruttan with his fourth consecutive Salesman of the Year award after the Belleville and District Real Estate Board meeting Wednesday. Ralph Brazeau gives Mr. Ruttan a congratulatory pat on the back after receiving first runner-up honors. Mr. Poppenk was second runner-up and will receive a plaque based on the points given the realtor for listing and selling the third largest number of properties through the Multiple Listing Service.

Construction Directors Confer

This has been a good year for the Quinte Construction Association. As part of their 25th anniversary celebrations in the Quinte area, the association compiled a directory giving valuable information to prospective firms hoping to locate here. Last night, the group elected a new executive. As president Brian Holmes signs a form, he is joined by first vice-president, Doc Dafoe, seated right and second vice-president, George Parry, left. Standing in the rear are directors, from left to right, Gino Donatucci, Jim Bunn, Doug Collins and Hans Suedbeck. Absent is Frank Miron.

Penguins Break Out For 9,000 Partisans

By IAN MacLAINE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

There had to be a time in the recent past when Ken Schinkel wondered whether he really would rather be in Pittsburgh than Philadelphia.

The cliche is often reserved for those departing the Philadelphia pro sports scene after they reach their destination.

But nothing, at least very little, has been going right for Schinkel's Penguins in this National Hockey League season, especially at home. Their Pennsylvania rivals meanwhile were languishing atop the West Division.

Dwindling attendance figures attest to the Penguins' ineffectiveness at home, prompting the coach's recent assessment: "Our kids want to do so well at home that maybe they get uptight."

But the Penguins, who were 3-6-3 at home and winless in six games before Wednesday night, suddenly found the winning formula in front of 9,000 partisans and trounced the hapless California Golden Seals 9-1.

Captain Ron Schock and veteran Syl Apps scored two goals apiece, and the Penguins broke the game open with five second-period goals behind California's journeyman goaltender, Bob Champoux filling in for injured regulars Gilles Meloche and Marv Edwards.

Elsewhere, Philadelphia scored twice in the second period to salvage a 2-2 tie with the Black Hawks and maintain their two-point lead in the West, and New York Rangers needed a third-period goal from ve'eran Pete Stemkowski for a 1-1 home ice tie with Buffalo Sabres.

Rick MacLeish and Garry Dornhoefer tallied for the Flyers in the middle period and then the Flyers were forced to hang on as the Hawks went all out in the third period, outshooting the visitors 11-4 in an effort to pull off the win.

Buffalo 1 NY-Rangers 1

Rangers dominated play for most of the game but were held scoreless by goalie Dave Dryden until Stemkowski converted Bruce MacGregor's centering pass in the third period.

Whalers Claim Fight Turned Game Around

A third-period fight ignited the New England Whalers attack for five goals and an 8-6 win over Toronto Toros in a World Hockey Association fray at Boston Wednesday Night.

The fight pitted Toronto's Jack Gibson against Whaler goalie Al Smith, who ended up with minor, major and misconduct penalties.

Two of the five New England markers triggered by the battle came from John French, giving him four for the night.

French said it was the fight that changed the game around.

"It got us going as a team and everyone began giving a little effort," he said. "We realized they had beaten us before and we owed them something."

Hugh Harris, Tim Sheehy, Paul Hurley and Al Kerlander also counted for Whalers.

Tom Simpson led Toronto with two. Greg Trottier, Gibson, Rick Sentes and Wayne Carleton scored a goal each.

In other Wednesday action, Vancouver Blazers edged Quebec Nordiques 2-1 in overtime, Houston Aeros strafed Winnipeg Jets 3-2, Los Angeles Sharks devoured Edmonton Oilers 7-2 and Jersey Knights beat Cleveland Crusaders 4-2.

Tonight the Crusaders meet the Toros in Toronto.

Vancouver 2 Quebec 1

Rookie Michel Plante gave the hometown Blazers their victory when he grabbed Ed Hatoum's rebound and lifted a backhander high into the net here fifteen Quebec goaltender Richard Brodeur at 2:30 of overtime. It was Plante's first professional goal.

John Migneault of Blazers got the only goal of the first period when he slammed Claude St. Sauveur's rebound past Brodeur. Veteran Jean-Guy Gendron answered for Quebec at 8:32 of the second and the teams held each other scoreless until Plante's overtime goal.

FILES SUIT

CHICAGO (CP) — Bill Staley, 27, former Chicago Bears defensive tackle injured during the 1972 season, filed a $66,000 breach of contract suit Wednesday in circuit court against the National Football League team. Staley charged the Bears violated a two-year contract signed before the 1972 season, then dropped him after he suffered "incapacitating knee injuries."

Lanier Picks Up Slack For Soaring Pistons

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The loss of injured starters Stu Lantz and Bobby Mengelli should be hurting Detroit Pistons. Not so, they still have Bob Lanier.

Lanier scored 38 points and helped the Pistons register their seventh consecutive National Basketball Association victory with a 114-95 romp over Los Angeles Lakers Wednesday night.

In other NBA contests, Boston Celtics defeated Buffalo Braves 126-119 and Seattle Supersonics downed Philadelphia 76ers 100-95.

In the American Basketball Association, Virginia Squires 33, Memphis Tams 87; Kentucky Colonels 98, San Antonio Spurs 94; San Diego Conquistadors 128, Indiana Pacers 113; New York Nets 107, Carolina Cougars 97 and Utah Stars 125, Denver Rockets 122.

The defeat was the fifth in a row for the injury-riddled Lakers, who played without Jerry West and Stu Bridges, and marked the longest losing streak for the Lakers since Bill Sharman became head coach three seasons ago.

Lanier also collected 20 rebounds, five steals and three blocked shots. Gail Goodrich led Los Angeles with 31 points.

Celtics 126, Braves 119

Don Nelson and Steve Kuberski sparked a fourth-quarter surge that carried Boston to its 20th straight victory over Buffalo since the Braves joined the league four years ago.

Buffalo held a 91-90 edge entering the final period until Nelson, who had 11 points in the final period, and Kuberski, who had 14, began their drive.

Jo Jo White led Boston with 32 points and Bob McAdoo paced the losers with 43.

SuperSonics 100, 76ers 93

Dick Snyder hit 4 three-point play with 49 seconds left, starting a seven-point outburst that lifted the Sonics to victory.

San Diego 119 Indiana 113

Dwight Lamar scored 30 points, including two quick baskets with less than two minutes left, and Stew Johnson added 29 points as San Diego defeated Indiana.

Nets 107, Cougars 97

Brian Taylor scored 25 points and Billy Paultz chipped in 22 for the Nets' ninth straight victory.

Cougars lead the ABA East Division by 1½ games.

Stars 122, Rockets 112

Willie Wise led all scorers with 33 points and Ron Boone added 18 of 13 from the field and three of three from the foul line for 27 points in the Stars' victory.

The triumph gave Utah sole possession of first place in the ABA West.

Colonels 98, Spurs 94

Kentucky caught the Spurs cold in the opening quarter and led 26-8 after the first period. The eight points by San Antonio tied a league record for low scoring shared by three other teams.

Dan Issel led the Colonels with 28 points.

Squires 88, Tams 87

George sank a 17-foot jumper with two seconds remaining and lifted the Squires to victory.

Four Short

LAUREL, Md. (CP) — Jockey Sandy Hawley managed only one winner at Laurel race track Wednesday, leaving him four short of his goal of 500 winning riders this year.

The Whitby, Ont., native collected his 496th win in the fifth race aboard Union Soldier which returned $10.60, $4.80 and $3.60.

Hawley, who last Thursday passed Willie Shoemaker's North American record of 485 wins in one year, also rode Keep Off to a second-place finish Wednesday in the third race.

WILT CHAMBERLAIN

A Coach -That's All

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Wilt Chamberlain apparently won't be playing for San Diego Conquistadors of the American Basketball Association this season.

A lawyer for Los Angeles Lakers says arbitrator Peter Seitz has ruled that Chamberlain can't play for any team but the Lakers this season.

The 7-foot-1 centre, pro basketball's all-time leading scorer and rebounder, left the Lakers of the National Basketball Association this year to become the $2 million-a-year player-coach of the Conquistadors.

Alex Webster Calls It Quits

JERSEY CITY, N.J. (AP) — A season that began with great expectations a few months ago all but ended Wednesday.

Head coach Alex Webster, whose dreams of bringing New York Giants back to the glory of a championship, resigned.

Saddled with a 2-10-1 National Football League record that is as one of the worst in the season and one of the worst in the Giants' 49-year history, Webster will coach his last game Sunday. It will take a super-charged effort for his players to send him out on a high note.

They're playing Minnesota Vikings, winners of the National Conference Central Division title.

And long before the final gun sounds, ending Webster's first year career as head coach, the strains of "Goodbye, Alex" almost surely will be heard.

It is an anthem of embittered New York fans. It "Goodbye, Allie" the Giants' fans sang in the late 1950s, regarding Allie Sherman. Their wish came true just before the start of the 1961 season. The Giants gave his job to Webster.

Webster brought the Giants close with a couple of second-place finishes. Then the team sank back among the also-rans.

They finished strong in 1972 and had ripped off six straight exhibition victories this year.

Webster met with club owner Wellington Mara just before the Giants took the field Monday night and absorbed a 40-6 thumping by Los Angeles Rams.

"I had a long talk with Wellington before the Rams game," he said Wednesday. "I felt the season was gone and it was time for a change . . . I always have said I wouldn't want a job if I couldn't be successful at it."

Mara said he had "known for a long time that Alex was bitterly disappointed as I, at the failure of our team this season and at his inability to motivate the players."

"I've always been a winner," he said Webster, who had starred at North Carolina State, played for two years with Montreal Alouettes of the Canadian Football League, then became one of the Giants' greatest running backs during 1956-64. "When you put all the pieces together like we thought we had this year, when you think you have something, it's tough to accept losing."

It is believed that Mara, who has called the shots in virtually every aspect of the club's operations, plans to loosen his grip a bit next season by hiring a general manager.

"I have decided upon a course of action," Mara said, "and will have an announcement as soon as it can be implemented—hopefully before the player draft" next January.

Quarterback Randy Johnson, perhaps more than any other player, typified what happened to the Giants this season. He quit the club, but then decided to return.

Some of the Giants and a few players on other clubs said the Giants quit on themselves on the field.

Johnson, bitter at not being given a chance to run the club, walked out for a couple of weeks. Mara convinced him to return.

"Was I surprised? Not at all. Nobody was surprised," Johnson said of Webster's decision. "Alex was just very frustrated.

"He had run out of things to do and he always told us that when he felt he wasn't doing the job he'd step down."

Charlie Evans was another victim. He was a No. 2 running back until the Giants replaced him with Johnny Roland, Evans wound up on the taxi squad—and eventually on suspension for a week when he complained.

Cowick Leads Robins

Left winger Bruce Cowick got a goal before 3,265 home fans, while Ricky Drolet, the other member of the Keenan-Cowick line, picked up four assists.

Jim Cahoon, Larry Fullan and Donald Howes completed for the Voyageurs, who trailed 1-0 after the first period and 3-2 at the end of the second.

The Robins broke a six-game winless streak.

Cincinnati 4 Boston 3

Titanic, No. 1 pick of Buffalo Sabres of the National Hockey League in the amateur draft last summer, scored a goal in each of the first and second periods before 2,616 fans in Cincinnati. Titanic was a member last season of Sudbury Wolves in the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A series.

Billy Inglis, set up Titanic, and Bob Richer scored the other Cincinnati goals. Dave Haynes, Dave Forbes and Craig Sarner replied for Boston.

Titanic was injured when hit by a stick in the last period.

Bright Future

The potash industry in Saskatchewan is ready to bask in the glow of optimistic prediction about its future. But its enjoyment of those glowing forecasts is marred by the Saskatchewan government's determinator in many increased profits the companies make. This is the International Minerals and Chemicals Corporation, Canada, Ltd., plant at Esterhazy. (CP Photo)

Government Interference

Potash Demand Rises But New Woe Looms

REGINA (CP) — "Seldom in the economic annals of Canada have we seen such responsible corporations get into such an economic mess," was how former premier Ross Thatcher described the province's potash industry in 1969.

"Lack of co-operation and lack of planning have brought major companies to the brink of disaster."

In subsequent years, the economic mess became a political and legal problem also, affecting politicians from New Mexico to France and legal authorities in Washington and Ottawa.

Now the industry is ready to bask in the glow of optimistic predictions about its future. But its enjoyment of those glowing forecasts is marred by the Saskatchewan government's determination to share any increased profits the companies make.

Even more worrying have been Industry Minister Kim Thorson's statements that the NDP provincial government is considering taking over ownership of all underground potash and setting up a government agency to sell it.

For such a young industry, the potash business has had more than its share of troubles.

Development of the Saskatchewan potash reserves—virtually the only ones in North America besides those of New Mexico—began in the early 1960s amid predictions that potash would do for Saskatchewan what oil did for Alberta and Texas.

The supply was there—perhaps up to 2,000 years' worth of world fertilizer needs—but the markets were not. Companies found themselves with vast excess capacity.

Sales could have been increased to the United States, but only at the expense of New Mexico potash producers, and U.S. authorities made it clear that Canada had better not try to take over the U.S. market by underselling U.S. potash to Canadian farmers, with different fertilizer requirements, could use only three per cent or so of Saskatchewan potash production.

So in 1969 the provincial Liberal government instituted a quota system to hold down production and keep prices up. Despite criticism, no potash company has been squeezed into bankruptcy, and the U.S. did not close the door to Saskatchewan potash. When the NDP government took office in 1971, it continued the system.

Potash producers in France and New Mexico welcomed the Saskatchewan quotas while Saskatchewan critics said quotas meant those companies with mines in both Saskatchewan and New Mexico were able to expand their New Mexico production to make up for restrictions in Saskatchewan.

Then, in 1969, the quota system operated comparatively peacefully. But the NDP government tightened it, saying companies could produce only the same percentage of capacity even if they had guaranteed contracts to sell a larger amount.

That sparked a legal battle that reached the Supreme Court of Canada and still is unsettled. Central Canada Potash Co., which could sell virtually all its production to one of the owners, CF Industries Ltd. of Chicago, is seeking to have the quota system declared unconstitutional and to get damages for restrictions on its production.

The federal Liberal government, then by interregnum on the company's side, prompting Premier Allan Blakeney to ask why such intervention didn't happen when the province had a Liberal government.

But such legal and political arguments may have been superseded by rapidly-rising world demand for fertilizer.

In the wake of sales to Japan ($140-$50 million), India ($25 million) and China ($8 million), the Saskatchewan government twice boosted the quotas.

In announcing the second boost, Mr. Thorson said the quotas will permit sales of 5.6 million tons during the 1973-74 accounting year.

"If total sales actually would mean that the Saskatchewan industry operated at nearly 68 per cent of total rated capacity during 1973-74."

Mr. Thorson said the only thing that could prevent sales totalling 5.6 million tons this year would be a shortage of rail cars to move the potash.

Similar optimistic forecasts came from Roger Hatch, president of Canpotex Ltd., the exporting company set up by Canadian potash producers.

"We operated at 52 per cent of capacity last year and this has been raised to 62 per cent this year. It may even go to 65 per cent. Industry is continuing to gear up as better prices become available."

World potash demand is rising by 1.8 million tons a year and U.S. and European capacity is running out, he said. That leaves Saskatchewan potash as the logical source of support for most of the new demand.

He looks in particular to China, whose recent purchase was twice what that country bought last year.

It appears that a main beneficiary of the changing situation will be Central Canada Potash. Mr. Thorson has announced that the quota system will be relaxed effective next July 1 to allow companies with extra markets to produce more than a basic amount set under the pro-rating formula.

Another announcement, however, was welcomed by no one in the industry. Mr. Thorson boosted the so-called "processing fee" to $1.20 a ton from 60 cents, a move that will give the government $10 million a year from the fee.

"Nobody likes increased taxes," said Bruce Hurdle, general manager of the Cominco Potash Co. Ltd. mine, which will have to pay an extra $400,000 a year because of the higher fee. "It just reduces profits and the industry is not all that profitable yet."

But Mr. Thorson emphasized the government's determination to see that the industry does not make excess profits and that the Saskatchewan people share in what profit increases there are.

To help achieve this, he also announced tough regulations requiring the companies to disclose more financial information than ever before so the provincial government may have a better idea of their profit picture.

And he said that no new mining or milling capacity will be permitted "until a sound plan for greater government participation has been implemented."

In a later interview, he said that does not necessarily mean the government will insist on partial ownership of new capacity, but such a course is a possibility.

Discussing another "possibility," he said the province could take over ownership of the potash itself.

The companies might then buy the potash from the government, digging it up themselves, or the companies might just be hired to mine it for the government.

If a potash marketing agency—provided for in a yet-unused 1972 legislation—were set up, it could take over the present system of production quotas and price guarantees, he said.

While the potash companies watch to see how much, if any, of their business the government takes over, they are also being urged to consider expansion or modernization.

In a September speech in Indonesia, Mr. Hatch said Saskatchewan plants are getting close to full capacity.

"Real Canadian operating capacity is not much higher than its current operating rate. The reason for this is quite simple.

"Some of the newer plants were never equipped to operate at a much higher level.

Documentary Explores Lives of Retarded

TORONTO (CP) — Severely retarded, 19-year-old Margaret, a star in a recent documentary film, lives in a world of self-absorption where corners are for hiding and her only diversion is a circle of wire which she waves before her nose.

But in the pottery and painting studio of film producer Marty Gross, she and two other youngsters display delight in discovering their surroundings before the cameras.

Titled As We Are, the 28-minute film presentation grew out of once-a-week trips to the studio by children undergoing therapy at the Mental Retardation Centre.

"We had this idea that being creative would be a therapy," the 25-year-old producer-artist explains. "When we saw how they reacted to the various art forms, I had to get their responses on film."

Financed by a $15,000 donation, the documentary was ready a year later for distribution to libraries, schools and universities. Film rights are held by Phoenix Films, New York.

The experience of teaching retarded youngsters is "not exactly different from teaching anybody art or pottery," Mr. Gross says. "But it's the intensity involved with such children, as we finally unwind them down to actually putting brush to paper. When you do that, you know anything is possible."

Characteristically, Margaret enters the studio and makes a bee-line for a dark corner. Then, over and over again, she turns away as the producer tries to persuade her to come out of hiding.

She hits out at him violently and he carries her to the end of the studio where a blank piece of paper is placed on the floor and she responds immediately by dropping to her knees and drawing with bold, quick strokes.

The artist then tears off a large sheet of paper and suggests that he "draw Margaret." She lies on her back and he draws around her figure.

It's then that Margaret steals the scene as she becomes so absorbed in what the artist is doing that there is a ray of light and a hope of comprehension

Workers Come Last

TORONTO (CP) — Stephen Lewis, leader of the New Democratic Party, charged Wednesday that although funds are available to pay the 596 workers laid off from Hall Lamp Co. near London, Ont., their needs will not be met.

He told the legislature a union representative was told the money will be required for other secured creditors and the workers' needs stem at the bottom of the list.

Hall Lamp Co. laid off its staff two weeks ago when the company went into receivership.

Mr. Lewis asked the government to amend its labor legislation so the workers would be first on the list.

Claude Bennett, industry and tourism minister, said he did not know of any discussions with union representatives about money.

Ontario Buys B.C. Coal

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario is buying 250,000 tons of coal from a British Columbia source, Energy Minister Darcy McKeough told the legislature Wednesday.

Later, an Ontario Hydro spokesman said 250,000 tons will be purchased from Alberta next year as Hydro tests the suitability of the low-sulphur product.

"The coal is of high heat content compared to most coals available and may be suitable for use in existing boilers," Mr. McKeough said.

"The 1974 delivery is to be used to check out the suitability of longer term purchases," he said. "A long-term contract will depend on the success of the test burns and the acceptability of the outcome of further negotiation."

The Hydro spokesman said Hydro was still discussing price with the British Columbia and Alberta sources.

Doors Locked After Alarm

TORONTO (CP) — The competence of the Ontario legislature's new security force was questioned Wednesday.

Albert Roy (L—Ottawa East) said security guards locked the doors Tuesday to the public galleries when a fire alarm siren sounded, keeping people in instead of letting them out.

The fire alarm proved to be false.

Solicitor-General John Yaremko said the security staff did under go training.

Mr. Yaremko said all the doors were not locked.

"The one door that was kept open was the press gallery door," he said.

Venezuelan Oil Policy to Change

NEW YORK (CP) — The oil picture in Venezuela, where maybe United States concessionholders pump out most of the oil is due for some drastic alterations under the new government of President-elect Carlos Andres Perez.

Nationalization and future production cuts cannot be ruled out.

Venezuelan oil is coming out of the earth at the rate of more than three million barrels a day, most of it for export to Canada and the United States.

But the once-rich oil fields are being depleted. Right now, Venezuelan crude is selling at a premium because of Arab production cuts and embargoes. The Venezuelans have collected billions of dollars in added revenue.

However, some Venezuelan officials fear they may be falling into a King Midas trap — gold now, starvation later.

Perez is one of them. He was the winner of last Sunday's general election. He is a member of the left-of-centre Democratic Action party.

Venezuela's oil reserves, which stood at 27.7 billion barrels in 1958, have fallen to 11.8 billion. Much of the remainder will be gone within 10 years.

Perez, elected to a five-year term, said shortly after his victory that he will use oil as a weapon to extract economic benefits for Venezuela from industrialized nations.

He gave some hint of what he had in mind in an interview before the election, published in Business Week magazine.

"We have to reach a new understanding with the United States. For many years, the developed countries dictated oil marketing conditions to us. Now we are in a position to negotiate."

Since Venezuela exports two-thirds of its oil to the U.S. and Canada, the inference is clear.

Perez said that he not only wants special treatment for Venezuelan exports, but he wants free access to U.S. patents and technology.

He also wants to form a common front with other Latin American nations that have scarce raw materials.

A world survey by currency expert Fraser Pick shows how poorly most of South America has been doing. Pick, in comparing per-capita gross national product of countries, lists Venezuela 20th.

Using the U.S. dollar as a basis of comparison — "devalued, floating paper, dollars," Pick calls them — Venezuela's per-capita GNP was $1,780 in 1972.

The U.S. leads with $5,533. Canada is fourth with $4,700.

Argentina tops Latin America with $1,720. Chile is second with $1,470 and Venezuela third. The rest of South America is trailing badly.

"The developed countries haven't fulfilled their obligations to help us progress economically," Perez told Business Week. "So our obligation to help them is limited."

Business Week says U.S. oil holdings in Venezuela appear headed for nationalization.

Poland Will Buy Canadian Grain

OTTAWA (CP) — Poland formally agreed Wednesday to buy between 27.5 million and 33.7 million bushels of Canadian grain despite gripes that the price wasn't right.

"It's not exactly with the greatest of pleasure that we sign this agreement," the Polish vice-minister of foreign trade, Wenceslav Winiarski, said with a grin as he signed the three-year agreement with Canadian Minister Otto Lang.

"But we're convinced our farmers that they have to have the grain irrespective of the very high prices you've been charging recently."

Financial arrangements were not disclosed, but sources said prices for the mixture of bread, durum wheat and feed wheat or barley could bring between $187.5 million and $253.5 million at the current going rates for internationally-sold grain.

Mr. Lang, minister responsible for the wheat board which negotiated the sale with Robinson, the Polish foreign trade company, agreed prices are high, but added that buyers always can be assured top quality when they buy Canadian grain.

Terms of the agreement call for 10 per cent cash at the beginning of each shipment

No Surprise to Him Seaway Too Small

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — Paul Normandeau, new president of the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority, said Wednesday a forecast by the United States Corps of Engineers that the seaway will be inadequate by 1980 comes as no surprise to him.

He said in an interview the authority has a seven-year-old plan for a super-lock system running from Lake Ontario to Thorold, Ont., and land along the proposed route was expropriated in 1966.

But he added that some revision to the plan is needed and the authority and its U.S. counterpart, the St. Lawrence Seaway Development Corp., already have held discussions.

The U.S. engineers have suggested that the Canadian and U.S. governments form a joint committee to examine the seaway's future needs so that work can be started by 1980 on changes needed.

"It seems that anything that can be done will have to be a joint effort," Mr. Normandeau said.

No UIC Bill Planned

OTTAWA (CP) — A bill designed to curb abuses of the unemployment insurance fund will not be resurrected, Manpower Minister Robert Andras reiterated Wednesday.

He told the Commons that the government stands by its recent decision to kill the bill.

Replying to John Fraser (PC—Vancouver South), Mr. Andras said Environment Minister Jack Davis told him he was incorrectly reported to have said the legislation will be reintroduced in the next parliamentary session.

The government withdrew the bill early last month after astonishing flutter-fingers to tighten unemployment insurance fund administration.

Mr. Andras said he will be glad to appear before a Commons committee to "dispel many of the myths being spread by many" about administration of the fund. But he would not want to spend time in the committee on one small aspect only.

Mr. Davis supposedly said in Vancouver last weekend that the government expects it will be defeated when it reintroduces the unemployment insurance bill in the next session.

He was reported to have said that the Conservatives probably would vote with the New Democrats to defeat the bill and the government, causing an election.

Fined

TORONTO (CP) — A graduate student and union sympathizer, Patrick Deutscher, was fined $300 and sentenced to 14 days in jail for common assault Wednesday in connection with incidents outside the Artistic Woodworking Co. plant during a three-month strike that ended last week.

Goose Bay Is Now Run By Transport Ministry

GOOSE BAY, Nfld. (CP) — "When you're involved with the military things can happen on a minute's notice," said R. B. (Bob) Goudey, gesturing with one arm towards the wide expanse of concrete ramp that stretched off towards the distant spruce trees.

The ramp forms part of the huge sub-Arctic air base that the ministry of transport took over last July and Mr. Goudey is its general manager.

"I mean, you can get a call at the office saying, 'Look we just landed 300 men and need transport, and accommodation—didn't you get our message?' Then you've got to get things moving."

But transport seems to be fitting comfortably into its role as den-mother for a crack airborne refueling unit of the United States Air Force Strategic Air Command as well as smaller military forces from Canada and the United Kingdom.

Prior to July, the major part of the base had been operated by the USAF. But rapidly-increasing costs forced the Americans to reconsider their commitment here. Now they are responsible only for their military role and operation of the base and ground support facilities has been turned over to the ministry.

So far, the major tenant, the Americans, seem pleased with the way things are operating.

We had a visit from the inspector-generals two months after we took over and Goose got excellent ratings," said Mr. Goudey.

Even the union representing the men was pleased with the transfer.

"There's been no real complaining," said Burton Justason, president of the Public Service Alliance of Canada local that represents the workers.

"I mean, let's face it . . . it's a lot better than being laid off."

The USAF, here since Goose Bay was built amidst a forest of spindly spruce trees in 1941 as a refueling stop for aircraft being ferried to Europe, told the Canadian government it could not afford to continue maintaining the base after its lease expired in 1972.

A three-year agreement was worked out between the two governments under which the USAF continued its military role, passing over control of the base and responsibility for ground support to the Canadian government.

Transfer of the base was made over a two-month period starting last May.

"In any change like this, there is a great deal of confusion and we have nothing but praise for the way the ministry is handling it," said Capt. James O'Rourke, USAF base information officer. "We knew the ministry was usually responsible for operating airports, but they had no experience running a city."

And Goose Bay, if not a city, is at least a good-sized town, with the ministry, at the moment, its council.

Besides operating the airport, transport provides all the electric power and water for Goose Bay. 1,100 furnished dwellings for military and government personnel transferred into the area, street maintenance, garbage collection, a bus system and a dry-cleaning plant.

It also operates, through a u b-contractors, restaurant facilities and quarters for travelling servicemen and government employees. The transient quarters includes the tallest building on the base, a six-storey concrete and aluminum building nicknamed "the Goose Hilton."

Up until July, the southern part of the base, by far the largest section, was operated by the Americans under a tight security system normally found at SAC bases around the world.

Now the only tightly restricted area is around the huge tankers to refuel USAF warplanes in the air.

Ministry officials say as far as they know this is the only place in the world were SAC operates from a base controlled by a foreign government.

Now, with winter rapidly closing on Labrador, the ministry has been preparing for an acid test of its operation—coping with the heavy snowfall, up to 20 inches recorded annually at Goose Base.

The base has a mind-boggling 30 acres of runway and ramp area which must be kept operational at all times under the agreement with the U.S. even though much of the area is not in use. And there are another 60 acres of parking lots and 10 miles of road to look after.

Ice is also a problem, covering 10-mile-long Lake Melville for six months of the year and preventing ships from reaching port with supplies.

The nationwide rail strike caused additional problems this year by delaying the movement of goods to east coast ports for shipment by sea to Goose Bay. But Mr. Goudey said he wasn't expecting any major shortages.

With the changeover, the ministry replaced the American cars as the largest employer in Goose Bay, with no authorized employment level of 761.

The USAF has 396 officers and men and about 325 civilians to operate its tanker fleet.

The Canadian Armed Forces has 210 military personnel and 76 civilians and is responsible for operating air traffic control facilities and a nearby Pinetree radar site.

A contingent of 75 men from the Royal Air Force also is based here, providing support for the delta-winged Victor and Vulcan bombers rotated through Goose Bay on training missions.

However, after 30 years of total dependence on the military, project manager Doug Willmer hopes that the economy of Goose Bay can be diversified.

Well-reviver

This solution might look like molasses but it moves faster than water when forced into the ground to revive dormant oil wells. Called Alfa - Frac, it was developed by the Borg - Warner Corp. research centre in Des Plaines, Ill. Pumped under high pressure, the fluid widens cracks in subterranean formations to aid the release of trapped oil deposits. (CP Photo)

Israel Today

Four Middle East wars over the past 25 years have given Israel nearly seven times the land area she controlled when she was born in May 1948. After 17 days of warfare in the latest conflict, Israel's forces hurled back the initial Arab advances and assumed a commanding position on both Egyptain and Syrain fronts. Map shows area controlled by Israel. (CP Newsmap)

Iran Tries to Be Friend Both to Arabs and to U.S.

BEIRUT (AP) — In the volatile Middle East, Iran is trying to be a good neighbor to the Arabs and a good friend of the United States, which supports Israel.

Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi appears more concerned about stability in the oil-rich Persian Gulf area than a solution to the Arab-Israeli question.

But he has used the fourth Middle East War to shore up relations with traditionally hostile Iraq and leftist Syria by supporting the Arab cause, although mildly.

At the same time, he has made it clear that he will not mix oil and politics.

Iran, a Moslem nation but not Arab, has refrained from joining Arab neighbors in oil embargoes and production cuts aimed at pressing Washington to end its support of Israel.

But neither has it tried to take advantage of them by boosting its own oil exports.

Iran is the second-biggest oil producer in the Middle East, ranking only behind Saudi Arabia.

Iranian oil reserves are estimated at 70 billion barrels. pumping facilities are carefully geared for maximum profit over a 30-year period to pay for industrialization and development programs that the shah hopes will provide al ernative sources of income when the oil is depleted.

"We couldn't boost production even if we wanted to," said one high government source, "and we don't want to."

Iran currently produces some 5.4 to 5.8 million barrels of oil a day earning roughly $3 billion a year. This will be increased to eight million barrels a day by 1976, by which time world demand will probably have raised the price of oil appreciably.

"In the first six months of 1973 Iran is estimated to have exported between 36 and 38 million barrels of oil to the United States. But the bulk of its oil goes to Western Europe and Japan.

Production is scheduled to remain at its peak until 1983, and then begin a gradual decline. By 1990, Iran is expected to have enough oil for its own needs without much left over for export.

To make sure that nothing interferes with this schedule, the shah stepped into the power vacuum left by the departing British, contracted for $2 billion worth of American military hardware and appointed himself policeman of the Persian Gulf.

The October war provided good opportunity for the shah to modify his Arab neighbors.

He accepted Iraq's offer to resume diplomatic relations, broken since 1971, to free Iraqi troops stationed on the Iranian border. This enabled the Baghdad government to send them to the Syrian front against Israel.

The shah added his voice to Arab demands for Israeli withdrawal from occupied territory and provided non-military support for the Arab war effort.

Syria, which had downgraded its diplomatic representation in Tehran to the charge d'affaires level in 1965, gratefully proposed an exchange of ambassadors. Again the shah accepted.

However, his country maintains close if informal relations with Israel.

Bridge

By Oswald and James Jacoby

Gardener's Sworn Sir Dandelion, the west player at King Arthur's court. "Sure, all I could do is remember that South has another club left. How could I be expected to know it was the deuce?"

The king had started badly for Sir Lancelot. The wily Mordred had led a spade and dummy's 10 had had to take the queen. A club return had lost to the queen of that suit. Another spade had been won by Dinadan's ace and a club by Mordred's ace. He led his last club to Lancelot's king.

Lancelot, the best knight and bridge player, had lost four tricks and needed the rest. He could get them legitimately if the queen of hearts would drop doubleton but that wasn't likely.

The peerless one had also noted a possible setback at the very start of play and had prepared for it by playing the four, five and six of clubs from dummy and keeping that tiny three spot.

Lancelot cashed dummy's ace and king of hearts and king of spades. Then he played out the diamonds to stop in dummy. Now he led dummy's three of clubs. Dinadan was down to a high heart and a high spade. The three of clubs was led from dummy. Dinadan was sure that Lancelot would win the trick so he chucked his good spade and let dummy's six of spades win the last trick.

Normal Bulk OK In Diverticulosis

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have diverticulosis and have been told not to eat fresh fruits and vegetables; also that corn bread and wheat germ were not permitted. I would like your comment on wheat germ and corn bread, and also on lettuce and tomato salad which has always been a main part of my meals.

I had an operation for hemorrhoids six months ago and for elimination I have to take bulk medication twice daily and eat spinach every day.—Mrs. S.L.A.

There are two points here that I think should be made clear. First, who told you what you couldn't eat—your doctor or someone else's? Second, it is important to make the distinction between diverticulosis and diverticulitis, which could have a bearing on what you eat.

Diverticulosis merely means the presence of small pouches in the intestinal wall. These very often cause no trouble at all.

Diverticulitis (note the last four letters) means that the pouches have become irritated and inflamed.

There was a time, some years ago, when it was taken for granted that a bland, low-residue diet was the correct thing for either condition. Experience has shown that this was not the right answer. A normal amount of bulk is preferable with diverticulosis, as well as being necessary for good elimination.

Foods with seeds, as well as a few others, are irritating items. All should be avoided, but for most patients, fruits and vegetables, which of course supply bulk, are perfectly all right.

Hence I see no reason to avoid corn bread, wheat germ, lettuce or tomatoes.

There is, however, this one exception: in an acute spell of diverticulitis, you may have to resort to a low-residue diet temporarily until the inflammation has subsided. But that is not the same as saying you must follow the same diet after the acute phase has passed.

As to your spinach every day—it provides bulk, but I don't see why you need it every day.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Ever since we've been married (11 years) I have always left the butter out even in warm weather so it would be spreadable for sandwiches, toast, etc. As far as we know, we have never had an illness from this.

My mother-in-law feels this is dangerous due to the chance of bacteria getting started. Do you feel it is necessary to keep butter refrigerated?—Mrs. E.M.K.

Leave butter out long enough and it will become rancid, but that is a matter of flavor, not health. Evidently you use the butter fast enough so it does not have time to spoil. Lots of people serve the butter out for the same reason you do, with no problems.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 73 and have several things wrong, such as heart trouble, diabetes and high blood pressure. My left arm and side of my face are numb, and I have a burning feeling all the time. What causes this? Is there such a thing as diabetic neuritis?—R.H.

That's a question I can't answer because so many things can cause that kind of trouble. Yes, there certainly is such a thing as diabetic neuritis, but you'll have to let your doctor decide whether that is your trouble.

Note to E.S.V.: No smoking and limited "stop growth of the breasts" except to the extent that you consume it cuts the appetite and slows weight gain.

THAT FOUR LETTER WORD

HOME — means everything to the happy family. To have its fullest meaning it must be your own. There is no better interested accommodation. Let us show you one of our models now nearing completion on Dunnet Boulevard. This house with attached carport has L-shaped living dining room, large kitchen with ample eating area for average family and 3 bedrooms. Basement divided for future rec room.

A BAD FOUR LETTER WORD

MOVE — can you tell when circumstances on the part of your landlord will force him to utter this ominous word? When it happens it's not much fun. Preclude this happening with a home of your own. Why should your children have their school life disrupted because your landlord can no longer look after your accommodation. For their sake have the foresight to own your own. For as little as $1,500.00 down we can offer a 3 bedroom townhouse accommodation that is to your very own. We have a model suite to show you.

THE BEST FOUR LETTER WORD

GURS — not only is it pleasing to the ear but it is pleasing to the pocket book. Once your payments are met they fluctuate very very little for the term of the mortgage, not so with rent! It continues to climb and what is worse it is never a penny for your family to look to in the years ahead. There is no way to accumulate money quicker than in owning a house. We have a model in West Belleville the plan of which we built last year in the east end and has recently resold with a $13,000.00 profit. Who is to say it won't happen again. Ask to see our many houses in all parts of the city.

IN MEMORIAM

DRIVER — In ever loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather, Thomas, who passed away December 13, 1969.
There's a place in the heaven that's reserved,
For a family that's devoted and true.
Who lived lifelong devotion to him and God above.
And there's a place in our hearts that's filled with love.
Where his dear memory dwells
And we revel on to the loved before.
—Lovingly remembered by wife Bessie and family.

BROWN — In loving memory of a dear wife and mother who passed away on Dec. 13, 1971.
The garden of sorrow we cannot shut out,
But the hour of one we loved so well,
And while she sleeps in peaceful rest,
Her memory we shall always keep,
—Lovingly remembered by husband Ernest, daughter Ruth and family.

CLEMENT — In loving memory of a dear husband, Ivan, who passed away December 13, 1969.
Sadly missed by his wife Ivy (Revell),
So many memories we have of you,
So many things you used to do,
No wonder why you had to die,
God needed another in the angel choir.
—Sadly missed by sisters Joyce and Ann.

CRONKRIGHT — In ever loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather, Mac, who passed away Dec. 13, 1971.
We used to say it, the day light,
Is late we loved the sun's last.
—Sadly missed by wife Clara and family.

CRONKRIGHT — In memory of our son Charles Malcolm (Mac) who passed away in the 13th day, Dec. 13, 1962.
Look him home, it was His will
But in our hearts we love him still.
His memory is as dear today,
As in the hour he passed away.
Even from His sad sleeping bed,
We were all asked,
To kneel and pray for our friend.
That grief can call its own.
—Sadly missed by mother by Son, Barb and family.

Teachers' Bill Stalled

Legislature March Planned by 30,000

TORONTO (CP) — Legislation aimed at staving off resignations of almost 4,000 Ontario teachers remains stalled in second reading today with teachers preparing for a massive march on the legislature building Tuesday.

Although New Democratic Leader Stephen Lewis denied his party is trying to stage a filibuster, there seemed little likelihood that Bill 274 will become law before Tuesday when Ontario's five teacher federations hope to force closure of the province's schools and hold a march of at least 30,000 teachers.

The teachers plan to march to the lawn of Queen's Park to protest the bill.

And the Toronto Teachers Federation, representing 3,000 elementary teachers in the city, is asking parents to keep children out of school that day.

Federation members are voting by secret ballot today on a 17-point campaign of opposition to both the government's emergency bill and a second one on permanent rules outlawing mass resignations as a bargaining tool and imposition of compulsory arbitration.

Both opposition parties have labelled the legislation totalitarian and a threat to civil liberties. They have accused the government of over-reacting and using scare tactics.

The legislation would prevent the threatened mass resignations by teachers next month and impose compulsory arbitration if contract disputes with teachers in 16 school areas are not settled.

Geoff Wilkinson, president of the Ontario Teachers Federation (OTF), said it is "virtually certain" the Tuesday walkout will close most schools in the province.

While the 135,000-member OTF is not calling officially for a walkout, Mr. Wilkinson said executives of four teacher federations that belong to the OTF have announced their 88,000 member teachers will boycott classes.

The Toronto board of education unanimously opposed the provincial bill Thursday because of its "labor and educational implications."

The board also decided not to impose penalties on teachers or students who were absent on Tuesday.

Daniel Leckie, a Toronto board of trustee, termed the legislation "a dangerous, dangerous threat to the ability of employees to bind together and try to come up with collective bargaining."

Mr. Wilkinson said he believes most teacher groups will decide to participate in the walkout, the first such action in Ontario history.

Spokesmen for the Federation of Women Teachers Associations of Ontario, the Ontario Secondary School Teachers Federation, the Ontario English Catholic Teachers Association and the Association of Franco-Ontarian Teachers all have indicated they will go ahead with the Tuesday walkout.

The teachers also have gained the support of the Ontario Medical Association, representing 12,000 doctors in the province, and the Civil Service Association of Ontario, representing about 80,000 public servants.

Wednesday, the Canadian Labor Congress and the Ontario Federation of Labor issued statements denouncing the government move and backing the teachers.

Congress President David Archer said Thursday his organization was prepared to offer all its facilities to the teachers, although it has not yet been asked to do so.

"We'll assist in providing expertise, preparing briefs, making presentations, demonstrations—anything they ask. We'll fulfil any reasonable request."

Bruce Marlin, executive secretary of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, said his union would also back the teachers.

"Denying teachers the right to strike makes them slaves," he said.

The Ontario Federation of Students, also expressed cautious support for the teachers.

"Instead of saying we support the teachers, let's say we're critical of the government," said Paul Axelrod, a member of the federation's executive.

Thursday afternoon, two government backbenchers, both teachers, defended the legislation before some 50 of their peers in the public gallery.

John Smith (PC—Hamilton Mountain) said the telegrams and petitions that opposition members say they have received from irate teachers and their supporters, were from special interest groups. He added the government had to consider the needs of society as a whole.

He warned the teachers not to get caught in a political struggle by people who would use them to their own political ends.

Dennis Timbrell (PC—Toronto Don Mills) said the teachers were overreacting and it was necessary to consider schools as an essential public service.

At Thursday's evening sitting, James Renwick (NDP—Toronto Riverdale) quoted constitutional law books and charged the penalty clause of the legislation was a move into criminal law, a field over which the province has no jurisdiction.

Meanwhile, the government contends the bill is "emergency" legislation aimed at keeping children in school.

"We are saying the traditional use of mass resignations is not appropriate," said Premier Davis.

"I personally do not enthuse over what we are doing from the standpoint of my own personal relationship with the teachers over the years but while this legislation is not pleasant for us, we intend to proceed with it."

Britons Face Hardest Christmas Since War

LONDON (CP) — The announcement of enforced part-time unemployment has hit Britons hard, but that's only half of a cheerless Christmas package from the government.

The second blow comes Monday in a mini-budget bound to mean further belt-tightening.

"We shall have a harder Christmas than we have known since the war," Prime Minister Heath said in a television address Thursday night. "Jobs will be in danger and take-home pay will fall."

Blaming principally the overtime ban by coal miners, Heath said the current energy crisis means a three-day work week for most industry and business in the New Year, a 10:30 p.m. daily cutoff of all British television and a one-warm-room policy for homes heated by electricity.

It also means an end to his government's cherished economic growth plans.

Meanwhile, Treasury Chief Anthony Barber was working on budget announcements for Monday which observers anticipated will mean stiff tax measures, a clampdown on credit buying to help discourage imports of luxury goods and a general paring of government spending.

Heath's announcement came a few hours after the government announced that October-November trade figures were the worst in British history and while the country grumbled over a trainmen's dispute that left rail services chaotic,

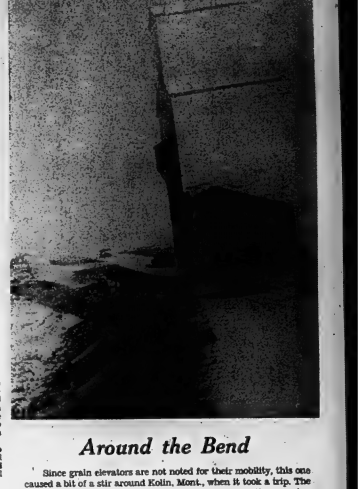
LeDain Wants Addicts Treated

OTTAWA (CP) — A proposal for a police roundup of suspected hard-drug addicts to be followed by their semi-compulsory treatment, highlight the final report of the Le Dain illegal drug inquiry.

Police officers should be empowered to bring suspected hard-drug addicts to court for a medical examination order, says the royal commission inquiry into the non-medical use of drugs, tabled today in the Commons.

Recommendations include Methadone treatment should be expanded and available to all heroin addicts.

Heroin should be administered as last-resort therapy to addicts who do not respond to methadone treatment.



Tobacco and alcohol are still the most serious drug abuse problems.

Possession offences for cannabis—marijuana and hashish—should be removed from the Criminal Code and treated with more leniency.

Tighter advertising controls are needed on tobacco, alcohol and patent drugs.

Non-medical drugs should be divided into classes according to the relative seriousness of trafficking in them.

Around the Bend

Since grain elevators are not noted for their mobility, this one caused a bit of a stir around Kolin, Mont., when it took a trip. The 60-year-old elevator outlived its usefulness, but rather than consign it to the usual fate of obsolete equipment, its owners decided to recycle it by moving it some 21 miles away to Moore, where it would be incorporated into a fertilizer plant they were building. Ehrlichman and two former White House aides, David Young and Gordon Liddy, have been charged fith organizing a break-in at the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist in September, 1970, to get files on Ellsberg. Snow Slows Traffic

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Two to five inches of snow fell across southern Ontario closing some airports, slowing highway traffic and causing scores of minor accidents Thursday.

Weather office warnings of flooding in low-lying shoreline areas of Lake Erie near Windsor proved unfounded. But residents of Pelee Island planned a flood watch during the night, said Reeve Bill Bartja.

Senators Alter Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — The Senate's decision to send controversial wiretap legislation back to the Commons minus a hotly-contested opposition amendment already accepted by MPs could be the start of a no-joe procedural wrangle.

The Senate voted Thursday to return the bill to the Commons after deleting a clause requiring police to tell subjects of a tap about the bugging. This notification would have to be given within 90 days of removal of the eavesdropping device.

That clause had been pushed through the Commons by a united opposition against the wishes of the Liberals and Justice Minister Otto Lang.

Stuart Leggatt (NDP—New Westminster), who had helped force passage of the amendment vowed Thursday to fight the Senate's action.

Relief Just Beginning For Starving Ethiopians

URGESSA, Ethiopia (AP) — In the aftermath of drought, Innanu Allayu squats in a dirty hut, nursing her three-year-old son. His hair is falling out, his abdomen and limbs are swollen his body is damaged by protein deficiency.

Innanu's husband died two months ago of smallpox.

"It is the will of Allah," she says.

Four years of drought have killed more than 100,000 persons other large areas of five of Ethiopia's 14 provinces.

Thousands died of hunger. Cholera, smallpox, malaria, typhus and typhoid fever claimed the weak, such as Innanu's husband.

While torrents of rain came at last in August, some persons living in town gutters drowned because they were too tired to raise their heads out of the water.

Relief workers estimate the drought has affected up to two million of the 13.5 million inhabitants of Wollo, Tigre, Shoa, Harrarge and Gamu Gofa provinces.

Relief efforts are just beginning in these remote areas, although thousands of lives have been saved in emergency centres set up near towns.

Foreign relief workers report hundreds are dying because food and medicine cannot reach distant settlements.

Peasants now are harvesting a partial crop made possible by the August rain, but authorities say a new wave of starvation could develop early next year when the harvest runs out.

This Santa Business Is Either a Bore or a Bloody Chore!

Before Christmas in West Milford, N.J., suddenly little boys grow very, very polite. But if you're a 450-pound lion named Nemo living at Warner Bros. Jungle Habitat, you don't have to be polite to anybody. And, all those humans rushing around because of a jolly old man in a white beard and red suit? B-A-A-H ! said Nemo. Out in Edmonton, Alta., Santa faced a different reception, curiosity rather than boredom. Two-year-old Roberto Antonello overcame his awe of Santa Claus long enough to tug the beard of the jolly old man while David Clements, 3, was placing his bid for Christmas goodies. Santa's stand-in in this case was Ernie Ledger of Edmonton. — (AP and CP Photos)

Eager Beavers

Professional Sought For UCS Top Position

Search for a replacement for executive director Isidore Goldgerman, has been reinvigorated as a result of a motion passed unanimously by United Community Services directors Thursday.

Firm supporter of the need for a paid professional staff member, Virginia O'Rourke, social planning chairman, moved the activities of the personnel committee be restarted.

"If we can't hire someone within the next month, she said in support of her motion. "I'm seriously questioning the stability of this organization. In my estimation, we can't wait another year."

Until the time the committee can start interviewing candidates, two persons seemed acceptable for the position the board had refinfined as that of an administrator.

Since the personnel committee, under chairman Marlin Hendrikx, suspended all operation in October, several additional resignations have been received.

PETTON —The Picton detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police this week is investigating a break-in and theft at Pinecrest Memorial School, Bloomfield.

Former chairman of the board, Mr. Robb submitted his letter that pressures at work have restricted the amount of time he has available. He is working with the transfer of Canada General Leasing Ltd. operations from Point Anne to the company's new plant at Bath.

Duties Expanded

Land use planning will be an added duty for the Forestry Advisory Committee of the Moira River Conservation Authority.

This was decided at the final 1973 meeting of the authority held at Canniffon last week.

Chairman Guy Hughes noted that the work of the forestry advisor committee was becoming involved as the result of rapidly increasing land values and suggested it be joined to some other committee possibly fish and wild life.

But Stu Meek, of Belleville's two representatives on the authority, said that with increased leisure time, the work of the fish and wild life committee could become more important in future years.

The decision was to retain the present six committees — conservation areas, forestry, pollution control, water control, and information and education — but to add the function of land use to the forestry committee.

Forestry advisory committee chairman Ken Spry reported that the authority now owned 17,163 acres of reforestation properties and a total of 2,538.00 trees planted.

Belleville Alderman Mrs. Jean Smith, chairman of the Quinte area waste management committee spoke briefly, noting that with the increasing shortage of paper, waste paper pickups would become a part of everyone's future.

She estimated that up to 18,000 tons of waste paper could be collected in Hasting county.

However, she said the main problem was to get people involved.

Mrs. Smith suggested that women's groups throughout the county take waste paper pickups as one of their projects.

Silver Collected

Belleville police are looking for a thief with a fist full of quarters, dimes and nickles.

Police chief Douglas Crosbie reports that his department was called out to investigate a break-in at an apartment at 23 King George Square Tuesday night.

Thieves apparently forced their way into an apartment by prying open a door. They took more than $100 worth of nickles, dimes and quarters during the day and were reported to police around 6.15 p.m.

Trenton Building Doubled

TRENTON — Over the past 11 months Trenton has been experiencing building boom — more than doubling the amount of building permits issued over the previous year.

Norm Mallory, building inspector, told The Intelligencer today building permits in excess of $3 million have been issued since last January.

He described the upsurge "well balanced development" and said that no one area grew out of proportion with the others.

He said due to mild weather into November, Trenton experienced an elongated building season, but now with the snow a steep dropoff is expected. Building will pick up again early in the spring.

December he said will be quite slow, "there is nothing going on right now."

Heavy areas of development over the past year include housing and institutional and industrial renovations and additions.

He said the fast shrinking land in Trenton would soon have a strong effect on building. Not so concerned with industrial land, he said "it is almost impossible to buy a couple of lots in the town now.

Museum Proving Popular

That the new Hastings county museum at Glanmore House in Belleville is proving its worth was further indicated by curator Marten Lewis in an address to Belleville Rotary Club on Monday.

In addition to standing exhibits, there have been 11 different displays since the museum's opening in July and Mr. Lewis said 20 more have been lined up for 1974.

Other initiatives include application for an LIP grant to set up an exhibition circuit in centres throughout the county — "to exhibit the county to itself," as Mr. Lewis put it, which it is hoped will lead to these communities making up their own displays.

Application to the Canada Council for funds to publish a catalogue of the museum's lighting collection, one of the best in North America, has been made.

A series of programs on Quinte Heritage for Cobleview television which will commence soon has been started.

Outlining the museum's development, Mr. Lewis mentioned that the former private home, with its 13-ft.-high ceilings has been declared a national heritage site in the manner as those at Louisburg, Nova Scotia, the Alexander Graham Bell home, and the Woodside Heritage Park near Kitchener.

There have been more than 5,000 visitors from all over the world since its opening in July.

Ted Snider, Gifted Leader

Sold Out Concert Delights Audience

TRENTON — Christmas came just a little bit closer last night for a packed house at Trenton High, School, listening to the sounds of the Trenton Citizens Band.

Everything from Dixie to Sep Along With Santa Claus was included in the two-and-a-half-hour program that has become a Trenton Christmas tradition over the past nine years.

Despite the worst driving conditions of the season, it was a sellout performance as it has been over its entire his ory.

Highlights of selections were Tritsch-tratsch Polka by Strauss, accompanied by a silent movie made in Trenton in the early 1940s. Bands Around the World, Merry Bells of Christmas, Highlights of Oliver, Dixieland Jamboree and the finale, Bay State March.

A couple of unscheduled events were Ted Snider, bandmaster, being presented with a suva suit to help out with his fitness training, and Flutist Bruce Glendenning cringing at centre stage with his baby finger trapped inside his instrument.

The finger was retrieved and, with tongue in cheek, Bruce returned to his chair.

Special guests of the evening were the Trentones, the Trent Chapter of Barbershop singers. Under the direction of Ray Williams, they drew ovations from the crowd bringing back memories singing Row, Row, Row and I Feel A Song Coming On. The group will present its own night later in May.

While the band and singers performed flawlessly, the loudest applause was still to come for the dozens of small children who took turns in leading the orchestra. No audience has ever heard Jingle Bells done in such a variety of tempos and rhythms.

Topping the night off was carol singing — making Christmas a little closer for the hundreds of parents and children last night.

Lakeshore House May Be Sandbanks Hub

PICTON — Lakeshore House, Prince Edward's magical centre of the Cay Nineties, and a 600-acre adjoining land parcel are being studied by regional and district park planners as potential tourist attractions.

Built at the Sandbanks, Lakeshore House is a three-storey white frame summer resort mansion. Almost a century ago it was the playground of a horse and buggy set that enjoyed its tennis courts, billiards room, ice cream parlor and merry-go-round. Regatas and horse races also were part of the action-filled weekends near the dunes.

To provide "a setting for the Lakeshore House, the Ministry of Natural Resources has acquired a 600-acre land parcel between two of the county's sandbar natural environmental parks, Outlet Beach and Sandbanks.

The purchase includes a century-old farm complex with orchard, sugar shanty and productive sugar bush.

This new property will join the two provincial parks and offer a site to relocate and expand nearby park campsite grounds.

It has been noted that since 1966 camping visitors have increased 75 per cent and day users of the beaches have rocketed 300 per cent.

Although no solid plans now exist for development of he land parcel, It has been suggested that the century-old farm could become a working model of agriculture in Ontario and Prince Edward in years ahead.

It is anticipated that an operative sugar bush would attract visi ors to the county during the winter and spring months.

Lakeshore House possibly could become an interpretive and administrative centre for the whole area with rooms for displays on the wildlife vegetation and geology of Prince Edward.

The parks interpretive staff could put visi ors in touch with the costumes, fashions and furniture from the days of the United Empire Loyalists, and the Quakers.

Park planners now are studying development possibilities and awaiting a report from an architectural historian from Ontario's parks branch.

One of the most important features of the new park's purchase is the safeguarding of the Sandbanks by relocation of the campgrounds.

It has been observed that the increasing tourist traffic in the area of the dunes near the beaches is threatening the sand formations, especially in the existing camping area.

By relocating the campgrounds, traffic will be reduced and the unique, wind-sculpted sand formations and their vegetation preserved.

Teachers Offered Special Courses

"A new venture in professional development" will begin after Christmas for Hastings county teachers.

It is a series for short courses, held in the evening, in seven subjects. Six will be taught by professors from the faculty of education at Queen's University. The seventh, on the social side of schools and called a Your Classroom a Group or a Collection? will be given by Linda Seppanen, a psychologist with the board.

Maximum enrolment in each course is about 25 and cost to each participant ranges from $5 to $20, with most courses costing $40. The fees will be paid by the participants, or a school may sponsor or subsidize a teacher to attend by using funds allocated for professional development. The courses will be given at no cost to the board. Each course will comprise about 20 hours instruction.

One of the courses will be a clinical study of time utilization for educational administrators. It will be given in Belleville and will be open to principals, vice-principals, department heads and superintendents.

Another course, for intermediate science teachers, will emphasize pupil involvement and will be held in Madoc.

Guidance counsellors will be eligible to attend a course on counselling for personal problems, to be held in Belleville.

The sessions on curriculum planning will be given in Stirling and will be open to teachers and administrators.

Math teachers will be offered a course in Bancroft during February and March.

Teachers of history in the intermediate (grade 6 through 10) will be offered some guidance in Canadian studies, a subject declared compulsory recently by the minister of education. Theme of the workshop designed by Queen's faculty is: "Canada's survival will be decided in the schools. If our students find our programs revelant and become convinced that Canada's cultural identity is worth saving, then the future will take care of itself." The course will be 12 hours long and will be held in Belleville.

Pups Are Eager To Join Yule Fun

Looking at you with those big brown eyes that sparkle with mischief and fun, they seem to promise you they will be good and will guarantee your children hours of laughter and companionship.

The Ontario Humane Society has a good thing going for them. Their animal shelter at the corner of West Moira and Avenlough, at present, houses 40 of the world's most perfect Christmas gifts.

Wagging their tails and jumping up to peer out of their kennels at all who pass by, the pups have a winning way about them that makes it virtually impossible for anyone to visit the shelter and come away without a new pet.

Harry Brown, one of the regional officers attached to the Belleville branch of the Humane Society, says that the Society's charges always prove to be a popular Christmas gift with area residents.

In the last few days before Christmas people who always wanted a dog for themselves, will visit the kennels and bring their child a small bundle of fur that, unlike most Christmas gifts, won't be worn out by New Year's.

Standard fees for the animals available at the shelter range from $8 for young puppies to $10 and $12 for adult males and females. A short haired kitten costs a mere $2, while a long-haired feline costs $3.

The Humane Society also traffics in a strange assortment of pets such as guinea pigs and rabbi's, but that is another story in itself and is dependent upon fluctuations in the adult animal populations at the shelter. With rabbits, however, you never can tell just how many gifts they will produce in time for Christmas.

Unruly Spectacle

The situation with the teachers and provincial government in confrontation affords little comfort where the conduct of each is concerned.

Consider these extracts from reports of the teacher invasion of Queen's Park: "An uncontrollable uproar over emergency legislation to avert a threatened strike by teachers shut the Ontario legislature for 30 minutes. . . 'I think members have earned the reputation for giving the legislature a reputation as the most unruly in Canada': Speaker Allan Reuter. . . Students from two secondary schools in Toronto watched wide-eyed from the public galleries as the three parties lauchod into the daily question period."

On the teachers side: "The teachers who surged into the Ontario legislature building would have made an unruly class . . . they yelled insults at Education Minister Thomas Wells and Premier Davis, applauded the opposition parties loudly from the public galleries, and one of them apparently pulled a fire alarm which . . . brought firemen rushing to Queen's Park . . . 'You know, they're just like a bunch of kids,' one elderly lady (not a teacher) grumbled loudly. 'You'd think they'd never been to school themselves.'"

The expressions on their faces in pictures tells some of the story, and Mr. Wells has a heated look on his face too.

So the government wants to ban teachers' strikes, in the interests of the students. The teachers are up in arms over this action, and shunt spending ceilings.

That is the issue in brief, but it is not going to be resolved, and democracy is not going to be served as it should, by the spectacle of chaos at and now, members of the legislature, behaving like . . . well as the elderly lady said, "like kids."

PM's Letter

Sir Mackenzie Bowell student Sherri Ackerman doubtless is the envy of her fellow pupils. She received a personal reply from Prime Minister Trudeau to her letter on the oil shortage and high prices.

The Prime Minister does have an eye to the young of Canada and this is all to the good, but we trust he will try and give as much attention to all age groups, the pensioners included, for there is many a voice raised in this country, by personal letter to the government or newspapers, regarding problems of one kind or another affecting this or that individual or group.

As for the Prime Minister's letter, while it is indicative of his personal concern it is also somewhat of a "know-it-all" in that it does not answer Miss Ackerman's questions completely. She begins by saying: "I'm writing to you about the oil shortage and high prices. . ." Mr. Trudeau, in his reply alluded to far the most part to prices (inflation) and food, with not a mention of oil.

This may indicate, if not inattention, then the pressures of the daily political grind which could give rise to such an apparent lapse.

Fuel for Maneuvers

Some searching questions are being asked about a sizeable Canadian naval force which has been sent on maneuvers to Bermuda. Was their journey really necessary? Large quantities of fuel are involved in such a mission which, given the destination, in this case, has all the hallmarks of a pleasure cruise.

Another interesting sidelight of the fuel situation is the revival it is bringing in train travel. There is talk of President Nixon taking the train, instead of going by air, when he heads south to Key Biscayne. But this is dependent on whether the president's communication system can be duplicated in the train. Certainly it will take longer by train.

In fuel-hungry Holland meanwhile, the word from Amsterdam is that the city is obtaining six per cent of its energy needs from the processing of garbage.

Once again man's ingenuity is coming to the rescue.

Mr. Trudeau's Reply to Belleville Student

Inflationary Pressures Are Global Says Prime Minister

Recently Prime Minister Trudeau received a letter from Sherri Ackerman, a student at Sir Mackenzie Bowell school in Belleville.

Problems affecting all of us were dealt with in Sherri's mind and the following, in summary, is the text of her letter, along with Mr. Trudeau's personal reply.

Mr. Trudeau:

I'm writing to you about the oil shortage and high prices. Since you have a lot of money im sure you can afford the prices but some people can't. I'm only 13 but I suggest you do something about it.

As for oil, a lot of children that don't deserve it will go cold this winter if something isn't done soon. Really I don't have all the facts so I'm writing this letter hoping you'll write back and explain what is going on.

Yours Truly,
SHERRI ACKERMAN

The Prime Minister answered as follows:

Dear Sherri:

Thank you for your recent letter. I appreciated receiving your comments on inflation.

I share your concern about inflation. It is a problem which we have been tackling since we have been in office. It is a worldwide phenomenon which unfortunately, one government alone cannot control.

The fact that Canada relies so much on international trade means that we are affected by inflationary pressures not necessarily our own. This year we have seen a drastic reduction in the world supply of protein due to floods, droughts, and the loss, by other nations of traditional fishing grounds. There is also increasing demand for meat by societies which are becoming more affluent and which are now able to compete with us for our traditional supplies.

We cannot isolate ourselves from the international economic community. However, this government can and will protect Canadians from artificial pressures arising from outside our borders. There is no shortage of food in Canada and we will not allow one to develop.

Earlier this year, export controls were placed on protein feed and meal in order to ensure adequate supplies for Canadian requirements. Similarly the prices of beef and pork products was temporarily controlled since the shortage of these products in the United States has caused an unaccustomed rise on our own supplies.

In January, we decided that a special Commons Committee was needed to study all aspects of the food industry. Acting on the recommendation of that Committee, we set up the Food Prices Review Board under the chairmanship of Mrs. Beryl Plumptre. The Board now is functioning and is reviewing decisions taken by the government on August 13, to investigate and expose unwarranted price increases and I assure you that this government will not hesitate to seek Parliamentary authority to undertake action if abuses are not corrected.

I realize that increases in the cost of living are particularly difficult for those people living on low or fixed incomes; and for those with the additional responsibility of a family. For this reason, we have proposed or instituted several measures to alleviate the situation.

- a 5 per cent personal income tax reduction
- an increased tax exemption up to $1,500
- an increase in the Old Age Pension by almost 20 per cent to $100 per month, with a further boost in October to $105.20 to fully reflect the rise in the cost of living.
- increases in Veterans' Allowances
- a guaranteed minimum income for senior citizens of $170 per month; this monthly minimum will be raised to $178 in October.
- proposed changes in Old Age pension benefits allowing for escalation of payments quarterly rather than annually, and a removal of the 2 per cent limitation in the escalation clause for the Canada Pension Plan to fully reflect increases in the cost of living.
- proposed a Family Allowance scheme, which would provide $20 per month per child

In addition to the above measures, announced in Parliament on September 4 that the government was taking several additional steps to deal with the problem of inflation. These include:

- an increase from $1.00 to $1.75 per bushel in the subsidy paid to producers for wheat consumed by Canadians; this will permit an increase in the price of bread which otherwise would have been inescapable in October
- a subsidy on milk of 5 cents per quart, to be paid to provincial milk marketing boards which agree to maintain or reduce the price of milk for at least one year.
- beginning in October, an increase in Family and Youth Allowances to $12 per month, until January 1974 when the new plan takes effect
- removal of the 2 per cent limitation in the escalation clause for pensions paid to retired Government of Canada employees, and amendments to the Income Tax Act which will allow for similar increases in private pension plans
- several steps to protect Canadians from the worldwide increase in the price of petroleum, including a request to the oil industry to refrain from further price increases to Canadians before January 30 1974.

The full text of my September 4 statement is enclosed for your interest.

We are determined to contain inflation. It is a continuing concern of every government. While our economy is buoyant and expanding at a healthy rate, we will not hesitate to take even more vigorous action if Canadians are unable to protect themselves against rising costs

I appreciated hearing from you, Sherri. When dealing with a problem like inflation, it is important to hear how individuals are affected and for this reason I thank you for taking the time to write to me.

Sincerely,
P.E. TRUDEAU

Energy Shortage The Latest

Crisis Situations Are Becoming Familiar

By JOHN D. BARRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomas News Service

The nuclear crisis which consumed us in the 1950s now is two crises behind, having been "overtaken" by the environmental crisis and now by the energy crisis.

The other day President Nixon said America should start on a second oil pipeline across Alaska, and that within days after signing into law a bill permitting the construction of the first Alaska pipeline.

The Arctic, which Americans heard about a decade ago because of the underwater exploits of U.S. Navy nuclear submarines navigating for days under northern ice, is forgotten in the scramble to stay warm and mobile this winter.

Forgotten perhaps by the man in the street, but not by the Pentagon nor by the NATO experts getting ready to meet again in Europe.

The nuclear deterrent is not only very much there. It is good to make more of its insatiable demands in terms of cost of the hardware to support it, which infuriated the now dispirited anti-war community of the early 1960s.

There is no de-escalation of any major weaponry by the U.S.S.R. even though she, like us, has passed through the environmental protection phase and is only now beginning to suffer from the growing global energy crisis.

The new generation of military hardware (with the life of previous "generations" becoming shorter all the time), includes the Trident class of U.S. Navy nuclear subs at $1 billion each. (Note: The first Polaris nuclear submarines completed in the late 1950s cost about $50 million each).

Other new weapons (only for the U.S. armory) include the B-1 bomber, a $42 million replacement for what has become the workhorse B-52 bomber, the same which bombed Cambodia into near oblivion and Vietnam almost to the same stage, for a mere $5 million per new B-52.

The Pentagon, now under James Schlesinger, the troubleshooting ex-Lenpser who cleaned up the Atomic Energy Commission and the Central Intelligence Agency before taking over as U.S. defence secretary, is "worried" about the reduction in size of the U.S. armed forces in the post-Vietnam era.

Schlesinger stems from the fact the U.S. military establishment now is reduced, that by his word, to the size it was before the 1964-66 escalation by the late President Johnson. Some reduction. The navy now is "only" 535 ships compared to 976 a couple of years ago. The tactical air force is down from 149 squadrons to 96.

In this "reduced" military there is more than enough firepower to obliterate much of an enemy's fighting or survival capacity, for which read the Soviet Union and her Eastern European satellites.

With the super-nuclear submarine Trident still to come, the existing fleets of about 100 Polaris and Poseidon nuclear missile-carrying nuclear subs have enough missiles to wipe out Russia, and from a range of 3,000 miles out at sea.

Those nuclear subs, plus the complex fighter warhead delivery systems of ground-based missiles, were and are the vehicles for implementing U.S. defence doctrine of the 1950s. This was premised enough U.S. and clear firepower should be available to wipe out one quarter of Russia's population and half her industry, even though she had struck first. The former white-kid planners of the Pentagon called "mutual assured" destruction, MAD for short.

It's a mad, mad world after all because the energy crisis may not prevent a nuclear one. Take those nuclear subs. They don't need oil only their own nuclear power to put to sea and fire their missiles. Make up your own mind which crisis is worse.

Kingston Symphony's Visit

Editor
The Intelligencer

May I requests a bit of space in your paper for a reply to Mr. Eugene Lang's review of the Kingston Symphony Concert. I would like to emphasize beforehand that I would never try to get into a discussion with him, our esteemed friend, about matters concerning the musical side of such an evening since he is the undisputed master and expert in this. On the other hand if I feel I have to come to the rescue of the Belleville audience which this time received such a licking in this write-up.

Since I have caught myself also on odd occasions clapped before a music piece had come to the end — either because somebody else applauded and I did not think about it, or in case of hypermodern music because one felt so relieved about the cessation of noise — I simply cannot follow Mr. Lang in his utter condemnation of the Belleville concert-goers who also paid for their tickets alright (and filled the auditorium) and by this paid for their right to applaud the excellent music they appreciated.

Further there was a large segment of the upper floor filled with youngsters from a school in Batawa; though one would debate whether a concert of this kind, with baroque and early romantic selections, was exactly what they would have liked best — an evening with the varied program of the Eastern Ontario Orchestra or even the Community Concert program would perhaps have filled it better. But these kids were for sure instructed to applaud at every little pause available to give them a hand, don't forget that!!) and put 10 clappers into a number of the already applauds except Eugene and a few selected guests.

Moreover these youngsters obviously enjoyed what they heard: there was a little noise from the potatochips which were not finished during intermission — such things have to be eating! — and made one think at times there was a decent flight of locusts at work, but otherwise they behaved admirably and they filled the auditorium, don't forget that.

By no means I want to leave the impression that I like to be interrupted between movements of a symphony but perhaps I may be permitted to forward a suggestion of my wife's at the address of Mr. Lang: would he consult the conductor for the artist as the case may be) before the concert and try to have him say a few words beforehand in an audible voice — when could register the starts the chain reaction! Concluding, I would like to say the applause in the times it is wanted. Which Mr. Brott could have done with 10 words instead of storming from the podium unleashed. To put it into the program, music would be put of doubtful value because not everybody reads them — and that would be the one clapper it is better to have an enthusiastic audience than one hearing a few times wrongly, than a dull one — or no audience at all.

MPP's Visit and BGH 'Leaks'

Editor
The Intelligencer

It's strange that whenever the name of Dr. Stewart Smith's MPP is mentioned there are either supporters or detractors on hand. The Liberal Forum convener seems to leave a lasting impression wherever he goes. The aftermath of his quiet visit to Belleville a few weeks ago is being felt in a significant quarter of our leading citizens.

A sorts of rumors and stories are being taken and statements galore issued that we are in good shape in this department, or in the good.

However waves seem to be still buffeting the board of directors of Belleville General Hospital. Such a rocking ship figure as chairman of the board Mayr. J. P. Gallagher finds it necessary to comment on alleged leaks to politicians things happening internally.

Over the years the administration of BGH has clicked more than a passing interest. Some rather odd things have happened within its walls.

Recently five senior staff members have resigned for various reasons but one must accept the chairman's statement that there was nothing untoward in this. And the same it is an odd coincidence that more could be persuaded to stay even though offered wages comparable to those they would receive elsewhere. I was always under the impression that the Daly was an institution that operated on public funds and as such was responsible to the public for its administration etc.

This being the case I find it difficult to understand what the reverend gentleman meant with Hospital, Such a rocking ship figure as chairman of the board Mayr. J. P. Gallagher finds it necessary to comment on alleged leaks to politicians things happening internally.

Personally, I find it difficult to accept that five senior staff members all find it convenient to leave at the same time.

More on Pay Hike for MPPs

Editor
The Intelligencer,

One of the best theoretical theories of all time has got to be the myth that our members of parliament are responsible to the electorate, that great unwashed body of people with the bottomless pockets.

We have been granted, as the latest anti-inflationary tactic, the not-so-rare and dubious privilege of contributing to a $4,500 raise in pay for ourselves every one of the members of the Ontario Legislature.

Call it what you will, this is a 25 per-cent boost and the raise alone is more than many people in Belleville make in a whole year.

So I have a suggestion for all you union members, or all who have union sympathies. If you have a contract up for renewal or coming up for renewal, get tough with your negotiating committee and see that they demand and retile for nothing less, than a 25 per cent increase.

After all, what better authority or precedent could we wish for than the Government of the Province of Ontario?

Norwegian explorer Roald Amundsen became the first man to reach the South Pole 61 years ago today—in 1911. He beat Capt. Robert Falcon Scott in a race to the pole after a comparatively easy journey. Amundsen scored another first five years earlier when he became the first man to navigate the Northwest Passage.

1956—John Diefenbaker was elected national leader of the Progressive Conservative party.

CP News Roundup
OHIP Paid Over Half Billion

TORONTO (CP) — Statistics released Thursday show that payments to medical and related practitioners under the Ontario Health Insurance Plan (OHIP) totalled $138,781,948 during the last fiscal year.

Figures for February and March, 1973, completing the 12-month period, showed $48,722,000 was paid in March—the third costliest month of the year.

The figure was above the $40- to $45-million range which Health Minister Richard Potter had said would be the stabilizing level.

The highest recorded payment was in January when the expenditure of $48.1 million was linked to an increasing incidence of illness in winter and a number of elective surgical procedures postponed from December.

A record 371 physicians earned $60,000 or more from OHIP in January. Highest paid were physicians in diagnostic radiology and general practice.

Prices Rise

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) — General Motors of Canada Ltd. announced Thursday an immediate increase of $113, or 2.3 per cent, in the average wholesale price to dealers of equipped cars and trucks.

Opposes Role

OTTAWA (CP) — Air Canada, as a carrier financed by public funds, should not become involved in the aerospace industry, Sinclair Stevens (PC-York-Simcoe) told the Commons transport committee Thursday.

He was commenting on a joint proposal by Air Canada and Canstock International Ltd. of Toronto to form a company to buy Canadair Ltd. of Montreal and de Havilland Aircraft of Canada Ltd. of Toronto.

One objective of the proposed company would be to achieve Canadian control of what are termed "the two major manufacturing segments of the Canadian aircraft industry."

DONALD MACDONALD

Oil Tax Use Limited

OTTAWA (CP) — Revenue generated by the federal crude oil export tax apparently will not be used to develop East Coast offshore oil reserves.

Energy Minister Donald Macdonald, contradicting an earlier statement, told the Commons Thursday the tax revenue will be spent solely in oil-producing provinces. Half the money would be given outright to the provinces, to compensate for royalties lost because of the tax, and the rest would be spent on development of energy resources within those provinces.

Potter Attacked

PEMBROKE, Ont. (CP) — Provincial Health Minister Richard Potter received a verbal lashing Thursday from a spokesman for the Renfrew health unit for his apparent lack of concern for the poor level of health in Renfrew County.

"I have been told by MPP Paul Yakabuski (Renfrew South) that he has asked the minister three times for an appointment, and his executive assistant has been asked three times as well," said health unit chairman W. R. Baglin.

WM. E. RILEY

MPs May Face Working Yule

OTTAWA (CP) — While other Canadians deck their halls with boughs of holly, MPs still may be filling the Commons with non-festive debate on emergency energy legislation.

Government House Leader Allan MacEachen offered a legislative package Thursday that the government would like to see passed next week but the Conservatives were in no hurry to consumate a deal.

The main stumbling block to a recess next Friday, four days before Christmas, is the emergency energy bill on which the Conservatives have vowed to fight for amendments.

Tom Bell, Conservative House leader, said Thursday an arrangement could be made for swift passage of the bill, but he was pessimistic about chances of a recess by next Friday.

A deal allowing quick but thorough committee study of the bill next week might be made if the Liberals are willing to ease "some of the powers-grabbing sections" of the proposed legislation, Mr. Bell (Saint John-Lancaster) said in an interview.

Such an arrangement could include extended Commons hours as suggested by Mr. MacEachen who included the energy bill, a bill to impose a charge on crude oil exports and proposed election expenses legislation in his suggested package.

Debate continued slowly

Thursday on the energy bill which would establish a board to impose mandatory petroleum allocations at the wholesale level in January and, if necessary, individual rationing.

Mr. Bell said the Conservatives oppose the bill because "we don't think there's that much of a crisis and we think the government's grabbing very extensive powers."

They would watch the debate on a day-to-day basis rather than conduct a filibuster—premeditated delaying tactics by members speaking at length on a bill.

Union Chief Calls His Accusers Liars

TORONTO (CP) — Charles W. Irvine, a 70-year-old unionist accused of acts ranging from the creation of a plasterers' price-fixing ring to the unauthorized spending of tens of thousands of dollars, Thursday called his accusers liars who drank too much.

Mr. Irvine, testifying before the provincial royal commission into crime in the construction industry, said he did not know anything about a combine in the plastering industry and had first heard of it in the newspapers.

He then said he heard rumors in other cities of a Toronto price-fixing operation.

"Finally the thing got through my thick head . . . there must be something going on."

He was also questioned about the disappearance of many records from Local 1/7 offices he earlier said had been destroyed.

"There were so many breakins and things disappearing that one goes there in the morning and is surprised to find the desk."

Insurance For Loans Tightened

TORONTO (CP) — Consumers who buy insurance to cover possible defaults on instalment plan payments will be protected from excessive premiums under guidelines issued Thursday by the Ontario department of insurance.

Insurance on instalment payments, called creditors' group insurance, is intended to pay the debt if the purchaser dies or becomes unemployed through sickness or injury. It usually is arranged on a group basis through a master policy issued by an insurance company to a sales finance company.

A key area of criticism has been the insurers' practice of rebating premiums, called experience rating funds, to the lending companies that hold the master group contract.

The guidelines abolish the payment of experience rating refunds or dividends, except in cases where the refunds are paid retroactively to the debtors, are applied to reduce premiums or are set aside as a special fund to be held by the insurer for the purpose of reducing future premiums.

Canada Faces Plastic Famine

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canadian consumers, already confronted by the world crisis over gasoline and oil supplies, face the additional danger of shortages and steeply rising prices for a wide range of synthetics made with petroleum byproducts, spokesmen in the industry said Thursday.

The shortages may affect everything from neckties to shoelaces, housewares to carpeting, packing and plastic cups to electrical appliances and auto parts—even chewing gum.

Chemical producers and manufacturers agreed that shortages of the basic chemicals derived from petroleum refining will affect virtually every plant operating in Canada. They expect the impact on the price of goods to be felt by spring.

"The situation is catastrophic," one chemical company executive said.

"People are going to have to make decisions about the quality of life itself," he said. "Ultimately, they are going to have to decide whether it is better to use oil as a source of energy which moves you around or as a material to make into a plastic cup which you throw away."

For the last few years, Canada has imported between 25 and 30 per cent of the basic chemical feedstocks used here. But, even before the Arab oil-producing countries imposed their export embargo following the Middle East war, many industrial countries had started to run out of surpluses of the petroleum byproducts.

"Styrene, the material from which plastic cups are made, was selling at 7½ cents a pound a year ago and now the going price is 20 cents a pound," said a Sarnia company executive.

Acid Spill Cure Makes Land Bare

PELHAM, Ont. (CP) — Vegetation has been killed and acres of prime farmland rendered useless for at least 10 to 15 years as a result of air environment ministry error, a group of soil experts said Thursday.

On Dec. 1, 1972, a Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo Railway train derailed, spilling 200,000 gallons of acid over at least 75 acres of railway right of way and parts of six adjoining farms.

The ministry ordered tons of sodium ash and sodium hydrochloride be spread.

The sodium compounds acted as a quick neutralizer but also destroyed the soil by sealing it against moisture penetration, the report said.

It added the ministry should have used a limestone neutralizer which would have balanced the effects of the acid and also have left the ground porous.

Airline Pilots Plan Strike

NEW YORK (CP) — Angry airline pilots, fearful that proposed jet-fuel cuts will mean their jobs, have threatened to strike during the Christmas rush.

The walkout would be aimed at shutting down the United States air transport system. But it was still mainly an isolated threat.

Airlines already have announced the layoff of thousands of employees because of the energy crisis. The Nixon administration has ordered a 15-per-cent cut in jet-fuel allocations by Jan. 7.

Hundreds of flights are being cancelled as the airline industry ponders its future under the belt-tightening program.

Unions representing airline employees charge that the major scheduled airlines are taking advantage of the situation by eliminating flights and service to less-populated areas where profits are hard to come by.

Before the cuts began, the U.S. airline industry employed about 300,000 persons. The Air Transport Association, main trade organization of the U.S. scheduled airlines, estimates that at least 25,000 airline employees will be laid off by January.

Girls for Christmas Peacekeepers' Dream

CAIRO (CP) — Main topic among the hundreds of young, unmarried soldiers with Canada's peacekeeping contingent in the Middle East now is whether some kindly Santa Claus might send them girls for Christmas.

The answer, from Maj. Lou MacKenzie, whose primary duty is looking after the men's welfare, is a qualified "no."

"What I mean is, there aren't going to be any belly dancers, contrary to popular rumors," he says.

Pte. Eric Thompson of Welland, Ont., says he doesn't care "if they send my grandmother just as long as it's a female" who can sit down, have a drink with us and remind us that girls really exist."

MacKenzie, from Truro, N.S., and a veteran of the Canadian peace observer group in Vietnam, arrived in camp only about a week ago. But already he has revolutionized the relatively drab social lives of the troops.

He has arranged cut-rate accommodation at a good downtown hotel where the troops can take 48-hour leaves, lifted a midnight curfew which had been in effect, set in motion plans for getting every soldier out of the country for a 14-day holiday.

Which to Choose?

Confronted by a whole row of Christmas trees, you may have a hard time choosing. First, pick the species that means Christmas to you. Then be sure its not too tall or tiny and that it doesn't have a crooked trunk.

Tree Tips

Have you ever gone through the experience of purchasing a tree that looks perfect in the lot, but turns out to be not quite what you had in mind? Be sure of your requirements before you buy, says W. J. Devins, a farm products inspector with the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food.

The freshness of a tree is an important consideration. Fresh trees reduces fire hazards and keep their needles longer. You might consider taking the family out to one of the cut-your-own tree plantations. There you may pick put the tree you want and by cutting it yourself, know that it is fresh.

Each species has its own characteristics. While Scotch pine is still the most popular tree, cultured spruce, balsam fir, and even cedars, are being used more often as Christmas trees.

The trees are pruned regularly and harvest to give them a full, yet natural shaping. "Producers trim carefully to remove undesirable growth, deformities, and damage from insects, rodents, or birds," Devins adds.

Mr. Devins suggests that unless you are willing to take a chance, don't buy a baled tree. Baled trees are either wrapped with twine or enclosed with plastic netting, a process which makes shipping much easier. However, buying a tree still in its bale may hide a crooked trunk or gaps in the branches.

Christmas Party Dancing at Belcrest Villa

Volunteers from the Mental Health Association visited the Belcrest Villa recently in order to bring a Christmas party to the residents of the nursing home. Decorated tables in the recreation room helped provide a cheery seasonal touch, and individual presents were given to everyone by the visitors. Much of the afternoon was spent in singing Christmas carols and songs, and in dancing to taped music. The Mental Health Association visits many area nursing home during the Christmas season, and throughout the year.

The Food Co-op Boom: Consumers Save Dollars

By JEAN SHARP
CP Women's Editor

Operating a food co-op based on volunteer labor and a small membership charge seems to be a chancy business. But it is one more and more people are trying.

Unlike large, conventional co-operatives, they usually have only a few hundred members who pay small fees. The idea is to save members money on their grocery bills, not to earn a profit and pay dividends to members.

A study has been done in Quebec by the Federation des Magasins Co-Op in collaboration with the Service of Co-operative Associations of the department of financial institutions, companies and co-operatives. The report says the public has been driven to co-operative experiments by skyrocketing inflation.

A Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press indicates such projects are mostly in urban areas, and most of them have a core of middle-class members.

A few operate like the Street Agency Co-operative Kitchens in downtown Edmonton. It began under the Local Initiatives Program as a project to feed transient youth, and became a co-op. Marg Galeski, its co-ordinator, says it fills orders from about 50 customers a week, most of them pensioners, students or people on fixed incomes.

The Direct Charge Consumers' Co-op in Charlottetown has one of the two more customary systems. Manager Tony Enserink says members must build up a $300 equity by making a down payment of $10 and paying $5 every three months after that. In addition, there is a weekly service fee of $2.35.

Mr. Enserink says there might be no savings on an order of $15, because the membership fee would cancel out the lower prices. But an order of $30 would save about $2 a week.

The Karma Co-op in Toronto has a $2 annual membership fee, and asks each member for a $13 loan, returnable if the member leaves the co-op.

John Whidden says there is ideology as well as saving involved for some of the membership of Karma.

"There are two basic reasons for forming a co-op. One is trying to save money. The other is the idea of the individual doing his bit, co-operation as opposed to corporations, people versus companies."

A customer in a Montreal co-op says she is pleased to save money, but also eager to participate in a "genuinely co-operative, Quebec-run enterprise."

In Vancouver, Ann Hillyer agrees co-op enthusiasts see themselves as an alternative to "the system." She is an organizer of the Fed-Up Co-op-erative Warehouse, which supplies 50 co-ops throughout the province.

"It's just one more step to get back to the source. The more you can eliminate the middle men, the more reasonable you can make your prices."

A family in St. John's, Nfld., with three adults and two children spends about $40 to $45 a week at the co-op. They have found by experiment the same order costs $53 to $65 at a supermarket.

Jeannette Jonah, a five-year customer at a Saint John, N.B., co-op, says she saves about $8 a week on groceries.

Bruce McLean of Maritime Co-op Services in the Saint John area estimates their average member spends $45 a week and saves 12 to 15 per cent on food costs.

The co-ops keep their prices down in three ways. Most operate out of low-cost space, set up warehouse style. They buy in bulk, and many depend heavily on volunteer labor.

Mr. Whidden says Toronto's Karma has considered making time donations as well as money a condition of membership. Ann Hillyer in Vancouver says getting people to donate their time, and finding capable organizers were the main problems in getting started.

The buying is handled in various ways. In Nova Scotia they buy from Maritime Provinces Co-operative Services Ltd., a wholesale organization.

People shop at the Karma Co-op in Toronto. It has a $2 annual membership fee, and asks each member for a $12 loan, returnable if the member leaves the co-op

The idea of the co-op is to save members money on their grocery bills, not to earn a profit and pay dividends to members. (CP Photo)

Successful Living

We All Need To Be Praised

I wonder how many people have thought about the sincere compliments as being one of the items which tend to have a good marriage better. We all need praise, and when we get a little it gives a life to the spirit.

The beloved one gets a lift every time her particular John notices her new hairdo or admires the dress she chose with him in mind. She makes a chocolate cake because he loves it and his expressed enjoyment is her reward.

But she doesn't let it all come her way; she feels his ego too, with her recognition of the fine job he is doing; of the way he handles one of the children or plays a game.

Next time you are just about to criticize a small act of somebody you care about, see if you can find something to praise instead.

Dear Doris: My young niece was in a serious accident and lost her right hand. She will have to learn so many things to adjust to her new way of life.

She is artistic and this loss is a great blow to her. Anything at all would help.

Aunt Mollie.

Dear Aunt: It is devastating to lose an arm or a leg or a hand. During the Second World War, the War Amps (who had lost a limb in the first world war) visited many of the new amputees in hospital in order to help them over that first black hopeless period.

The Amps said to these new casualties, "Look at me! Now I have a new leg (or arm) and I have a steady job". Such people gave a ray of hope to many a hopeless young man.

Right now your niece needs all the physiotherapy and emotional security she can get. She needs to know about others who have risen above handicaps and become leaders because of their experience.

Hank Viscardi (whom I often mention) was born with little short stumps for legs; was the butt of many jokes as a child. At age 27 a doctor made him artificial legs and he stood as tall as any other adult. The human sympathy he developed from his handicap made him a leader in rehabilitation and he is now at the head of a large industrial organization which employs only severely handicapped persons.

Your girl has a life ahead of her which could be a triumphant example to others, if she can be helped by the right doctor, the right physiotherapist, and be inspired once more with the will to try.

Dear Doris: I would like to tell "Hopeless Case" to keep up the good work.

I have a very large tummy and I am 45. Is there any hope of my getting my tummy any flatter, and will just dieting do this? Or must I exercise? Which is the best exercise, walking or cycling?

Another Heavyweight.

Dear Another: Take it off - and I mean the weight. Some of it will come off the tummy.

Exercise helps, but won't do the whole job. Dieting will take off weight but without exercise it might come off the wrong spot. When bodies are overweight and a dieting program is undertaken, the body feeds on the extra carbohydrates first, before tackling the fat. This means no candy, no sweets, no white flour products.

Both walking and cycling are good - in their place. Individuals have to choose the exercise which is right for them. A good deal depends on the state of your heart, your muscles and your age.

Your doctor ought to go into this with you and make sure that you are not walking or cycling - on this ice.

(Do you wonder why the people you care about as they do? Let Doris shed light on your particular human problem, by writing to her in care of this newspaper. And remember that stamped envelope.)

COOKING EGGS

Do not cook eggs in their shells in an aluminum pan because the metal will darken. Use a stainless steel enamel or glass pan.

Ann Landers
Time To Call A Halt

Dear Ann Landers: A friend of mine is being married in January for the fourth time in eight years. I have been bridesmaid of honor twice and matron of honor once. I think that's enough, especially since I had to buy a new dress and shoes every time.

Now she has asked me to stand up for her again and don't want to. The last guy she married is really great. She gave him a raw deal. I value this girl's friendship but I'm beginning to feel like a hypocrite. I'd like some advice on what to do.—The Jonah

Dear J.: I'd say you've done your bit. Tell your friend to ask somebody else this time. It might change her luck.

Saskatchewan Sculptor Uses Cows as Models, Inspiration

OTTAWA (CP) — When you've pulled cows winter and summer on a Saskatchewan farm for most of your life, you become pretty well attuned to all their whims and fancies.

This is so, even if you have the artistic talents of a sculptor like Joe Fafard of Pesen, Sask., 15 miles west of Regina.

"Everything in abstract art today is to be found in a cow," he says by way of introducing the first in a new series of National Film Board half-hour shows to be seen on the CBC-TV network starting Dec. 18.

Fafard, raised in a family of 12 feeling isolated out on the prairies because of their French background, is gaining recognition as one of Saskatchewan's most talented sculptors. His figures in clay of cows and people are beginning to command big prices and attention at art galleries in Paris and New York.

The NFB series, called simply West, is its successor to a 12-week series on Quebec, Adieu Alouette, shown last winter on CBC-TV and being repeated this season on Sunday afternoons.

The film board also has plans for a series on Canada's coastal territories—The Atlantic Provinces, B.C., and the Arctic. Ultimately it will cover all Canada.

The film on Joe Fafard, I Don't Have to Work That Big, gives a kaleidoscopic view of small-town life on the flat Prairies—100-car freight trains pounding through non-stop, bamburgers in the corner cafe, planting a hedge of raspberries to keep the kids off the street.

Second in the series is a film on the enterprise and success of Catalkinner Keen—Edmonton-based contractor Robert Keen who built an industrial empire with income of $25 million a year from land-moving machines.

Keen's chuckle of satisfaction runs like theme music through the film, culminating in his entry in the chuckwagon races at the Calgary Stampede.

Third in the series is to be a look at Noel Starblanket, 38, chief of the Starblanket Indian reserve near Fort Qu'appelle and vice-president of the Saskatchewan Indian Association.

He knows the secret of getting government grants, and has learned all the white man's wiles, which he intends to use in furthering the welfare of his people.

The Joe Fafard film was directed by Michael McKennitey and Catalkinner Keen and Starblanket by Donald Brittain.

Other films in the series will go into family life in the Peace River district and at Churchill, the songs of Leo Cavendish of Calgary, co-operative farming at Lestock, Sask., the Jewish settlers of Winnipeg, and the enterprise of the Hudson Bay Region, also staging a comedy about the Riel Rebellion.

Former Drunk Trying To Eliminate Skid Row

VANCOUVER (CP) — A former down-and-out drunk named Bruce Eriksen and his colleagues in the Downtown Eastside Residents' Association are determined to make Vancouver the first major North American city without a skid road.

For years, officials of the 239-member association said, various public and private agencies have tried to ease skid road conditions yet the underlying problems of the area have remained basically unchanged.

How skid road residents have banded together into an organiza ion is the belief that only they can eradicate the profound social problems confronting them.

Inspired by a growing list of achievements, members of the association have found they can do something about conditions and frustrations previously accepted as inevitable.

Mr. Eriksen, for example, with his neatly-trimmed beard and well-dressed exterior, hardly appears the stereotype of a skid road resident.

The association's 46-year-old community organizer still is angry at his environment but now sees an opportuni y for change.

City hall, which was largely instrumental in assisting the organization to its feet, now is the target of its demands. Many of those demands have been accepted.

The association has extracted city hall promises for speedy passage of a new lodging-house bylaw aimed at maing slum landlords clean up their premises.

The city has promised to speed up a fire bylaw requiring the installation of sprinkler systems in all skid road hotels and rooming houses and has agreed to clamp down on operators of crime-ridden beer parlors.

Ald. Mike Harcourt, chairman of Vancouver's housing committee, criticizes the association for what he calls occasional lack of judgment, but supports its over-all objectives.

"That area of town has been looked upon as a garbage heap of the human condition for almost 100 years," he said. "This council regards rehabilitation of the area as one of its major priorities.

"Over the last six months there has been a tremendous change of at itude about the area.

It should be like any other area of the city—a decent place to live, the alderman said.

The association was making some mistakes in judgment, "but they have accomplished a hell of a lot."

Because it is pressing for changes which are harming beer parlors and rooming houses, the association has experienced considerable hostility from some segmen s of the skid road business community as well as criminal elements unappreciative of efforts to make the area a safe place to live.

Some members of the association are reported to have had their lives threatened. Mr. Eriksen had his shirt ripped while being thrown out of a beer parlor which he had criticized.

"These things just make me more determined to keep fighting " he said.

Born in Winnipeg in 1928, Mr. Eriksen was one of two children of an immigrant Dutch convic. His mother died when he was five and he ended up in an orphanage.

He ran away when he was 11, worked at numerous jobs in Vancouver and Winnipeg, then left the West Coast in 1945 on a ship carrying grain to China.

"I was seasick all the way out and I was seasick all the way back," he said. "So when I got back to Vancouver, I quit."

After another series of jobs, he decided he did not want to become an artist. Discovering a new-found talent, he once made $11,000 as the result of two weeks' work on a chart of ou er space.

"I spent it all about as fast," he said. "I have a lot of friends who are broke and things like that. Money has never bothered me as long as I have a couple of dollars in my pocket."

Mr. Eriksen spent part of the $11,000 renting the whole top floor of skid road's Empress Hotel for a night. He said on food and drinks, offering free rooms to everybody he met that night without a place to stay.

During the time he has lived on skid road, Mr. Eriksen said he got tired of living into hotels and finding filthy conditions. "I also got tired of seeing guys beaten up and robbed.

The Down Town Eastside Residents Association was incorporated in August as a non-profit improvement society. Apart from civic improvements, its objectives include helping residents with personal financial problems.

Mr. Eriksen said people living on skid road are not there because they like the environment.

"They are here out of social and economic necessity. Un'il now, they have been booted around so long they didn't know how to change it."

Death Rumor Exaggerated
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — B forced him to make extraordinary expenditures and has damaged his health, reputation and business career, says Grand Ole Opry star Lester Flatt in a $500,000 suit against Esquire magazine.
Esquire called it an "unfortunate and unintentional error" and said it will publish a correction in January. But Flatt said the correction should have been published in December.
Esquire and Flatt agree the magazine made the mistake of referring to the banjo-picking, blue-grass entertainer as "the late Lester Flatt."

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21): Weigh your words carefully today. Others will keep track of what you say and hold you to later. Above all don't flib.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your associates will tend to drift toward the negative. Small fears and doubts will be given more relevance than deserved.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19): You'll participate in anything today that you feel you couldn't do openly without embarrassment. You won't get away with being tricky.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20): Avoid over the next few days committing with persons who could damage your reputation. You're being judged by the company you keep.

Cortisone User Cannot Just Quit

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Would you please tell me how to get off cortisone? When I try to drop the amount one-half milligram I get convulsive feelings. I am—or was—taking it for asthma, but my asthma is better now. I've been on it since 1960.—G.P.

To begin with, you should undertake this with your doctor's guidance, and I suspect from your letter that you are trying to do it on your own.

After prolonged use of cortisone, the function of the adrenal glands is greatly suppressed—the glands no longer are producing as much cortisone as they used to, and it takes time for them to resume full natural activity.

Therefore cortisone has to be withdrawn gradually. It must not be done abruptly.

Quite commonly this is done by taking the cortisone less frequently, say every other day instead of daily, and then every third day, over a period of time. If there are no untoward symptoms, then the size of the dose can be gradually reduced—again under your physician's guidance.

In your case, 23 years is a long time to have been taking cortisone. If your adrenals do not resume adequate functioning during the withdrawal period, you may have to continue taking a small dose indefinitely.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 70 years old and in the best years of my fingers, the joint nearest the fingernails. So far they do not hurt, but can this be a sign of anything?

Sounds distinctly like Heberden's nodes, which sometimes become painful and inflamed. There is no great danger associated with them. They may or may not ever become painful—some do, some don't, some are painful temporarily and later no longer hurt. About all the harm they do is in the discomfort—if any—and appearance.

Unfortunately I know of no way to prevent or get rid of them.

Win at Bridge

Precaution can temper fact

Ruskin's dictum he would have preferred four chins in order to get rid of one of his diamonds before playing that suit. Then he would come to his hand with a trump; lead a diamond; stick in dummy's nine; be a little upset when "dat dere" East produced the 10, but not really damaged.

East would only be able to take one diamond trick and eventually South would take the heart finesse and make his contract.

South's precautionary measure of taking the diamond discard would have been unnecessary if the 10 was where it appeared to be. It became necessary in view of the fact that East, not West held the card.

By Oswald and James Jacoby

Ruskin said, "The work of science is to substitute facts for appearances." Winning bridge players should follow Ruskin's maxim.

The eight of diamonds was played from dummy at trick one. East played the queen and South won with the ace.

It appeared certain that West held the 10 of diamonds so South proceeded to draw trumps and lead a diamond toward dummy. When West followed low South stuck in the nine whereupon East proceeded to take his two diamond tricks.

Many Back Teachers' Action

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Teachers in 15 Ontario counties are going on strike by means of mass resignation in January to back up their salary demands. All Ontario's teachers appear likely to go on a wildcat walkout Tuesday to back the striking teachers and protest moves by the province to avert school shutdowns after Christmas.

In an informal survey, The Intelligencer asked a random multiple of people whether or not teachers should have the right to strike and what they thought of the proposed walkout Tuesday.

MARGARET SAGRIFF, a waitress, has three children, two of them in elementary school.

"No, teachers shouldn't be striking," she said. "They make enough money now for only teaching part of the year. We work all year and don't make half as much.

"I don't think they should go out Tuesday. It's the children who will suffer for it. The teachers should settle. I'll have to hire a babysitter for the day if the schools close."

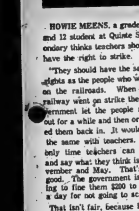
MRS. EFFIE McCABE, former school trustee, dedicated Home and School worker, grandmother of 14 and great-grandmother of seven, sympathizes— with everyone involved in the situation — except the provincial government.

"Education Minister Thomas Wells hasn't properly met with teachers, and that's what is causing this disturbance," she says.

"I don't want to criticize our teachers or the parents or our board of education," said Mrs. McCabe. "I think the walkout Tuesday is bad, but there would be no walkout if it weren't for the actions of the government that controls the boards of education."

HOWIE MEENS, a grade 11 and 12 student at Quinte Secondary thinks teachers should have the right to strike.

"They should have the same rights as the people who work on the railroads. When the railway went on strike the government let the people stay out for a while and then ordered them back in. It would do the same with teachers. The only time teachers can quit and say what they think is November and May. That's no good. The government is going to fine them $200 to $500 a day for not going to school.

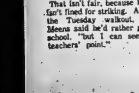


That isn't fair, because labor isn't fined for striking. As for the Tuesday walkout, Mr. Meens said he'd rather go to school. "But I can see the teachers' point."

WAYNE DOXTATOR, a grade 11 student at BCI, thinks teachers should walk out and get their grievances settled.

"Teachers shouldn't be docked if they walk out Tuesday. Everybody else can take a day off and get paid."

Mr. Doxtator said he thinks the one-day strike will do good for the teachers' cause by getting their beefs out into the open. But he has his doubts about whether or not teachers need higher pay.



"Most are paid enough now for what they do. Some are underpaid and some, who don't do too much, are overpaid."

JIM SPINKS, an office worker, hasn't any children and says half his teachers didn't have any ability for their job.

"I don't think they should strike," he said. "They've got the job, too soft now. They shouldn't go out on Tuesday — it's just giving themselves another holiday and they have enough holidays now.

"It's essential they keep the schools open for the simple reason we're paying for it. The teachers' pay should be docked if they go out for a day. If they resign, they should be out of a job. There are all sorts of teachers looking for jobs now."

MURIEL RIVEST, an office worker and union member says teachers should have the right to strike.

"If you have a union and you can't get what you want, one way you have to get it another. Everybody should have the right to strike.

"Going out Tuesday is a wildcat, and wildcat strikes aren't any good — they don't accomplish that much."

If the teachers have no strike clause in their contracts, said Mrs. Rivest, they shouldn't walk out.

"They're just giving up, and they shouldn't give up, because that's too easy. With their education, they should be able to find another way. The kids are going to lose out and the taxpayers are going to lose out."

Elementary Teachers Support Strike Action

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

The one-day teacher strike proposed by high school teachers for next Tuesday spread to elementary schools yesterday.

Public and separate school teachers were told at a meeting at Queen Victoria School that their three associations would back them if they decided to stay home from school Tuesday to protest legislation making mass resignations ineffective before next August.

The 300 teachers at the rally belonged to one of three organizations: the Ontario Public School Men Teachers' Federation, the Federation of Women Teachers' Associations of Ontario or the Ontario English Catholic Teachers' Associations, representing about 1,300 teachers in Hastings county, including eight school teachers.

"In the politics of this situation, we can't tell our members to go out — but we can support them if they do," said Ronald Poste, a member of the provincial executive of the men teachers' federation. Mr. Poste, principal of Prince Charles School in Belleville, is past president of OPSMTF. The women teachers' federation and the Catholic teachers' association have taken the same stand.

Reason for Tuesday's proposed walkout is to protest an emergency bill introduced by Education Minister Thomas Wells Monday to prevent teacher strikes in 16 Ontario counties. Teachers have no right to strike, but by submitting mass resignations Nov. 31, those in the 16 jurisdictions will close their schools after the Christmas holidays. The government's bill would make the resignations invalid until next Aug. 31. This, the teachers maintain, is an injustice, since mass resignations were legal at the time they were handed in.

"The government has decreed that the rules have to be changed and changed retroactively," said Mr. Poste.

Teachers were told that:

Their decision to protest by walkout must be a personal and voluntary one;

They stand to lose a day's pay if they go out;

Beginning teachers on probationary contract may wait to be excluded from the strike because they could be instantly fired;

Those on probationary contracts and others "who can't bring themselves to stay home" can join the protest by donating a day's pay to their federations, marked "for political purposes";

Teachers have a responsibility to notify parents of the walkout at the earliest moment (Friday, if possible) and of the reason behind it, said Mr. Poste.

"We are not acting against the Hastings county board of education or the Hastings-Prince Edward separate school board," emphasized Mr. Poste. "The fight is outside this area, but it could be in our back yard in the near future."

He said the government's action in retroactively outlawing mass resignations is a threat to all collective bargaining groups in Ontario.

Mr. Poste's presentation brought a minute-long standing ovation from his listeners.

Next move is a poll today of teachers in each school in the county, public and separate. The results — whether or not each school will be open or closed Tuesday — will be known by 4 p.m. Friday by federation presidents: Clare Rapsone for the men teachers, Leo O'Connor for the Catholic teachers and Mrs. Joanne Albert for the women teachers.

Parents of children will be notified immediately about whether or not their schools will be closed Tuesday. Mr. Poste said it would be the decision of the presidents to release or withhold to the public through the press, the results of the polls.

Volunteers Play Vital Role In Protecting Property

By PETER GOODSPEED
Staff Reporter

The Thurlow recruits and waits and within a matter of minutes as many as 18 men have deserted their jobs, their sleep or their families.

Dashing to an old distillery warehouse, that has been converted to a garage, they climb aboard a couple of old trucks and race down country roads with their sirens screaming, their hearts pounding and their wives sitting at home worrying.

Everything but the mad rush to the fire hall conforms to the average person's image of the professional firefighter.

Actually the scene is set in Corbyville and the firefighters are not professionals but schoolteachers, garage mechanics, factory workers and electricians.

They are common men with an uncommon sense of community spirit.

Like the professionals, who work in the larger municipalities, the volunteer firefighters have opted to devote their time to helping people, not because of the prestige that goes with being a firefighter, but because their community has a need and they feel they can fill it.

In a time of rapidly soaring prices and sharply increasing accident and fire rates, the volunteer firefighter provides a small community with an economical and efficient protective service.

For as little as $7,000 a year — just a shade more than half the annual salary of one professional firefighter — a township the size of Thurlow can outfit and maintain a fire department that is composed of two fire halls and is manned by 35 volunteers.

Such a saving doesn't come from the wisdom of politicians or the thriftiness of a township treasurer. It has its roots in the missed hockey games, the sleepless nights and the lost leisure time of the men who have decided to serve their community.

Thurlow isn't a special case. Other townships in the Quinte area owe a lot to their volunteer firefighters. Ameliasburgh, and Sidney are just two of Belleville's immediate neighbors who also rely upon the volunteers for their fire protection.

The Corbyville detachment of the Thurlow fire department, however, provides a good example of the types of sacrifices made and the services rendered by the volunteers.

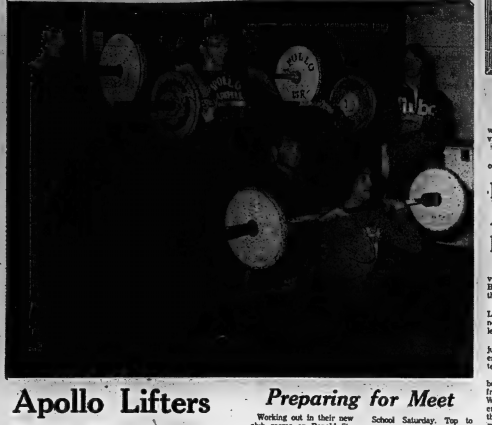
Every Monday night, the volunteers meet at the fire hall behind Corby's distillery. They test their equipment, practise their fire drills and try to improve their firefighting skills.

Bob Pierce, a captain at the Corbyville detachment and the president-elect of the Hastings and Prince Edward Mutual Fire Aid Association explains, that training is perhaps the biggest job facing the volunteer firefighter.

"It takes a lo. of time if you are going to do this job properly," he said. "There is so much to learn and so little time to learn it in. We make mistakes and sometimes we look a little foolish but that is all part of the job. We are always trying to improve ourselves. We haven't lost anyone yet."

In addition to the weekly training session at the fire hall, the Thurlow firefighters spend their Tuesday and Thursday nights at Loyalist College, where they, along with other volunteers, study modern firefighting techniques under the direction of the Belleville professionals.

The course being offered at Loyalist is the first of its kind in the Quinte area, and, to date, has proved to be the most successful of its type in he province. More than 40 volunteer firefighters are enrolled in the 12 week course and Captain Ray Reid of Belleville, the man in charge of organizing the courses noted, hopes to expand the education program in the future.



When they are not studying or practising, the volunteers are usually busy satisfying their passion for keeping their equipment in top shape. In Thurlow this interest has led the firefighters to build their own rescue van.

Using a second hand Bell Telephone service truck, the firefighters, with the aid of the Belleville Vandmen's Benefit Fund, have equipped themselves with a piece of equipment that has proved to be invaluable to both themselves and the area's police forces.

Completely equipped with cutting torches, floodlights, stretchers, a portable generator and a wide variety of power tools, the van has been used to free people from auto wrecks, and to help police search for drowning victims.

At present, the Point Anne detachment of the Thurlow fire department is building a lander and the Ameliasburgh volunteers are selling raffle tickets to help them build their own rescue van.

Ordinary men can accomplish a lot when they put their minds to it, and judging from the letters of thanks that invariably find their way into the bulletin boards at the fire hall in Corbyville, there are still a lot of extraordinary men around.

Cats Face Oshawa, Pickering

Only one significant change will be in evidence for Belleville Bobcats games this weekend.

Vern Amey, who has been out with a sore back since the December 2nd game with St. Mike's, will return to action. Amey strained the muscles in his back in a fall into the boards.

The Bobcats have a pair of important games this weekend. Friday night they travel to, Oshawa to meet the Legionnaires, while Sunday night they entertain the Pickering Panthers.

In their Friday night game, the Bobcats will be out to add to their first place total of 25 points. The Legionnaires currently hold down eighth place in the league, with 18 points, for the final playoff spot.

However, in the big game of the weekend for the Cats, Pickering will supply the opposition at 8 p.m. Sunday, at Memorial Arena.

The Panthers are holding down fourth spot in the league standings, along with the Markham Royals. Each team has 31 points, although Markham has two games in hand. They are four points behind the first place Cats.

A look at the League scoring shows three Cats still in the top 10. Jim Richardson is tied with Paul Gardner for the league lead in points, each having 60. Gardner has 30 goals included in his total compared to Richardson's 24, however Gardner has played one more game than has the Cats' forward.

The other two in the top 10 are Mark Coates and Norm Jones. Coates has 49 points, including 20 goals, good enough for third place in the league.

Jones has slipped to a tie for 10th place with Rick Murphy of Pickering each with 48 points.

Labatt's Award For Convery

Team captain Charlie Convery has been selected as Belleville Eagles' player of the month for November.

Club publicity man Dave Lucas says Convery got the nod for his "efforts as a team leader, on and off the ice."

"Charlie's attitude has been just great," stated Lucas, "his enthusiasm is one of the team's assets."

Convery is the second member of the club's high scoring front line to take the award. Wayne Weiler, the right winger for centre Les Colligan, was this season's first player of the month.

John Gonson, Labatt's representative, will make a presentation to Convery between periods of tonight's Orillia Terriers-Eagles match at Memorial Arena.

Gilbert Perreault—Return Delayed

Blues Should Have Quit While Ahead

By NEIL CAMPBELL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Goalie John Davidson of St. Louis must have wondered if the Blues had left him to stand off the whole Detroit Red Wing team all by himself for most of their game Thursday night.

The Blues scored three times in the first eight minutes of the National Hockey League contest, then let the Wings play with the puck for most of the rest of the night.

The Wings outshot the Blues 50-19 and outscored them 7-3 to break out of a six game winless streak.

Davidson was under siege throughout the second period when he let in three of 24 shots as the Blues fell behind 4-3.

Detroit goalie Doug Grant faced only two shots that came his way in the period—none in the first 18 minutes of the period.

The Wings got a goal and two assists from Red Berenson and were bolstered by the addition of Nelson Debenedet and Bill Hogaboam, called up from Virginia Red Wings of the American Hockey League.

Debenedet scored a goal in his first NHL game and Hogaboam, who was with the Wings and Atlanta Flames briefly last year, set up Detroit's first goal, scored by Doug Roberts.

The win left the Wings in sixth place in the NHL East Division, 11 points behind fourth-place Toronto Maple Leafs, who whipped the Flames 6-1 Thursday.

In the only other game, Phil Esposito continued to score goals at a record clip, picking up his 28th and 29th as Boston Bruins down Minnesota North Stars 4-2 and Los Angeles Kings edged New York Islanders 3-2.

Leafs 6 Flames 1

Swedish rookie Inge Hammarstrom scored two goals and assisted on a third as the Leafs ended a seven Tuesday's 7-1 loss in St. Louis.

The difference in tonight's game from the St. Louis one was the checking," said Toronto coach Red Kelly. "All our lines checked and they stayed in position."

Bruins 4 Stars 2

If he maintains his present scoring pace, Esposito will finish with 90 goals, easily breaking his own league record of 76, set in 1970-71.

Thursday's game was Boston's 28th. In 1970-71, Esposito took 32 games to score 30 goals and had only 21 after his 28th game.

The Bruins were unhappy with a ruling by goal judge Dave Bailey and referee Andy Von Hellemond that cost Esposito an apparent third goal. Bailey first flicked the goal light, then agreed with Von Hellemond that the puck had hit the crossbar.

"Thankfully, we didn't need the goal tonight," said Esposito of Bailey's ruling. "If it was a 1-1 game, I would have torn his legs off."

The win extended Boston's unbeaten streak to 13 games.

Kings 3 Islanders 2

Mike Corrigan and Frank St. Marseille scored goals less than two minutes apart in the third period for the Kings, who moved into fifth place with the fourth win in their last five games.

Buffalo Sabres will have to get along without Gilbert Perreault, their leading scorer, for a little longer.

Perreault, who was to have played Saturday for the first time since he broke a leg Oct. 28, aggravated muscles or tendons in the leg in a practice session Thursday and now won't be back before next week.

Tonight's only game has Montreal Canadiens at California Golden Seals.

NHL Leaders

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Centre Phil Esposito was at it again Thursday night, scoring two goals and picking up an assist in leading Boston Bruins to a 4-2 win over Minnesota North Stars, while increasing his lead in the National Hockey League points race.

He now has 29 goals and 30 assists for 59 points, 15 more than team-mate Bobby Orr, who was blemished.

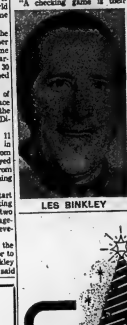
Binkley Comes Through As Toros Top Crusaders

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

If a leg injury is still bothering goalie Les Binkley of Toronto Toros, he managed to conceal his pain during a World Hockey Association game Thursday night.

Thrust into a game for the first time since mid-November because Gilles Gratton came down with the flu, the 30-year-old Binkley came up with 20 saves as the Toros downed Cleveland Crusaders 3-1.

The win, in the only game of the night, broke a second-place tie between the Toros and the Crusaders in the WHA East Division.



Binkley, who missed 11 games with pulled muscles in his right leg, had to watch from the stands while Gratton played and the Toros climbed from fifth to second place, winning seven of 11 games.

Gratton was supposed to start Thursday with Binkley putting off his return until the two teams play a return engagement Saturday night in Cleveland.

"I talked to Gilles and the doctor just two minutes prior to the game and they said Binkley would be my best choice," said Toronto coach Billy Harris.

"They kept the pressure on constantly and I had to be on my toes," said Binkley.

"A checking game is their style," said Harris of Cleveland. "They like to dump it in the end and play for the mistakes and that's how they got their only goal."

LES BINKLEY

The Toros may have taken something away from that cautious approach when they grabbed a fast 2-0 lead in the first two minutes of the game on goals scored by Tom Simpson and Bob Leduc.

Toronto captain Wayne Carleton, who leads the WHA in scoring, was held pointless for the first time in 13 games.

The Crusaders, who have won only four of their last 11 starts, played with only four defencemen with Wayne Hillman and Ray Clearwater on the sidelines with knee injuries.

Tonight's schedule has Quebec Nordiques at Edmonton Oilers, Los Angeles Sharks at Winnipeg Jets, Houston Aeros at Minnesota Fighting Saints and Jersey Knights at New England Whalers.

Winner Praises a Loser

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Chicago likes a big challenge and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, the awesome Milwaukee Buck centre, poses the biggest one of all.

"You don't get to play against the best in the world every day," said Chicago coach Dick Motta, after the Bulls edged the Bucks 97-94 Thursday night in the National Basketball Association.

"So you'd better bust your tail against him when you're in there and make sure you work harder than he does."

Elsewhere in the NBA, Portland Buckaroos downed Phoenix Suns 119-108.

In the American Basketball Association, San Diego Conquistadors edged Memphis Tams 107-104 and San Antonio Spurs nipped Virginia Squires 96-94.

Not only did the Bulls save their best for the best, they also saved some of their best for last, erasing a nine-point deficit early in the fourth quarter.

After Lucius Allen's jumper brought Milwaukee to within one at 95-94, Norm Van Lier sank two foul shots.

Chicago's Chet Walker scored a game-high 28 points while Jabbar topped Milwaukee with 23.

RON GETS RIDE

HAMILTON, N.Z. (Reuter) — Canadian jockey Ron Turcotte, regular rider of 1973 Triple Crown-winner Secretariat, will compete in the Waikato Jockey Club's international meeting Feb. 19, the organizers announced Thursday. Turcotte, a native of Grand Falls, N.B., joins an international entry list already comprising Lester Piggott of England, Walter Blum of the United States, and Australians Roy Higgins, Frank Keys and Kevin Langby.

Trailblazers 119 Sans 108

Geoff Petrie scored 25 points and Sidney Wicks added 24 to lead Portland over Phoenix and snap the the Trailblazers five-game losing streak.

Charlie Scott was high man for Phoenix with 31 points.

Conquistadors 107 Tams 104

San Diego's Dwight Lamar stole a key pass and scored with 1:28 remaining and the Conquistadors held on for their victory over Memphis.

SPURS 96 Squires 94

Former Squire Swen Nater scored 24 points and grabbed 16 rebounds to spark the Spurs.

Petes Shut Out Canadians

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — Captain Doug Jarvis scored twice and assisted on another goal as Peterborough Petes dumped Kingston Canadians 6-0 Thursday in Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A action before a crowd of 2,461.

Peterborough goaltender Frank Salive blocked 27 shots, picking up his second shutout of the season.

Paul Evans, Gord Duncan, Tom Tuttle and Paul McIntosh got the other Peterborough goals.

Peterborough jumped into a 3-0 first-period lead when Jarvis's line, Ed Smith and Gastle, scored on three of its first four trips to the ice.

Peterborough added a second-period goal and two more in the final period.

The victory snapped a three-game winless streak for Peterborough.

Each team took two minor penalties.

It was the circuit's only scheduled game. Tonight, Sudbury visits Hawk. Peterborough is at Kingston, Hamilton plays at Kitchener, London plays host to St. Catharines and Toronto travels to Sault Ste. Marie.

Finley Awaits Cronin's Ruling

Yankees Sign Dick Williams

NEW YORK (AP) — "You've got to take a step sometimes," said New York Yankees' president Gabe Paul. "We feel we've been doing enough. We just have to go forward."

Paul then announced the signing of Dick Williams Thursday to a three-year contract as manager of the American League baseball team, setting the stage for a possible legal confrontation with Charles O. Finley, the outspoken owner of Oakland A's.

Williams still has two years to go on a contract with Oakland and Finley has vowed to hold him to it, unless the Yankees agree to suitable compensation.

New York thought Finley's idea of compensation was out of line—the Oakland owner was reported to be after two of the top prospects in the Yanks farm system—and asked American League president Joe Cronin to rule on the case.

When Cronin delayed his ruling, the Yanks decided to start without him.

"... Our club felt it was in the best interests of the Yankees and our fans to obtain Dick Williams without any further delay," said Paul.

Finley had no comment on Williams' move.

"I'd prefer to stay mum at this time," he said from his Lapor e, Ind., home.

"The only thing I can tell you is that I got a telegram from Cronin asking me to be in Boston on Dec. 19. I presume that he plans to announce his ruling on the Williams matter then."

Among the concerned parties are Detroit Tigers and their new manager Ralph Houk. Houk quit the Yankees at the close of the season and signed with Detroit.

But when Oakland demanded compensation from New York in the Williams matter, New York turned around and demanded compensation from Detroit for Houk.

Paul was asked if the signing of Williams means the Yanks are dropping their claims against the Tigers.

"We're not dropping anything," he replied.

Paul said the Yankees had consulted their lawyers and were given assurances that they have a legal right to sign Williams. He declined, however, to elaborate on the club's legal thinking.

In Boston, Cronin admitted surprise as the Yankee action.

"We gave them every opportunity and made every effort to have them settle this matter between themselves," he said. "When it became apparent that the parties could not settle it for themselves we set a hearing."

All parties are scheduled to appear in Boston next week to discuss the matter. Cronin is expected to meet with the Yankees and Tigers Tuesday, and the Yankees and A's Wednesday.

Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, in Nashville, Tenn., for a speaking engagement, said the signing of Williams didn't mean much to him.

"It doesn't really change the situation as far as I'm concerned. The matter remains one that, Joe Cronin has to deal with."

Williams, 44, comes to the Yanks after three years at great success at Oakland. The two-time American League manager of the year has guided the A's to three division championships and two World Series victories in three years in the job.

Williams broke into the majors with Brooklyn Dodgers in 1951 and ended his playing career as an outfielder with Boston Red Sox in 1964.

After two years as manager of the old Toronto Maple Leafs of the International League, he returned to Boston as manager and won an American League pennant in his first year.

The Sox sagged to fourth and third-place finishes the next two years, however, and Williams was fired. After coaching Montreal Expos in 1971, he took over the A's.

He became the 19th manager in the Yankees' 73-year history.

Sandy Hawley Has 3 to Go

DICK WILLIAMS

LAUREL, Md. (CP) — Jockey Sandy Hawley waited until the ninth race Thursday before he picked up his only win of a nine-race card aboard King Of France, giving him 497 for the season.

Hawley, 24-year-old Whitby, Ont., native, who passed Bill Shoemaker's world record of 485 wins last week, now is three short of his stated goal of 500 triumphs in one season.

King Of France returned $5.40, $4.00 and $3.

Hawley also finished second with Hurtado in the sixth race for a payoff of $9.20 and $5.80. He was third with Palace Whirl in the second, $5, and third with Bet or Judgepent in the eighth, $3.

Smuda in Two Upsets

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Merv Smuda of Hamilton upset two Toronto rinks, including Paul Savage, in opening competition of the sixth annual Ontario Curling Association challenge round Thursday.

Seven other rinks also had two victories, while eight suffered two defeats and were eliminated from the 32-rink field.

At stake are two berths in the Ontario men's championship, Feb. 4-9 in Toronto. The two rinks will compete in the provincial final without having to win in their respective divisions.

Smuda took a 7-6 win over Savage, defending Ontario champion in the first round, then whipped Alf Phillips, Jr., 12-5 in the second.

Other two-game winners were Jim Waite of St. Thomas, Doug Creighton of St. Catharines, Gary King of Ottawa and Joe Grzywowka, Barry Coleman, Bill Creber and Ron Wills, all of Toronto.

Eliminated were John Scott of Gravenhurst, Bill Lewis of Kingston, Tom Steen of Oshawa, Terry Begin and Randy Lanctot, both of Ottawa; Jim Creighton and Bob Weeds, both of Toronto; and Ray Grant of Unionville.

Savage stayed alive with a 10-7 win over Begin. Phillips also remained in contention in the modified double-knockout tournament with a 10-5 triumph over Begin.

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The Free Press says three teams from Ontario and one each from the Soviet Union, Sweden and Czechoslovakia will take part in an international hockey tournament beginning Dec. 26 in Cambridge, Ont.

In a telephone interview from Ottawa, Darwin said it was left up to him to persuade the individual NHL teams to allow their players to take part in the game.

Darwin said Gordon Juckes, executive director of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, also approved of the plan and indicated the Moscow team probably would go ahead with it as well.

Government of Professors Changes Life in Thailand

BANGKOK (AP) — Some of the ways of life have changed in Thailand since students overturned the military government in October and set up a "government of professors" to bring back democracy for the first time in 25 years.

For example, getting an identification card, which one needs in changing jobs or addresses, used to take three months. Now it takes about a week.

The old premier, Field Marshal Thanom Kittikachorn, came to his office in a limousine. The new one, Prof. Sanya Thammasak, comes in a compact.

Taxi drivers have stopped paying off police who used to shake them down for alleged minor traffic violations.

The new director-general of the immigration department makes personal inspections to see that employees no longer overstay their lunch hours, which sometimes lasted until late afternoon.

Premier Sanya, appointed by King Bhumibol during the student uprising, has started a few reforms. The big ones will be the job of the elected government provided for in a new constitution he has promised by mid-April.

"I have no political future and do not want one," the 65-year-old university rector has said. "The students feel their years and lives to make possible a return to democracy. My cabinet's job is to make their wishes real."

To do this the cabinet has been concentrating on erasing a military style of government and ensuring the survival of democracy in Thailand, which has had nine constitutions and as many coups d'etat since emerging from absolute monarchy in 1932.

Meanwhile, the students have emerged as Thailand's only political bloc.

Their working relationship with Sanya's cabinet, more than half of whom are academics has been close.

A government liaison body headed by the commander of the communism suppression command, Lt.-Gen. Saiyud Kerdpol, meets with student leaders at least twice a week. One reason for appointing an army general to run the liaison office was to heal military-student relations that had been damaged during the last decade.

The 400,000-member National Student Centre of Thailand has been mustering support for the caretaker government and building an organization to give Thailand's five million students a strong voice.

Political science and economics schools of Bankok's major universities are still in recess while students man the student centre's phones, mimeograph machines and field teams. Support flows in from farmers, merchants and civil servants.

Thanet Charoenmuang, vice-president for political, social and educational affairs at the national centre, has sent two student groups upcountry to explain to farmers, merchants and teachers about the coming of democracy.

The short-range aim, Thanet says, is to prepare "to elect representatives and some principles of the democratic system.

"We have emphasized that there is no more 'Bangkok government' as the last military regime said. It is now the people's government."

He said the teams have been greeted with cheers and donations.

Premier Sanya has selected people from all professions to work on his constitution drafting committee.

Suggestions from student leaders for a bill of rights, freedom of speech and petition and free education are already incorporated in the draft.

But fears of a possible return of military rule exist. Thailand's military is a class unto itself with its own banks, schools, sports organizations and transportation system. Made up of 200,000 men in a country of 36 million, it remains a power that the predominantly civilian government must come to terms with.

Sanya also has ordered police and soldiers, who are working to suppress the more than 7,000 armed insurgents in Thailand, to become teachers in remote villages in an effort to create a better relationship between the public and the military.

So far the caretaker government has taken few concrete steps to deal directly with problems like poverty, inflation and urbanization.

By way of preparation, however, the government transferred some provincial governors who were suspected of corruption.

In an effort to shorten the gap between Thailand's wealthy and middle classes and the poor, the government removed or reduced taxes on domestically produced food and other necessities and made up the loss by jacking up taxes on cigarettes, alcoholic beverages and other luxuries.

Logical Conclusion

LONDON (CP) — The Daily Express confidently predicted in a story on a government report on drinking habits: "British faces an explosion in alcoholism—with the prospect of a million addicts by 1986. And most of these will be men and women."

Suicides Cannot Be Stopped

HALIFAX (CP) — A psychiatry professor at Dalhousie University has found in a recent study that most suicides are not preventable.

Dr. Solomon Hirsch, also a psychiatrist at Victoria General Hospital, made the conclusion during a study of suicides in Halifax in 1972.

Dr. Hirsch said only a small percentage of seriously suicidal persons use help-line services and there is no way to get to the severely troubled person.

"It can not be overstressed that many people who are seriously suicidal will not call help lines and that they will frequently reject help when close relatives, friends or physicians try to offer it. Every experienced psychiatrist will have had cases of suicide which no technique currently known could have prevented."

Many people who call help lines in Halifax have not been considered seriously suicidal and were just looking for someone to talk to.

Another factor hindering study of suicides, Dr. Hirsch said, is that it's difficult to obtain complete and reliable data on suicides from doctors, clergymen, police, hospitals and other agencies.

Dr. Hirsch's study showed the Halifax-Dartmouth-Halifax County area, which has a population of 300,000, had a suicide rate of 15.8 per 100,000 population in 1972. The Canadian rate in 1971 was 11.9 per 100,000.

Of 41 suicides here studied in 1972, 31 were males and 10 were females. The most common method was shooting, used by 17 males and two females. Other methods included hanging, drowning, stabbing and jumping from heights.

In 35 suicides for which detailed information was available, many had seen a psychiatrist a few days or weeks prior to the suicide.

Of the 50 persons who, during the study year, expressed a desire to commit suicide or make suicide attempts about one of every 18 actually did so.

Of the patients making attempts, about 90 per cent were under age 40 and more than three-quarters of the gestures were drug overdoses.

Less than one per cent of deaths are the result of drug overdoses because many severely suicidal persons use more violent and certain methods. Dr. Hirsch said, and drug overdoses may not be fatal if a person is taken to a hospital emergency ward.

Suicide prevention programs are increasing in Canada but do not seem to make significant changes in the suicide rates. "Some suicide prevention programs have found an actual increase in the rate of suicide immediately following the opening of service."

There are enough government grants and financial support available for psychiatric research but there are not enough people doing the research.

"We need another genius like Dr. Freud . . . someone with new ideas on psychiatric problems to carry out research. People with good research ideas are rare."

But psychiatric treatment does prevent some suicides because "one of the major illnesses responsible for suicides, severe depression, usually responds readily to treatment."

However depression was a major factor in only a small number of the 41 persons studied. "Depression was often present but only as part of the total psychiatric picture. Most cases of suicide are not preventable by any technique known at the present time."

Five Congo Missions Find Tourist Assets

BRAZZAVILLE (Reuter) — Great rushing rivers, vast forests, abundant wildlife and sandy ocean beaches are among the natural resources the Congo Republic hopes to develop as major tourist attractions.

And studies by five expert missions have encouraged officials of this equatorial African country's tourism department in the belief that it can be done.

The missions—Italian, Bulgarian, Canadian, from the World Bank and the Hexafric company—all made on-the-spot studies of the potential for international tourism.

The Canadian, Italian and Bulgarian reports underlined the natural beauties of the area around Pointe-Noire, a port city on the Atlantic Ocean, sited on a great bay called the Loango and bordered by the ramparts of the Mayombe Forest, one of the biggest in the world.

Hotels built on the bay would have magnificent views on both the ocean and the coast. And there are lagoons which could be developed as vacation sites.

A comparison was made of this coastal area with African resort centres which already attract foreign tourists, such as Mombasa in Kenya, Dar es Salaam in Tanzania and Kribi in Cameroun. It was found that in terms of climate, sunshine and rainfall, quality of sand and water, the bay offers similar conditions.

With a dense river network, the Congo offers vast possibilities for river fishing. Exciting catches for sportsmen include the bongo, or dogfish, and the capitaine—both carnivorous fish weighing between 65 and 130 pounds—and a white, well-finished catfish, all big and combative.

"For hunting and sightseeing, the Congo has vast game reserves and national parks covering some 100,000 acres, although their distance from urban centres may explain the lack of a development policy in these areas in the past.

Congolese authorities are looking to the construction, with help from an Italian firm, of rest and lodging stations in these areas.

The Congo's long-term planning, for the period to 1980, envisages studies for over-all development of tourism and hunting as well as training of staff, with the creation of a hotel school, and development of a policy encouraging Congolese artists and artisans.

MUSIC WHILE YOU RUSH

TORONTO (CP) — Veteran band leader Benny Louis wants to see piped music installed in the Toronto subway system and the Toronto Transit Commission is interested. Louis, who has been asked by the TTC to submit a report, says the speakers could be arranged in such a way that travellers who didn't want to listen to the music or news reports could easily move out of earshot. He said the system would cost $100,000 to install and $60,000 a year to operate.

Help your son get ahead.

This boy knows that courtesy is good business

Newspaper route management can be a boy's first step forward

A BOY with a newspaper route truly is in business for himself. With an assist from our people who are experienced in working with boys.

He buys his newspapers from us and retails them to you.

He sells, he delivers, and he collects. Like any good businessman, he keeps records (you can see how valuable this is in applying the lessons he learns in the classroom in a practical way).

And like any good businessman, he shows a profit. A boy with a newspaper route earns money that can help him build a sizable bank account of his own. Useful for the things he wants. Even for a college education.

Not only does a newspaper route sharpen a young boy's business sense (which will be helpful to him throughout life no matter what career he chooses). It also offers him some important extras — the ability to deal with people, and the lessons of promptness, of care, of self-reliance, and of good manners.

In these ways, a newspaperboy manages to keep a step ahead of other boys in preparing for life.

If your son wants to handle a route, put him in touch with us. One may be available for him in your neighborhood. It will be an unusual opportunity for the self-advancement you want him to have.

Mountain of Sand

Douglas Murray, employee of the Belleville Public Works Department actually is not practicing mountain climbing. Rather, he is atop a mountain of sand stockpiled at the public works yards on Coleman Flats in readiness for spreading on city streets and sidewalks this coming winter. So far this season there has been no call for the sand with talk only being used following the slight snowfall received over the past weekend. The city uses about 2,000 tons of sand and 2,500 tons of salt during an average winter.

Heart Attack Victim Finds Ireland Terrifying

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — A Brampton man arrested in Northern Ireland nine months ago on a possession of explosives charge returned a free man Sunday after having lived for nine months in terror of the IRA.

Cecil Baxter, 44, said in an interview he wanted to take a last look at his birthplace, Ireland, following a heart attack and a premonition that he may not live too long.

He said on March 30, 1973, he and three friends were out rabbit hunting in a field near Belfast when they were approached by police, coupled with three others found in possession of a mortar in another field, and charged together.

Mr. Baxter said a policeman testified in court that he was an explosives expert for the Loyalists which made him a natural target for the IRA.

The case was dismissed with the judge agreeing that there wasn't enough evidence to support the charges against Mr. Baxter and his three friends.

He said he was forced to stay in Belfast until his trial last Wednesday. Four weeks after his arrest, he was released on bail but had to report to the police each week and couldn't leave the country.

Land Use Proposal Is Denied by Welch

TORONTO (CP) — Housing Minister Robert Welch Thursday denied reports that the government has asked developers to cut their land prices in exchange for quick provincial approval of subdivision lots.

Mr. Welch said in an interview the published report was speculative, adding that the government had come to no decision on details of a crash housing program for the province.

He said his ministry has made no approach to developers.

The report said the government made the offer in the hope developers could cut the price of land for housing by 15 per cent.

A separate inter-ministry group, headed by Eli Comay, a Toronto consultant, has been created to come up with proposals to assemble 100,000 housing lots in a crash program.

TORONTO (CP) — A new traffic warning device under test here for a month has proved highly successful, the Ontario Provincial Police said. The device is mounted on top of police cars and carries a series of messages directing motorists around accident or diversion spots. Floodlights and flashing red lights illuminate the signs.

Control of Election Expenses Is Being Considered by MPs

By R. J. ANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

It's a truism of politics that he who spends the most gets. The best candidate in an election may not necessarily win if he's throttled by a shortage of campaign cash.

Ideally, say proponents of electoral reform, the state should finance all elections to attract good candidates and to avoid possible kinsky-panky in office if a winner is beholden to a campaign contributor.

The next best thing, says the federal government, is to put a light rein on campaign spending, make disclosure of contributions compulsory and then refund to candidates at least part of the money laid out. A bill to this is bogged down in Commons committees with no indication when, or if, it will become law.

Moves to control spending and to force public disclosure of sources of funds have gained momentum in Canada this year in the wake of election scandals in the United States. But no ruling tide of public indignation came to the surface in a Gallup Poll Survey to The Canadian Press.

Only one or two corporations would admit for publication that they contributed to election campaign expenses. Most individuals also were cagey.

To control spending in federal elections, Bill C-203 now before the Commons would amend the Canada Elections Act, the Broadcasting Act and the Income Tax Act. It's a tougher bill than one tabled with the last Parliament. It was referred to a standing committee by the elections and privileges committee Oct. 30 and there it rests.

Bill C-203 would limit a candidate to $1 for each of the first 15,000 eligible voters in his riding, 50 cents for each of the next 10,000 and 25 cents for each voter over 25,000.

On the basis of the 1972 voters' list, this means that in the constituency with the largest number of eligible voters—Scarborough, the Toronto-area seat held by Revenue Minister Jerry Stanbury, with 113,642 eligible voters—a candidate would be limited to a maximum expenditure of $42,160.50.

In Yukon, the riding with the fewest voters, held by Progressive Conservative Erik Nielsen, a candidate could spend no more than $10,587, the total number of eligible voters.

Allowance would be made for travel expenses in the far-flung Yukon.

Political parties would be limited to 20 cents for each eligible voter. Penalties for over-spending would go as high as $25,000.

It would be a criminal offence to contribute to a party or candidate except through a registered agent. Public disclosure of all campaign contributions exceeding $100 would be required. Contributions would be tax-deductible to a limit of $500.

Identification of donors would apply to individuals, corporations, trade unions and unincorporated organizations and associations.

Radio and television stations would be required to provide 6½ hours of prime time during a campaign, apportioned equally among the parties. Half the cost of such advertising would be paid for from the public treasury.

The bill also would provide for reimbursement from the public purse to successful candidates and those receiving 20 per cent of votes cast. The rate: 16 cents for each of the first 25,000 voters, 14 cents for each additional voter plus $250. Candidates would receive $250.

The bill, if passed, says Government House Leader Allan MacEachen, would give Canada "one of the most democratic and open electoral systems in the world."

On the provincial level, Manitoba has a law requiring disclosure of campaign donations and expenditures.

Political parties must file annual statements detailing expenses and donations of more than $25. Central committees within 60 days of an election must report expenditures and individual donations over $100. Individual candidates must report donations over $50.

Abstracts of such statements are published in the Manitoba Gazette but names of individual donors are not shown.

"I take the attitude that it's an invasion of personal privacy," says Jack Reeves, chief electoral officer.

In Newfoundland, where the Progressive Conservatives ended 20 years of power after 20 years of Joseph Smallwood's Liberalism, the guidelines are regulations and that a better standard response to reporting is probably.

Justice Minister T. Jack Hickman said in an interview the government is giving "serious consideration" to legislation covering disclosure of sources of campaign expenses for provincial or municipal elections but this will not come about before the next provincial election. There may not be called until the winter of 1977.

The Parti Québecois and opening party records to scrutiny. The Parti Créditiste says there always will be a way of getting around such regulations been told this secrecy method of controlling expenses must be found. It hasn't suggested a specific. The Liberals, in power, are saying little.

Only in Quebec and Nova Scotia does a province refuse to disclose election candidates and their legislation on this point is identical. Winning candidates and those who receive 15 per cent of the vote receive an amount not exceeding 25 cents for each registered voter.

Following changes in the Election Act in 1968, Nova Scotia insists that candidates and parties submit detailed statements of expenditures. But sources of funds need not be disclosed and no legislation requesting this is planned.

Limits are set on spending: $1 for each elector in a constituency where the number of voters is less than 5,000; 85 cents where there are more than 5,000 voters but fewer than 10,000; 75 cents where there are more than 10,000.

Sources of contributions to election campaign funds are seldom disclosed in New Brunswick and a select committee of the legislature, studying election procedures, sources of donations also should be lifted.

The New Brunswick Federation of Labor said in a brief: "Our federation does not dispute the right of organizations or individuals to give financial support to policies, candidates or parties of their choice.

"We do, however, strongly object to the covert manner in which contributions are given."

There has been no pressure in Prince Edward Island for enactment of legislation making compulsory disclosure of sources of campaign moneys. Neither has there been an instance of a politician voluntarily revealing his sources of such funds.

Ontario Premier William Davis last March promised action on proposals for reform of Ontario's system of political party financing but this has been put off until 1974. The Ontario commission on the legislature, headed by Dalton Camp, has told the premier its report will not be ready until about April.

In Saskatchewan, a government bill which died on the order paper last spring would have limited parties to spending only $20,000 in a campaign, with individual candidates limited to $6,000-$7,000. Disclosure of amounts and penses. The government is would have been required.

Liberal Leader Dave Steuart said the amounts proposed were too low and the bill "tremendously difficult" to enforce.

Saskatchewan now requires detailed disclosures of expenses but not of sources of contributions. Such statements may be inspected by the public on payment of a 25-cent fee.

Alberta has no regulations covering disclosure of campaign-fund sources or expenses. The government is studying recommendations of a legislative committee that took a close look at the Alberta Election Act. No action is in sight.

Provincial Secretary Errol Hall of British Columbia says regulations requiring disclosure of sources of campaign funds will be incorporated in changes to be made in B.C.'s Election Act but that won't come before the fall of 1974 or the spring of 1975. Limitations will be put on donations for provincial election campaigns.

There is no record of a B.C. politician disclosing the source of his campaign funds but George Johnston, president of the B.C. Federation of Labor, said unions contribute to the federation's political education fund. This money is used in support of NDP candidates.

Said Jack Cody, president of Local 213 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers:

"As far as I am concerned the funds are given with the members' authorization.

"We don't give a damn whether other people know about it."

Chief Maurice Wolfe of Ermineskin Band stands in front of detoxification centre — the only one in Canada initiated and operated by Indians on the Hobbema reserve, 50 miles south of Edmonton. Major Parties Reluctant To Reveal Source of Funds

By R. J. ANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Election campaigns cannot be fought without money.

Any Canadian is free to contribute to the political party of his choice. So may a corporation, large or small. It's not illegal.

But there is reluctance in politics to disclose the source of campaign contributions, perhaps due an understandable fear that if the name of a donor were known there would be an inference of favors being extended in return by an elected candidate.

Reluctance was pronounced in the two major parties, less so in the New Democratic Party, in replies to a Canadian Survey by The Canadian Press on where political chiefs get the money to run their election campaigns.

Moves now afoot to require that sources of such funds be made public have made little headway.

"Don't quote me" was the tenor of almost every comment made in the survey. There also was a barely suppressed feeling among the replies that if identification of sources became a legal requirement, large contributors would shy away.

The president of a New Brunswick construction company—who refused to be quoted by name—said political contributions by large companies are common in that province.

said.

"Everybody does it," he

He said laws requiring disclosure of political donations would never be passed in New Brunswick.

"I don't know of any politician who would pass such a law."

His own company made contributions through a special account which appeared in the records but he said some companies pass "tidied money" to politicians.

In Newfoundland, where allegations of bribery and unrendered reward contracts to Liberal party supporters have flown freely since the Progressive Conservatives came to power, no one would be quoted by name.

"This is an extremely sensitive area here," was one comment.

A millionaire known to support the Liberals and now said to contribute to the Progressive Conservatives ended an interview with a threat of public denial if his name or comments were used.

For the record, party heads are not averse to public disclosure, to a point.

Robert Stanfield, Progressive Conservative leader, said last spring that it would be a better, cleaner political world if sources of contributions were made public, but not necessarily by name.

"Suspicion and concern abound in the public mind," Mr. Stanfield said in a national television address. "We have to ask ourselves if we will be going through yet another election with no reform in effect."

But Mr. Stanfield said that "below a realistic nominal contribution" the disclosure should be by category, not by name.

The Liberal position pre-sumably is given in a bill, now before the Commons, that would make compulsory disclosure of sources of income, by name. But the bill has not passed beyond committee-stage consideration.

The NDP, with the least to lose, is all for public disclosure. Its funds come largely from small contributors. If there has been a donation in the tens of thousands of dollars there is no record of it.

NDP Leader David Lewis hits what he terms Liberal and PC dependence upon "big-buck corporation donations." He has said this results in "an inevitable close relationship" that affects the way such parties govern.

Prof. Khayyam Paltiel, a political scientist at Carleton University in Ottawa, reported earlier this year that in the federal field, the Liberal party remains the largest fund-raiser and spender of campaign funds but that the Conservatives, after some lean years, are closing the gap rapidly everywhere except in Quebec.

Quoting figures he said were supplied by senior party officials, Prof. Paltiel said the Liberals raised a record $6.5 million for the 1972 election, the Conservatives $3.9 million and the NDP $365,918.

The Liberals emerged from the campaign in healthier financial shape than they occupied at. They said they spent $5.3 million, using $600,000 of their balance to discharge debts and banking the remainder for the next election.

The Conservatives and the NDP reported deficits of $200,000 and $4,726, respectively.

Prof. Paltiel noted what he termed the "important advantage of incumbency." That includes government aircraft used by Cabinet ministers and the deployment of ministerial assistants as election organizers. He estimated a constituency was worth $250,000 to the Liberals.

One NDP leader, Jeremy Akerman in Nova Scotia, had doubts that disclosure of sources of campaign funds would be a good thing for his party.

Disclosure "by and large is a good thing but many individuals will stop contributing."

Mr. Akerman said that in the case of his own party, some civil servants and professional people might have second thoughts about contributing if their names were made public.

Ultimately, he said, the public should be prepared to finance elections through taxation to eliminate abuses.

Mr. Akerman noted that even NDP Premiers Ed. Schreyer (Manitoba), David Barrett (B.C.) and A. E. Blakeney, Saskatchewan "haven't had the guts" to bring in such legislation.

In Alberta, Hu Harries, Liberal member of Parliament for Edmonton Strathcona from 1968 to 1972, said he had intended voluntarily to disclose the sources of his campaign funds for the 1972 election, in which he was defeated.

He changed his mind when he found "the whole thing is completely phoney." He had listed the source of all funds but "my friends were just putting in total amounts and I didn't dare file it," because he would think I was exposing them."

Another defeated Edmonton Liberal, Mel Hurtig, ran a full-disclosure campaign in 1972. He accepted no more than $1,000 from any individual or corporation and, withholding from foreign-owned or controlled companies.

No winning candidate in Alberta in 1972 revealed the sources of his funds.

One corporation executive who came close to admitting that his company contributed to political party coffers was Bill Harrison, executive vice-president of B.C. Forest Products Ltd.:

"Those who are running for office should like to have ways of running their expenses which they can justify in the claim of the public. It wouldn't embarrass us."

On the municipal level across the country, most politicians said they financed their own campaigns and that the question of disclosure did not an issue.

The borough of North York (population 530,000), which sprawls across Toronto's northern outskirts, last year enacted what it called "ideal policy" that municipal candidates file statements of contributions and expenditures.

Only two of the 19 aldermen and controllers did so completely.

One was Mayor Mel Lastman, who exemplified announced he is worth $8 million and has no fear of possible charges that he can be influenced.

In little Cobourg population 11,000 75 miles east of Toronto disclose-or-not is no problem for Mayor Hyrcyn Luther.

He didn't spend much—when he was first elected. That was 15 years ago and he has spent nothing since. He got in by acclamation each time.

Most Experts Predict Boom Year for Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — Most economic experts charted another boom year for Canadians in 1974, but tempered by continuing steep inflation and worries over a growing fuel shortage in the East.

The government of Prime Minister Trudeau raised benefits and subsidies to help welfare and low-income families meet climbing living costs, but was also pressed by the Arab boycott and clamoring oil men to lift a freeze on oil prices, bringing higher heating and driving costs this winter in much of Eastern Canada.

Mr. Trudeau, supported by business groups such as the Canadian Manufacturers Association, continued to resist Progressive Conservative demands for wage-price controls. There was also a continuing clash with opposition parties over government oil policies.

The government said there was little it could do to insulate Canadians from worldwide inflation, but there was something it could do about fuel.

The "energy crisis" carried the potential for both good and ill for the economy Fuel shortages this winter might slow industrial production and cause job layoffs.

But it also appeared to create a national consensus for speeded-up development of the Athabasca oil sands in Alberta and exploration for new Arctic and off-shore oil that might mean major new investments and jobs.

The government spent every effort to get oil from Western Canada by barge, pipe, truck and train to head off the budding shortage in Quebec and the Maritimes and made long-range plans to extend the Interprovincial Pipeline facilities from Sarnia, Ont., to Montreal to make the country more nearly self-sufficient in its oil supplies.

"This decision means we will be much closer to having one Canada' instead of 'two' for oil purposes. . . . This will ensure better security of supply for all Canadians, no matter how volatile the nature of oil and politics abroad," the prime minister told Canadians in a countrywide telecast.

Meanwhile, the government's 1973 projections—formulated before the oil crisis—that Canada would show an economy-straining expansion of seven per cent or more were right on target. Most federal and private forecasts were for a little slower but still strong growth of between five and six per cent in 1974.

One major group of business advisers, the Conference Board of Canada, thought it would be less—in the range of 4% per cent.

Industry Minister Alastair Gillespie reported a government survey showing 200 large corporations comprising 50 per cent of the nation's economy were planning expansions totalling 21 per cent in construction, machinery and equipment.

The figure did not include the large but still tentative energy-developing projects such as the oil sands and the proposed $5-billion Mackenzie Valley natural gas pipeline that could be hastened by fuel shortages.

Finance Minister John Turner told Canadians not to get panicky about the threat of an oil shortage this winter. He said the nation should start planning for massive new development of its energy resources under Canadian financing and control.

The Canadian Chamber of Commerce urged a federal-provincial meeting on energy problems, and Mr. Trudeau said "I hope that all the premiers will soon join me in a national energy conference of first ministers."

Statistics Canada reported that the nation's economic growth slowed sharply in the third quarter from its earlier exceptional 1973 growth, largely because of railroad and paper industry strikes and shortages of production capacity, but said continuing strong demand for business investment indicated underlying strength in the economy.

"However, there is considerable concern about the impact on future production and prices of the world-wide energy crisis precipitated by the curtailment of oil shipments by Middle Eastern countries," it cautioned.

Thus, the "energy crisis" affected virtually every economic analysis, as well as worrying the man in the street.

As the government's voluntary oil price freeze was lifted in the east and import prices climbed, retail prices went up as much as five cents per gallon, bringing heating oil to 32 cents a gallon in much of Eastern Canada and gasoline prices higher than 70 cents in some areas.

Mr. Trudeau, whose government had already pumped more than $200 million to consumers in the final months of 1973 in the form of food subsidies and higher family and old-age assistance, indicated he would take additional measures to protect Canadians from unjustified oil price boosts.

"The end of the freeze (on oil prices) will not mean the government is going to allow Canadian oil prices to be identical with world prices, no matter how far up world prices go."

But, he added, the cost of developing new sources such as the Athabasca oil sands and Arctic and offshore oil is vastly more expensive than producing from today's conventional oil wells in Western Canada and "the days of cheap and abundant energy are over."

He urged Canadians to heed government appeals to conserve fuel by turning down thermostats and slowing highway speeds.

"I want to emphasize one other point. Under no circumstances will the government permit fuel to be diverted from those who need it most, to those who can pay the most," the prime minister said.

Government figures on the third quarter of 1973 showed that in real terms, after allowance for inflation, the economy grew only fourtenths of one per cent to an annual rate of $118.1 billion at current prices. This was a cut of nearly half the second-quarter growth and only a little more than one-sixth the first quarter's extraordinary expansion.

The report indicated consumers were tightening their belts somewhat in the face of inflation.

"In particular declines were registered in outlays on furniture and most electrical appliances" in the third quarter, Statistics Canada said.

Spending on clothes rose strongly, and while spending on food increased, Canadians were getting less for their money because of rising prices.

"Large increases in expenditure on gasoline, oil and heating fuels reflected price rises," it added.

Forecasts from a number of groups, including the Economic Council of Canada and the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, indicated Canadians will face a continued steep climb in living costs in the new year.

They said there was little hope price jumps would be much less than the rate in 1973, which saw consumer prices in October up 8.7 per cent over the previous year.

Trenton Mother One of Participants in Healing Process

TORONTO (CP) — The Hospital for Sick Children has opened its doors to accommodate mothers bringing their children from across the province but has found many people are unaware of the new facilities.

An entire floor of a nurses' residence has been given over to a Care-by-Parent unit, where mothers and children are accommodated in a home-style atmosphere—with cooks and meals all paid for by the Ontario Hospital Insurance Plan (OHIP).

The unit also includes a hostel where mothers can have a room for $5 a night or $30 a week if their children are required to stay in the hospital proper, a short walk away via an underground tunnel.

Care-by-parent accommodation offers mothers the opportunity to live in with their children undergoing treatment. It allows OHIP to save on the cost, of an expensive hospital room for the child and also on nursing staff, whom mothers take care of children.

For the children the unit spares many of the difficulties of hospital confinement and yet makes treatment and consultation readily available.

A Trenton mother, Carolyn Scidmore, whose six-year-old Christopher suffers from multiple congenital abnormalities, describes the Care-by-Parent unit as "perfect for group therapy.

"Living with mothers who have sick children, makes us all happier. We share experiences, joys and sorrows and our children develop a sense of community.

"The whole concept of hospitals tends to ignore basic family relationships. Here, family structure is being used as a therapeutic device."

Mrs. Scidmore, administrator of a nursery school for the retarded in Trenton, said other hospitals might do well to establish similar units or others to allow a family to participate actively in the healing of one of its members.

The Care-by-Parent residence began its holiday season Friday as some mothers and children gathered around a Christmas tree in a large living-room and kitchen area of the floor.

U.S. Expects Oil

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Aides to U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger say the Arabs may resume limited oil shipments to the United States next month if the Geneva peace talks show some progress.

"The odds of the oil embargo being lifted next week are less than 50-50, but if you put it in terms of next month, the odds are better than 50-50," an official with Kissinger said Friday after the secretary met for 1½ hours with King Faisal of Saudi Arabia.

The Arab-Israeli peace talks are to start next Tuesday, Saudi officials suggested privately Friday that a strong U.S. call for big Israeli troop pullbacks would help get the oil flowing.

Kissinger spent the night in the Saudi capital and today was to take his Middle East peace mission to Damascus for talks with Syrian President Hafez Assad.

Some sources feared that the Syrian stop would be "the most difficult and unrewarding" part of the tour because of that Arab country's tough stand against Israel's supporters.

Wells Talks To Teachers

TORONTO (CP) — While teachers were preparing for a Tuesday boycott of classes, Education Minister Thomas Wells was busy Friday trying to arrange a weekend meeting between himself, board of education chairmen and teacher negotiators.

About 20,000 teachers are expected to attend a rally at Maple Leaf Gardens Tuesday, then carry their protest against the Ontario government's controversial education bill to Queen's Park.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for the ministry of education said Friday Mr. Wells has sent telegrams to the chairmen of 16 boards of education and teacher negotiators, summoning them to a meeting Sunday in an attempt to resolve the dispute that precipitated heated debate in the legislature this week.

The private meetings are "to ascertain if the ministry can assist with contract settlement," the spokesman said.

Indications are that if Mr. Wells brings about a settlement Sunday, there may no longer be a need for the legislation introduced this week to prevent 7,259 teachers from resigning.

However, a decision to withdraw the controversial bill must await the outcome of Sunday's meeting, he added.

Besides nullifying the resignations, the bill would impose compulsory arbitration if contract disputes are not settled by Jan. 3.

Bill Doherty, chairman of the co-ordinating committee set up by the Ontario Teachers' Federation (OTF), said Friday the rally will be addressed by the presidents of the five provincial teachers organizations.

Organizers also expect speakers from the Ontario Federation of Labor, the Canadian Labor Congress and representatives from the Toronto board of education, the Canadian Union of Public Employees, the Civil Service Association of Ontario and the Civil Liberties Association.

Two additional teachers' organizations added their support Friday to next week's boycott. The Toronto Teachers' Federation voted 86 per cent in favor of the move with 2,716 of the group's 3,000 members participating in the vote. It also decided to ask parents Monday to keep their children home on Tuesday.

In announcing the results of a vote by the Frontenac County Elementary School Teachers Association, its president, Ian Stewart, said the walkout was a show of solidarity, not a walkout against the Frontenac County board.

The executive council of the Ontario Dental Association Friday added its name to the long list of organizations supporting the teachers and demanding withdrawal of the bill.

Dr. R. L. Moran, president of the association, said the council feels the legislation "represents a serious infringement of teachers' civil rights which would set a dangerous precedent for other professional and labor groups."

Labor Problems Amplify Crisis

LONDON (Reuter) — The government faced a new confrontation with Britain's biggest trade union today as the country calmly digested the gravity of the ever-worsening energy and financial crisis.

Leaders of the 1.4-million-member Amalgamated Union of Engineering Workers decided Friday to press for a work slowdown in support of a $25-a-week pay increase.

They also demanded the convening of a special session of the Trades Union Congress (TUC), which groups all unions, in order to bring the entire movement into conflict with the government over its anti-inflation policies.

Many families brought out candles as thousands of homes were blacked out in and around London and in the industrial Midlands. Low coal supplies and a work slowdown by power workers were blamed.

On Thursday, Prime Minister Edward Heath announced that British industry will go on a three-day work week in order to conserve dwindling fuel supplies caused by industrial action at home and oil supply cuts from Arab states.

The state-owned British Steel Corp. warned Friday night it may have to lay off 100,000 workers because of production cuts caused by the shortened week.

Government policy on holding down wage increases suffered another setback Friday when it was announced that domestic inflation hit an annual rate of 10.3 per cent last month—the highest for almost 2½ years.

The figures also revealed that food prices have increased by 18.8 per cent in the last year and that the cost-of-living index has risen by 46.2 per cent since June, 1970, when the Conservative government took office.

Alberta Debate Concludes

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta government ended three months of television work Friday to give itself sweeping new powers to control energy but Premier Peter Lougheed says he still "can't afford the luxury of being tired."

The premier was speaking after LL-Gov. Grant MacEwan gave royal assent to bills that provide the cabinet with unprecedented power to set prices for most crude oil, buy and sell it and fix new tax rates for it.

A principal aim of the legislation, the premier has said, is to give the Alberta government a weapon to fight what it sees as increasing federal moves to take over provincial jurisdiction over mineral resources, given to the provinces in an amendment to the British North America Act.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon signed into law today a bill that will temporarily place the United States on year-round daylight time, starting Jan. 6.

Trucks Idle

NEW YORK (AP) — Determined to make their protest felt in Washington and by United States consumers, angry United States truckers say they will extend a two-day shutdown at least until Monday. The drivers, most of them independents who own their own rigs, are protesting high fuel costs and low speed limits brought on by the energy crisis.

Nixon's Nephew Involved?

LONDON (CP) — Former call girl Norma Levy alleges in a new book that many call-girl parties took place aboard financier Robert Vesco's private plane and says Donald Nixon, President Nixon's nephew, arranged details.

IBM Moves In

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says in a copyright story that IBM Canada Ltd. maintains salesmen in offices of 14 government departments. The ministries of health as well as Ontario Hydro are finding it advantageous to work in close proximity with the company's marketing representatives, the newspaper says.

Getty Returns Alive

ROME (AP) — "I'm Paul Getty, captain, give me a cigarette," the young man had said. "Look, they've cut off an ear."

Police said those were the first words muttered by J. Paul Getty III, the 17-year-old grandson of the American oil billionaire, after he was found early today in southern Italy.

The teen-ager, who disappeared in Rome the night of July 9, told authorities that kidnappers released him three hours earlier after more than five months of captivity.

Italian newspapers have been saying that the Getty family paid $2.7 million earlier this week for the boy's release. The kidnappers at one time are reported to have been demanding $17 million. The family has not confirmed paying the ransom.

Police said the youth was weak, hungry and exhausted when found standing under the shelter of a gas station 60 miles south of Salerno.

Wearing a heavy white sweater, grey pants and sneakers, he told police that he had not eaten for several days and during his captivity often had been moved around the country.

His physical condition is weak, but he's alive," said a spokesman for the national police. "His right ear is missing, and he is very run down physically."

Brought to a police station in Lagonegro, Getty was given a physical examination, drank a cup of coffee and ate a sweet roll and a plate of spaghetti.

"Finally it's over," his mother said as she embraced him. "Paul, only now can I begin living again. I always believed you.

Some police officials have doubted that the boy was really the victim of the kidnapping, but letters to the parents in Paul's handwriting urged them to believe he had been abducted and to co-operate with ransom demands.

A Rome newspaper last Nov. 10 received a severed ear and a lock of hair in the mail with a note saying they both belonged to Getty. The note also said that, if the ransom demands were not met, the kidnappers would cut off other parts of the boy's body.

Getty was said by friends to have stalked off from a Bohemian hangout in Rome's Piazza Navona section on the night of July 9 after a girl-friend refused to accompany him to a seashore resort.

Peacekeepers Ecstatic

CAIRO (CP) — Canada's peacekeeping troops here are ecstatic at yet receiving word from New York that they have been assigned the highly-prized air-support role for the whole United Nations Emergency Force in the Middle East.

Final details of the task were hammered out here early today by $1A-Col. Don Payne of Edmonton, chief air staff officer for the UN force.

Agreement in principle on Canada's standing offer to provide the airlift capacity was reached in New York earlier this week but arrangements for putting the plan into operation had to be worked out by officers in Cairo.

Initially, Canada will send about 80 personnel and three Buffalo aircraft early in January to fly much-needed supplies to contingents serving with the UN force in both Israel and Egypt.

Until a peace settlement is agreed between the two sides, the aircraft will be restricted in their movements to civilian air corridors and will not be allowed to fly to front-line positions.

MPs Holiday May be Brief

OTTAWA (CP) — "How does Parliament on Christmas Day sound to you?" That was the question. "Like a cold bath with my socks on!" That was the rejoinder.

That little exchange in the parliamentary press gallery Friday was feebly lighthearted—the worst thing that is likely to happen is that the House will rise next Friday and not before Dec. 21.

But MPs on both sides of the House are prepared for the worst, that their holiday might last only five days—time enough to fly home and back with Christmas sandwiched in between.

The problem is the minority Liberal government's energy conservation program—a bill to set up an emergency allocation board and another to raise the export tax on crude oil.

Frustrated at every turn by a united Liberal-New Democrat front that wants the proposed legislation passed before the House rises, the Conservatives are determined to push the government to the limit.

Congress Kept Lights On

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States House of Representatives kept its lights burning past midnight in a 15-hour working marathon and passed the emergency energy bill early today.

An anti-busing provision and a cutoff of petroleum exports for Indochina military purposes are among many controversials measures in the legislation that the House passed 265 to 115. The bill also gives President Nixon broad powers to deal with the energy crisis.

Congress also approved legislation on Friday to put the U.S. on year-round daylight time. If President Nixon signs the measure by Sunday, the U.S. would set its clocks ahead one hour Jan. 6.

The White House has said that shifting an hour of daylight from the morning to the evening could reduce electricity and heating demands by as much as three per cent, mainly in the North.

In other energy-related developments:

John Sawhill, deputy director of the Federal Energy Office, said conservation programs are expected to cut the U.S. oil shortage to 537,000 barrels a day during the next three months.

Transportation Secretary Claude Brinegar said efforts are under way to find more jet fuel for the airlines. He also said he sent a telegram to the airlines and oil companies encouraging them to find a different type of jet fuel than they now use.

A utility industry spokesman warned that consumers will soon be paying more for electricity. In recent weeks, at least 12 major power companies have applied for rate increases totalling $465 million.

The American Automobile Association said car travellers will not have much trouble finding gasoline early Christmas Eve but could run into problems later during the holiday.

Turbo Tryouts Start Monday

MONTREAL (CP) — The sleek Turbo train, plagued by technical problems for five years, is to go back into passenger service Monday, Canadian National announced Friday.

The railway said in a statement it would "resume testing of Turbos in passenger service between Montreal and Toronto Dec. 17."

A spokesman for the railway said the train, which has been inaugurated and then pulled out of service three times since 1968, will still be considered as undergoing tests while carrying the paying public.

"If the equipment continues its satisfactory performance, it will replace the Aftercrown Rapidos out of Montreal and Toronto early in the new year for an extended mileage test," the railway said.

Probation Broken, Youth Is Jailed

A Belleville youth has been sentenced to 15 days in jail after he was convicted, in provincial court, of having failed to obey a probation order that prohibited him from driving a car for two years.

Christopher Georgiou, 18, pleaded guilty to the charge of breaching his probation order when he appeared before Judge J. L. Clendenning.

Georgiou was arrested by police Oct. 25, after he was caught driving a car along Pine Street and Station Street.

In passing sentence Judge Clendenning noted that Georgiou had three previous convictions for breaches of probation.

"A breach of probation not only affects you, but it can affect others who may come before the courts and are eligible for a similar type of sentence," Judge Clendenning told Georgiou.

Archibald, You Villian

If you are a member of the Belleville Theatre Guild and you want to celebrate Christmas, what better way to do so than to put on a play. That is what they did Friday night at the Plumbley Playhouse. Students from the third year theatre arts course at Centennial Secondary School presented Theatre Guild members with a production of an old fashioned melodrama, Fireman Save My Child, for the play, a warmup for the school's forthcoming production of Hello Dolly! starred Bill Kitchen, the villian who here is about to strike a poor innocent millworker, Mary Lawson, played by Dianne Fox. The hero, dressed in white, was played by Dean MacCormack. Other members of the cast included Paul Kirby, Ann McDonell, Kim Peters, Kathy White and Jan Whetten.

The Games People Play

Just think, this Christmas you can conquer the world.

On the other hand, maybe that doesn't catch your fancy. You are the shy quiet type and you gave up those dreams of passion and glory a long time ago.

So - why not spend a million dollars or buy priceless art treasure or maybe even delve into the mysterious secrets of the past, the present and the future.

It's easily done. For anywhere between 50 cents and $10 you can have a game that is specifically designed to pamper your every whim.

Games aren't just for children. Most stationery, book and department stores in Belleville carry a complete line of games for adults.

If you are a television freak and love to watch those quiz shows where they give away thousands of dollars worth of prizes for remembering how to spell their name, then you'll just love to play with the quiz games.

Concentration is a game fashioned after a "popular" television series in which contestants match pairs of prizes and try to solve part of a puzzle. As a board game, it sells for only $5.50 and, despite the fact that there are no housewives frantically wagering for you everytime you play, it does closely resemble the real thing.

If you have a little imagination you can pretend that you are on the verge of winning that all expense paid trip to Mexico... if only you can remember where you last saw the 7 that matches the 7 in the upper left hand corner.

The potential self-made man, like every small boy's daydreamer, also has a number of games that are designed to foster and nourish his ego. There is that old favorite Monopoly, that sells for between $3.49 and $8.00 along with such games such as Go For Broke, which urges you to "spend a million" - it really only costs about $5. And then there is Masterpiece... The Art Auction Game, where you quietly buy all the paintings of the old masters and win the game after you have sold all your friends nothing but forgeries.

If you have the extremely quiet type and don't like to waste time and your love of a puzzle. As a board game, it sells for only $5.50 and, despite the fact that there are no housewives frantically wagering for you everytime you play, it does closely resemble the real thing.

If you have the extremely quiet type and don't like to waste time and your love of dreams on a chancy throw of the dice, then perhaps you would like to try your hand at a game of skill or a puzzle.

Jig saw puzzles are a great buy. For approximately 79 cents you can try to put together nine-tenths of a picture of the Effiel Tower and still have some pieces left over.

Or how about something like The Knight's Tour, the game that is patterened after the movement's made by a knight on a chess board? For $4.98 you buy a miniature chess board, one knight and 65 plastic discs. Since a knight can jump on all 64 squares of the board without ever touching the same square twice, all you have to do to win is make 65 jumps in such a way that all but the last one are onto different squares. Of course the final jump must return you to your original starting position.

If you don't trust your intellectual powers, or, if after putting them to the test, you finally decide that the occult is more to your liking, then you can buy a ouija board for as little as $2.69.

The mystical talking board promises "to foretell the future, recall the past and reveal the present." It also answers questions. Believe it or not.

Perhaps, after a few sessions at the ouija board, you may feel you have enough mystical power to try your hand once more at conquering the world. For just $9.99, a game like Risk allows you and five your friends the opportunity to wage war against whoever you want.

If you continually lose you can always go back to dreaming of winning that quiz game.

Driver Dies In Collision

A 20-year-old Belleville man was killed early this morning when the car he was driving went out of control and struck a hydro pole, on Highway 2 just east of the CPR tracks.

Dead is Jackie Arthur Lafec, 20, of 41 Elgin Street, Belleville.

The Belleville detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police reports that the Lafec car was eastbound on Highway 2, when it went out of control as it crossed the bridge over the railway tracks, crossed the south shoulder and struck the pole.

Two passengers in the car, Ray Lafec, 18, and 26 Harriett Street, and Donald Woods, 18, of 17 Elvira Gardens, received minor injuries in the accident and were treated and released from Belleville General Hospital.

The accident occured at 1:45 a.m.

Can the Schools Make Music ?

By MARGARET HAYLOCK

PICTON — The sound of music, at least the sound of band music, has disappeared from Prince Edward County.

The IOOF (Odd Fellows) Band recently announced its dispersal but no reason for the decision was offered. With the disappearance of this group of smartly uniformed musicians, Picton and Prince Edward have lost their brass.

Although the possibility of organizing a school band has been discussed several times by the county board of education the project never has been undertaken, partly because of the high cost of such a venture. School contacted trustees this month to announce that students are eager to form a band and instruments could be rented for approximately $1,000 annually. The school is willing to attempt to raise this amount each year.

Board members supported the idea for a band and issued an appeal to the public for the donation of unused instruments.

It is regrettable that in today's modern education system in Prince Edward there is no school band.

There are red carpets, home economics rooms furnished with modern appliances, a greenhouse, sewing machines, workshop tools and athletic equipment. But there is no band.

Students can learn dozens of always useful and occasionally useful skills but those interested cannot learn how to play in a band.

If a school band is not economically feasible in the school curriculum then perhaps the project could be undertaken by a service club. Students interested in joining such a band might take part in fund-raising campaigns to assist in offsetting the cost of instruments and instruction.

Older residents of Picton can recall the "good old days" when there were band concerts in the park on summer evenings. Small, boys were paid the princely sum of a quarter to hold torches permitting the musicians to see their music.

Today there are no concerts and no bands in town. The request by Wellington Consolidated School for support indicates that there are still boys and no bands in town. The reasons. Perhaps it's time the board of education assisted in striking up the band.

Trenton Bureau

They Didn't Plan on This

By COLIN BRUCE

Municipalities unrestricted by official plans are holding high cards in the development poker game.

Take, for example, the recent purchase by a Toronto developer of 45 acres of land on Stanton's boundary for a shopping plaza.

Town council is looking for development in the downtown core and only several weeks ago refused permission for an extension of Trenton's commercial district westward along Dundas Street.

But, while local developers have their operations monitored by a well-prepared and administered official plan designed to lead the community in a set direction, there are no such brakes in neighboring Sidney Township.

And the Toronto developer's bargain buy of 45 acres for $60,000 looks better all the time.

For, while the proposed shopping centre would draw all the benefits of being situated practically inside Trenton boundaries, in actual fact its developer may owe a dime's taxes to the community that sustains it.

But the real clincher will come when it's time to service the property. Trenton will be providing sewer and water mains through an established agreement with Sidney Township.

Imagine how downtown Trenton merchants must feel knowing their taxes are being used to help start a competitor in business, particularly when that opposition isn't even contributing to town coffers!

The price tag of the Sidney site of the project is also enough to make Trenton businessmen grimace with envy. The $60,00 price tag would likely be tripled if the centre were to be located a few hundred years east inside town limits.

Because Sidney Township has no official plan of its own, houses are springing up without sewers or water. Who is going to pay for that when regional government rumors become fact and Queen's Park tells the Quinte area to put its municipal houses in order?

Other parts of the province have seen the passage of building by-laws, designed to place temporary freezes on development until townships or municipalities can catch up on years of lost planning time.

The practice would be one worth emulating in these parts.

BIG ISLAND — A prosperous farm community and cottage site in Prince Edward County Big Island originally was settled by United Empire Loyalists.

This scenic settlement, about 12 miles north of Picton in the Bay of Quinte, frequently is omitted in historic accounts of the Quinte area although it has been a centre of activity for almost two centuries.

Big Island's first settler was Samuel Shaw, a Loyalist from New York State who built the first frame house ever erected in the community. Today, it remains in good condition and is the south wing of a spacious farm house owned by Ernest Edwards.

Another early settler was George Boulter of Vermont, who raised a family of 21 children. His youngest child Wellington Boulter, became a leading factory magnate in Prince Edward County using the Little Chief brand.

A third UEL settler, Jeremiah DeLong, a prosperous farmer. His property with its fine buildings was reported to have been "the showplace of Sophiasburg." Visitors came from a wide area to inspect the varieties of fruit he cultivated.

The early history of Big Island is colorfully described in an account written by one of its oldest natives, the late C. S. Sprague, who died recently at the age of 96.

Mr. Sprague recalled several wharves being built. With the arrival of the "barley days" farmers formed a joint stock company and constructed a new wharf in front of the church and schoolyard.

The new structure had a weigh house with 40-ton scales and an elevated track six feet high. The track was equipped with a car capable of carrying 100 bushels of grain and workers could readily load 12,000 or 13,000 bushels on a schooner in one day.

Mr. Sprague, at 17 worked as weigh master and shipper and could recall when three large schooners would lie at anchor waiting to be loaded.

He credited the United States' McKinley Tariff with the ruin of many Canadian ners. The price of barley had been about one dollar a bushel. Barley and wheat prices toppled.

Mr. Sprague's chronicle reflects on the wages of the day. Working from dawn to night earned a dollar a day.

Big Island although only ten miles around, at one time boasted four school houses. Teachers were paid $12.50 a month with free board. Farmers took turns billeting them by the week. When a teacher had "gone the rounds" he started over again in this somewhat nomadic system.

Although Big Island was connected to the mainland by a corduroy bridge across the marsh, farmers seemed to live largely independent of nearby settlements like Demorestville and Picton.

Farm women made and traded butter and other produce for household goods. Clothing was homespun. Money did not change hands.

Big Island today is connected with the mainland by a causeway rebuilt last summer. There is no difficulty communicating. The island's schools have disappeared following county centralization.

Tourists enjoy holidaying on Big Island. Because of its scenic shoreline the community is an ideal location for summer homes. For a number of years hockey superstar Bobby Hull and family vacationed in an historic stone house.

Farmers still work the land on Big Island.

Ernest Edwards, who lives in the first frame house built on the island, farms his land and keeps cattle. Keenly interested in Standardbred horses he is now breeding them.

He says he enjoys the solitude of the island and particularly appreciates the magnificent view. A former resident of Toronto, he has lived on Big Island for a number of years and now considers it home.

Located in Sophiasburg township the island has approximately 48 lots. Although well settled, it is not heavily built up and retains much of its original tranquility.

There are no stores on Big Island and no industries. In early days, however, there was a cheese factory and canning factory. Hops was a prime crop.

Ignored by most popular accounts of early life in Prince Edward, Big Island emerges, on closer study, as one of the more interesting and picturesque communities.

In his narrowly circulated booklet, Early History of Big Island, Mr. Sprague questioned progress stating, "The old churches where our forefathers worshipped are going down and soon will be in ruins. Schools are being consolidated. Let us stop and give this serious consideration. Are we going ahead or going back? Only time will tell."

Revolution of Sorts

Desperate situations require desperate remedies and Prime Minister Heath's new reign of austerity in economically-depressed Britain is a case in point.

The energy crisis is hitting hard there, but ironically no people are more accustomed to lack of adequate heating, for one thing, than are the British. Accustomed, that is, to cozy and snug fires which, cheery as they are, provide only uneven heat at best. Asking Britons now to heat only one room is something with which vast numbers of them are strongly familiar, indeed centrally heated North American-style is scorned for the most part in the U.K.

Meanwhile, as Canadians continue pretty much as before, with all the gas and heating fuel they need — at least for the time being — consider such situations across the border, such un-American activities, as this from Kansas: a Christian Science Monitor picture of youngsters wearing coats and gloves at their school desks in the community of Paola where thermostats have been turned down to a chilly 43 degrees.

And in the letters to the editor column of the same newspaper is this brief word from one Vincent F. Perna Jr. of Ithaca, N.Y.: "Frankly, once you get used to having your house at a temperature of 65 degrees, even 68° seems hot."

Around the world, in the wake of the oil shortage, there is a lot of living and learning going on. In the long run too it should be all to the good. It is a revolution of sorts, forcing nations into new patterns of thinking as to the future of their own lands and of this entire planet. U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger's call for an international effort to uncover new oil sources is a case in point. Britain actually has just revealed huge new deposits, yet to be tapped, in the North Sea. And here in Canada there is tremendous potential for the export of nuclear reactors.

It is a new world we are entering.

Latin Affliction

In Latin America many a tourist has fallen foul of an ailment common to countries where food and water are not always of the purest.

It has a variety of nicknames of which the most picturesque, and least rhabid, perhaps, is Montezuma's Revenge.

It strikes in a variety of guises and one of them we are familiar with as gastro-enteritis.

It is no respecter of persons, as the news from Colombia indicates.

There, cavalryman and Royal consort Mark Phillips has been confined to bed with an acute attack of the bug. Meanwhile Princess Anne, herself an occasional victim of indisposition while doing the Royal rounds, held the fort with a number of public appearances.

In Quito, Peru, the word is that 5,000 turned out recently to greet the couple, but in Bogota, where Lt. Phillips has been laid up, the princess attended church alone at St. Alban's, the latter a reminder that the Church of England has its establishmente in many a foreign capital.

Shown arriving at the church with Bishop William Franklin, who presumably has charge of this South American diocese, the Princess would have been reminded of many a similar occasion back home save for the darker complexion of the friendly crowd who turned out to greet her.

That Royalty has its magic, whatever the setting, is shown by the warmth and interest evident in the faces of the crowd. The news Britain may not be the best these days, yet in the Royal Family, with its far-flung Commonwealth connections and its forays to other lands, there is reflected the country's essential grace and stability.

Back From the Brink

Amendments announced by Education Minister Wells have averted a serious crisis in education. They apply to a bill originally intended to permit mass resignations and now permit such resignations to take effect August 31, rather than during the school year.

The current dispute has caused a lot of fil-feeling for which the Government must share some of the blame. However the amendments have prevented a situation that was virtually intolerable, a polarization that could only have brought further trouble.

Mr. Wells has stepped back from the brink and it is to be hoped this will form the basis for calmer dialogue in future.

Example of Foreign Affairs

Prime Minister Dominant Even as NDP Calls the Tune

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

The present hiatus in Parliament, called minority government, will end some day as have all previous Canadian minority governments and valid assessments of the role of the NDP in this one will be made.

After surviving 11 votes of confidence to date, it is clear the Liberal government is making moves and introducing legislation which is not traditional to Liberal economic and social doctrine.

The party which almost chose the late industrialist Robert Winters as its leader in 1968, did choose a Quebec corporation lawyer in the late former Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent as its leader in 1948, had long been accused of running the country like General Motors.

In these years of the David Lewis "corporate rip-off" the federal Liberals along with their alleged pals in the multinational companies, are both knuckling under to statist policies they would have rejected even five years ago.

Name any leading Liberal, other than Energy Minister Don Macdonald, a Walter Gordon disciple, who has publicly pumped for a national oil corporation. The liberal bigness lines are pretty good with Western voters, a good enough reason in the past for not injecting government into the private enterprise oil industry.

However even these allegiances have undoubtedly been assessed in the cold light of a possible Liberal overthrow at the hands of David Lewis and his socialist company of 29 if the prime minister did not knuckle under to NDP demands in the House.

In one area Canadian foreign policy decision-making since the near-Liberal defeat in October, 1972, it would be difficult indeed to find NDP foreign affairs philosophy as an integral element.

It is true the pressures from that party to break our recently established diplomatic relations with the military junta in Chile and permit Chilean political refugees to come to Canada, has had much success.

Senora Hortensia Allende the widow of late Chilean Marxist President Salvador Allende, was here only a couple of days before Ottawa caved-in on the refugee entry issue and said they would be welcome.

But in the really big matters confinued Canadian participation in NATO which NDP defence critics long ago downgraded and in the maintenance of a Canadian military force to do such things as the unpopular Vietnam ICCS peace-keeping, David Lewis and company have had virtually no influence in the East Block. Or rather in the new Lester B. Pearson posh EQ 3 government block.

At the same time given the propensity during the Trudeau years, 1968-1972 to have foreign policy defined and made in the prime minister's office, the little proof with the new and acute responsibility of the office of that definition has returned to external affairs.

No one can say for sure of course, But it is the prime minister for example who has made the important public statements on energy resources insofar as they affected the Canadian-American relationship and not Mr. Sharp.

Last summer the formal and style of the successful Commonwealth Heads of Government conference was that of the prime minister's, an elevation to international scale of the informal and collegial seminar method. It worked and Mr. Sharp while in attendance, played little or no direct personal role in it.

Which is not digressing, in that it was the prime minister not the cocky David Lewis who carried the ball in such events, external affairs being the implementer.

A Benevolent Scrooge in Ottawa:

And What a Differen ce Thrift Makes, Or Safety First At Christmas Time

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Yes, Virginia, there is an Ebenezer Scrooge.

Or at least somebody in Ottawa who says "Bah" and "Humbug" and draws up lists of things you shouldn't do at Christmas.

But this particular Scrooge deserves a hearing. He has some common-sense reminders about Christmas shopping—for trees, for lights, for toys—it is when common sense is often abandoned.

The Scrooge in jolly old Herb Gray's department of consumer and corporate affairs has drawn up these warnings, designed to eliminate the tragic fires that are attributable to Christmas trees each year:

—Don't let a tree block an exit.

—Don't put the tree near the fireplace.

—Don't let light bulbs touch the tree.

—Don't leave lights burning on the tree if you leave the room for any length of time.

—Don't let evergreens dry out. Support the tree in a solid container of water for the entire period it is in the house.

—Keep cigarettes away from trees.

—Don't use electrical equipment on metal trees.

—If you use strings of lights on the exterior of the house, make sure there are no frayed or bare spots on the wire.

Someone at the Canadian Association of Consumers in Ottawa, who is also paid to worry about such things, produced these supplementary warnings:

—Don't use a dried-out evergreen indoors. Twigs and needles should be flexible; if a tree has brittle branches that shed needles easily, don't buy it.

—Buy only Christmas lights that bear the seal of the Canadian Standards Association.

—Don't let the bulbs touch the needles.

—Use "slow burning" decorations (see package) whenever possible.

—If you buy an artificial tree, be sure it is labelled "slow burning."

—When joining strings of lights, don't connect more than the recommended number of sockets to one outlet.

—Don't leave outdoor Christmas lights up all year, because air pollutants will ruin them.

If you are planning to buy toys for Christmas giving, the consumer and corporate affairs department offers these tips:

—Match the toy to the child's age and ability, so that it will neither frustrate nor bore the child.

—Buy only rugged, durable toys that can take rough treatment for a reasonable length of time.

—Choose toys that are well designed and of good quality. They should fit together properly, appeal to a child's imagination, and contribute to the learning process without breaking.

—Shop around, compare prices on the toy you have in mind, or look for differences in quality between similar items at a given price.

—Above all, toys should be safe.

Only a Scrooge would deprive children of the fun of receiving toys at Christmas. But they might be just as happy with less expensive toys, and the parent could start a small-scale investment program for the child with the money saved.

Consider: If $2 a week were set aside for a Christmas gift for a child, it would accumulate, with interest, to somewhat more than $104 a year.

If a child received such a gift every Christmas for 21 years, and if the money was invested to earn a current yield of 9 per cent, the net-egg would be worth more than $5,000 when the child became an adult.

Children can't be expected to appreciate the value of money, to grasp the potentiality of compound interest, or to resist the urge to blow the nest-egg on some temporarily attractive but extravagance.

So if you want to do the child a real favor—the kind that will be appreciated when it comes time to buy a house, for instance—there is something to be said for gifts of mutual fund shares.

Good-quality funds usually work best over the long haul, and they accept relatively small purchases—often on the basis of a fixed number of dollars at regular intervals.

By the time the child is grown and ready for university, home ownership or launching an investment program on his own, that nest-egg from Christmases past could be an ifestimable advantage.

President Nixon's Time of Reckoning

By GEORGE KITCHEN

NEW YORK (CP) — Time is rapidly running out for President Nixon to produce his long-promised Watergate defence.

For months, Nixon has been promising full disclosure on White House involvement in the Watergate affair and proclaiming that the facts, once known, will prove him innocent of wrong-doing.

This fall, the White House launched what it called Operation Candor but it has resisted largely of protestations of innocence by the president in speeches before carefully-selected audiences and groups of Republican congressmen called in for White House briefings.

No documentary or other evidence has yet been produced.

Instead, the country has seen Nixon fight vigorously against an court order to release to the Watergate prosecutor tape recordings of conversations between the president and key aides on Watergate matters. His decision finally to release the tapes was followed by White House disclosure that two tapes were blank and that an 18-minute gap existed in a third.

All this against a political background that included the resignation of the vice-president; the dismissal of the Watergate prosecutor and the resignation of the attorney general and his chief deputy, and the indictment of two former cabinet ministers and a half-dozen or so White House aides on Watergate-related charges.

A new element now has entered the lengthening political equation: the approval by Congress of Michigan congressman Gerald Ford as vice-president. He succeeds Spiro Agnew, who resigned in October rather than be pleaded no contest to a charge of falsifying his income tax returns.

"The Watergate scandals have shaken and weakened the Republican party. Now that Nixon again has a Republican heir-apparent, the country can expect to hear increasingly insistent demands from within the party that he either tell the full story or resign.

Congressional elections are less than a year away and many Republican congressmen face certain defeat at the polls unless public confidence in the presidency and the Republican party is quickly restored.

Nixon's battle to hang on to the presidency thus is entering its decisive stage. Business and financial publication, noted this week that the next six or eight weeks "probably will determine whether Nixon will remain in office—and how well he will be able to govern if he does."

Sir Mackenzie Bowell's Anniversary Celebration Will Be Marked in City

Editor,
The Intelligencer

The attached notice indicates that the Hastings County Historical Society will be sponsoring a celebration on December 27, 1973, to mark the 150th anniversary of Sir Mackenzie Bowell, editor of The Intelligencer and Prime Minister of Canada.

Bowell was born on December 27, 1823.

We are anxious to have as many as possible of Bowell's descendants attend this celebration on the 27th and would appreciate any information your readers may have on the names and whereabouts of these descendants. Information can be sent to the Hastings County Historical Society at 257 Bridge Street East or telephoned to Mrs. Boyce at 968-5023.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell was one of Hastings County's most famous citizens. Not only was he an early editor of the Intelligencer, a member and chairman of the Belleville Board of Education in the 1850's and 60's, the publisher of Hastings County's first directory in 1865-6i, a founder of the Belleville Board of Trade later renamed the Chamber of Commerce in 1865, an officer in the Hastings militia, a grand master of the Orange Association of British America, a member of the House of Commons, a leader in the drive to bring Louis Riel to trial, an organizer in 1867 of the Conservative Parties (which helped to bring John A. Macdonald back to office), a minister of customs under John A., a senator after 1892. But he was the Prime Minister of Canada from 1894 to 1896.

Despite his brief span as prime minister, Mackenzie Bowell was an outstanding 19th century politician. In the 1880's he was a leader in the plan to bring about closer ties between Britain and the dominions and empire. He was a man of steadfast character, courage, and integrity; and his achievements in business and politics entitle him to be called a great Canadian.

The 150th Anniversary celebration will be held in the auditorium of Sir Mackenzie Bowell Public School, Leland Drive, at 8 p.m. December 27. Guest speaker of the meeting will be historian John Thomson, a student of Bowell's career, who will examine this career with particular reference to the relations between Bowell, the Conservative Party, and the Orange Lodge.

We are hoping that representatives of the various groups and associations with which Bowell was actively involved will be able to attend and take part in this celebration. This participation will include brief historical messages or greetings from the organizations and helping to light the candles on the giant birthday cake.

In addition to the program we are hoping to have a display of historical materials relating to Bowell's career.

Gerald E. Boyce,
President,
Hastings County Historical Society.

Today in History

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Dec. 15, 1791

The United States Bill of Rights was adopted 182 years ago today—in 1791—after being ratified by a majority of states. A total of 12 amendments had been offered in order to increase constitutional guarantees of civil liberty and 10 were accepted. They included stated rights to the right to bear arms and the prohibition of laws establishing a religion. Probably the most famous amendment is the 5th, disallowing self-incrimination, and the most important today is the 10th, reserving to the states all powers not specifically transferred to the U.S. government.

Fire Safety Regulations

Editor
The Intelligencer

The fire at 118-124 Front Street, Belleville, on November 29 brings into focus the unsatisfactory conditions which are living in. The fire safety regulations in this building seem to have been sadly neglected.

A brave mother and her two children, trapped at the rear of the premises for his initial efforts and splended leadership during his tenure as chairman of the public school board.

30 YEARS AGO

December 15, 1943.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Belleville Public Library Board, Auxiliary held in the General Supply Room of the Hospital, the annual report was submitted by the Secretary. The report showed that the total receipts for the year were $964.21. During the year the auxiliary purchased a steam laundry press for the Hospital at a cost of $300. The corridors of the old wing were repaired and painted, furniture in the old wing was repaired and upholstered at the cost of $250. Hospital patients were given gifts of fruit, magazines, cigarettes, bed-jackets, children's wear and Christmas gifts were bought for those less fortunate people who were in hospital during the Yuletide season last year.

which were totally inadequate for evacuation purposes. There were no exits or fire escapes from the second floor.

It would seem that corrective action must be taken now, if we are not to be subject to loss in the future that will be on our conscience forever.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

December 15, 1953.

Appreciation of board members was expressed to Fred T. Thomas for his untiring efforts

Mayor Robin Jeffrey and members of council, concerned with building safety, in Belleville, passed a bylaw requiring inspection of rooms in new buildings with floor area of 600 square feet or with a height of five storeys and over. A bylaw amendment that tenan's or owners of apartment properties still under construction will have to obtain occupancy permits or certificates of compliance before moving in. These bylaws could save many lives and much suffering to citizens.

In view of the Chief Leo Culhane's concern for the safety of occupants in premises highest buildings in Belleville, it is time that representatives of Fire Underwriters Association, executed legislation that would insure the best possible protection for citizens. To do less is to abdicate their responsibility to the citizens of Canada.

It is to be hoped that the citizens of Belleville and their representatives have taken a look at this building on Front Street. The south and east walls had a few small windows

Catholic Priests in Brazil Study Popular Voodoo Cults

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — Some Roman Catholic clergymen in Brazil are quietly studying popular Brazil voodoo cults so that their own church may have more meaning for the people.

Brazil is the world's biggest Catholic country in number. More than 90 per cent of Brazil's 700 million people are listed as Catholics. But a recent church census showed that only 25 to 30 per cent of them actually attend church.

Yet Rev. Raimundo Castro, who teaches religious history at Rio's Catholic University, calculates that some 60 million Brazilians actively practise African-based voodoo religions.

Father Castro thinks the Catholic church should study voodoo—known in Brazil by various names such as macumba, umbanda, quimbanda and candomble—to see what attracts such large numbers of followers.

"We're interested in utilizing voodoo's positive aspects so our church can take better care of the people's needs," he said.

"People respond to familiar things," the priest told an interviewer. "The music and ceremonies of the Roman Catholic Church are imported. Brazilian temperament obviously is more suited to things from native Brazilian culture."

Voodoo ceremonies in this country frequently are performed amid contagious rhythmic beats pounded out on drums and other African-based percussion instruments—the same as those used in Brazilian samba music.

"Umbanda offers the common people great moral and physical comfort," Father Castro went on. "The Catholic church has traditionally served the bourgeois elite and has not paid much attention to the poor."

Father Cintra's ideas are extremely controversial. Some higher-ranking church officials have condemned them. Others, though, have shown a willingness to discuss the attraction of voodoo 'ecstatically.

"The church could perhaps adapt its Brazilian rituals as much as umbanda has done," said Bishop Jose Angelo Neto of the east-central town of Pouso Alegre.

In contrast, Bishop Jose de Castro Pinto, vicar-general of the Rio de Janeiro archdiocese, says people who go to voodoo ceremonies simply show "religious ignorance." He feels the pressure of modern life's hectic big cities has driven Brazilians to umbanda and macumba "to seek solutions to their problems, but without Christian feeling."

Brazil was discovered and colonized by Catholic Portugal nearly 500 years ago. Later, the Portuguese brought African slaves and the slaves brought their spirit-based religions with them.

Federal, state and local governments promote voodoo ceremonies and urge tourists to see them. The main showpiece is the annual New Year's Eve tribute in Rio to the umbanda goddess of the sea, Iemanja. Thousands of voodoo believers line famous Copacabana and Ipanema beaches and throw offerings of flowers and small wooden boats into the surf.

Five Rio radio stations have daily programs for umbanda believers, and some Rio papers carry regular columns about voodoo activities. Shops throughout Rio and other large Brazilian cities sell statues, charms, powders, candles and herbs used in voodoo ceremonies. Vasco da Gama, one of Rio's top professional soccer teams, pays a man $700 a month to pray to voodoo spirits for victories.

Faith Healers Touch Off Philippines Tourist Boom

MANILA (AP) — Faith healers have set off a tourist boom in the Philippines.

Hundreds come each week from the United States, Canada, Hong Kong, Taiwan, Australia, Britain, Switzerland and West Germany to Manila and Baguio, seeking cures of every ailment from blindness to tennis elbow.

In the United States, two Seattle travel agencies are among those using the faith healers as an attraction. For rates varying from about $850 to $1,130, they offer roundtrip air transportation to Manila and "all treatments and a hotel" by the healers.

It is desperation that brings them here," said a grey-haired Canadian from Vancouver, who refused to give his name. He was accompanied by his brother who had been told after an operation at home that he had terminal stomach cancer.

A group of 54 Americans who arrived recently for faith-healing sessions reprinted an investment for two days of $60,000 in air fares and hotel fees.

For the food and committions of $5,000 a week, one travel agency says it can induce 100 Americans a week but, so far, there are not enough faith healers to handle the load.

Tony Agpaoa, a 33-year-old mystic, has opened his own travel agency and recently purchased a billion-peso used as a retreat by Roman Catholic priests in the mountain town of Baguio 150 miles north of Manila. With the help of 20 assistants, he plans to build his own clinic.

At least six other healers work in the hotels lining Manila Bay. They perform psychic surgery in hotel rooms and meditate in the conference rooms.

In the lobbies, young men and women with crippled bodies lean on crutches and white-haired old people sit in wheelchairs, hopeful of within two weeks they can toss away their crutches or rise from their chairs.

"We came because we have spoken to people who have been cured," said Anna Thomas, 74, of Los Angeles. "I have talked to people who had cancer, emphysema, and they were cured."

She added that Agpaoa, in psychic operation the day before, drew a tumor from her low her right eye. Her companion, Margaret Bowker, 68, of West Seattle, said Agpaoa psychically opened her abdomen to draw out a cyst of diseased flesh and gave her no pain nor scar.

The Philippines Medical Association has demanded a government investigation of the faith healers but so far no action has been taken. The tourist department has supported the healers as an attraction to the island.

"It is their money, if they want to spend it," says Edmundo Reyes, the commissioner of immigration.

At a recent clinic in the home of Mrs. Lourdes Savicotores, a healer of a doctor of philosophy degree in economics and a university professor, healer Virgilio Gutierrez operated on half a dozen persons in about an hour.

Mrs. Savicotores, an enthusiasts, passed out empty envelopes among the patients before Gutierrez started. Although the healers claim they accept no fees, those in attendance knew the envelopes were for "love offerings" on a good night at a private home, Gutierrez, who also has his own clinic, collects $75 to $150.

Gutierrez appeared wearing black trousers and polo shirt. He placed a Bible on a table. He had no instruments, only plastic pans filled with water, cotton absorbent cotton and a container of coconut oil.

On a makeshift cot in Mrs. Savicotores' study, Gloria Estavillo, 36, lay, face and her back. Gutierrez kneaded it, bathing it in coconut oil. She said she suffered from cervical cancer of the spine and had got no relief from doctors. She rose, saying she felt slightly better.

She was followed by Maria Dolores Pascual, 65 and blind. Gutierrez tenderly kneaded her brows and temple, occasionally touching the pages of the Bible. Mrs. Pascual rose after 10 minutes, still sightless.

A young woman with a guitar took Mrs. Pascual's place. Gutierrez kneaded her neck and then appeared to plunge his finger into a small bloody opening. From a piece of cotton, Gutierrez dropped a small bit of flesh, apparently extracted from the hole, into a pan of water. The pan was promptly whisked away, the flesh disposed of. The healer wiped her neck clean of blood. There was no sign the skin had opened.

Agpaoa and Gutierrez say they do not know how they perform these operations. Agpaoa won't concede he can open a body bloodlessly. "It is a materialization," he said.

A nonbeliever is Alejandro Roces, a writer and secretary of education a decade ago.

On a recent occasion, he seized a pan of water containing flesh which a healer supposedly had just extracted from a patient.

Roces said he took it to a laboratory for analysis.

"It was chicken intestine," he said.

Making Best of Christmas Is Task Facing Christians

By Dr. Gordon C. Smyth

Liberating Christ from Christmas! The very idea seems presumptuous. If he is Lord, as many of us say he is, we cannot do that, by favors. But we can, for our sake more than his, honor him, or at least stop dishonoring him. One way to do this, some concerned churchmen argue, is to get Christ out of the Christmas business.

The suggestion is appealing but runs into the same problems encountered by the slogan of a few years ago, "Put Christ back into Christmas!" For instance, what Christmas are we talking about? the stores are where boundless are. And right in there s the Christ Child being as relevant as relevant can be.

Those of us who would servie Christ can challenge those who would use Christ by urging merchants to present the full picture in their display windows. Recommend that the beatitudes be posted alongside the shepards, the cross behind the creche. Jesus' invitation to self-denial beside the business man's plea for specialties.

It is not a bad thing if merchants wish to advertise the coming of Jesus. But if they want to promote sales through the cult of divine babyhood, let them go on to a larger cult. Our job is not to deplore the decadence of Christ where crowds hustle about, among the very kind of people with whom he was at home, but to help business men to decide between presenting the whole Christ or no Christ.

Christmas is here to stay. The task of Christians is to make the best of the season, to reform it where possible, to check its most outrageous perversions where necessary.

Don't worry about Christ being mixed up in commerce. His lordship is recure He was always free and safe in. He knew that freedom is perfected in self-surrendering involvement in the messy affairs of man.

The best time at Christmas is whether you and I are being set free by the same involvement.

Dear Santa:

'Are You And Your Elfs Going Great?'

By special arrangement with Santa Claus, we've been allowed to peek at some of the letters he has already answered this season. Santa manages to write back to every boy and girl whose letter he receives as long as it is mailed before the middle, of next week.)

What sort of requests does Santa get? Here, read a few.

They're polite, bold, affectionate and sly, they're printed neatly or scrawled, or written by Mom, and they reflect not only the children's personalities, but also the times we live in. See what you think.

Some are perfectly straightforward.

Dear Santa, I want Rock-Em Sock-Em. Your friend, Robbie.

A little boy called Dean got first things first.

I want the Desert Patrol and a Big Jim for Christmas. Dear Santa.

Many children assure Santa of their good behavior during the year, hoping for rewards under the tree.

Dear Santa, I want one of them Mickey Mouse record players and a gun set. I been good all year. I like school. I am 5 years old. Love, Danny.

Dear Santa ,I have tried to be good. I would like a Barbie car and a tent trailer. And a Mod Ken doll. I have fun with the toys I got last year. I will leave you a cookie I made. And some milk. Love, Bonnie.

Promises of food for Santa close many of the letters. One typical letter is from a little girl called Carol who writes that "We will leave you some hot chocolate and cookies for you and for your reindeers, some carrots and sugar." In all the letters we saw, Santa was offered only the most wholesome fare, a great many cookies and a good deal of milk.

Besides the promises of food, Santa gets declarations of affection and devotion that vary in tone . and honesty. Here's one of the most honest.

Dear Santa. We like you because you give us toys. From Trevor.

A little more cozy is this one from Mora.

Dear Santa, I love you and I hope I get what I wish for.

Just a little off-beat (and thought-provoking) is this loving letter.

Dear Santa, I love you but you are not important because Jesus was born on Christmas night and there is something I want — a gun — that is all I want. From Mark.

Orders for guns from little boys were numerous, but not as frequent as little girls' requests for dolls. Not just any doll, mind you, but specific brand-name dolls, often with prices after the names.

Dear Santa, Could I please have a Barbie camper and a Barbie doll. I'd like a Bimbi Linda too. I'll leave some sugar for the reindeer and an apple and an egg for you. I've been good. Love, Angela. P.S. Please send Barbie clothes.

One bright young consumer asked for "only Fischer-Price toys please," and was typical of the children's knowledge of toy manufacturers.

Not all the children wanted toys. Some asked for puppies, kittens and ponies, and one little girl wrote, "Dear Santa. How are you and Mrs. Santa? I am fine. I would like an alarmclock to go with a pink and white room."

Her concern for Santa's wife is not as common as the children's interest in other aspects of North Pole life.

Dear Santa, We are working and we are working our best. How are your elfs? Are you and your elfs going great? But what about Rudolph, is he feeling good? I hope that he is feeling good. But one thing — are the other reindeers feeling good? I see like a guitar and a play bunny. Your friend, Linda.

Dear Santa, We hope that Rudolph and the reindeer are redee to pull your sleigh on Dec. the twenty-fifth and I hope your elves are working good. Please may I have a Hang on Harvey and Don't Break the Ice. Your friend, David.

Dear Santa, How is your elfs are they working hard? How is Rudolph and the other Reindeer? I love you. Will you bring me a Chrissy and Her Beauty Parlour? From your friend, Louise.

Some letters exhibit a delightful sense of humor in their approach.

Dear Santa, I want a toy Santa, and a dog. My name is Joe. We have a skinny chimney so I hope you don't get stuck. Good-bye. Love, Joe.

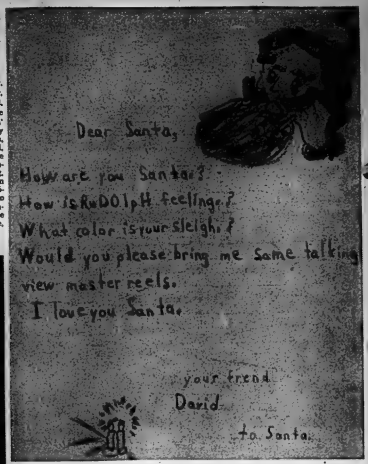
A number of letters from classes at the Ontario School for the Deaf began: "Ho, ho, ho: There is no Snow. Maybe you will have to drive a car on Christmas eve!"

Many schools sent envelopes of letters that junior classes had written together, sometimes with the help of a teacher, in fact, the adult hand was visible in a large percentage of the letters, most obviously in this one.

Dear Santa, My name is Matthew. I am 17 months old. I have been a good boy.

A few children remembered their parents in the letters without being prompted, and asked for special favors for Mom and Dad.

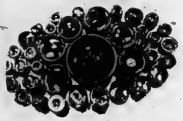
Dear Santa, I would like you to bring me a typewriter, Crissy, Barbie Beauty Centre, Jewellery making kit, and an suede shoulder bag. I would like you to get my father a pair of slack (p. 311 in Eaton's Catalogue). And a nightgown for my mother (p. 125 in the Catalogue). By Caron.



Reading over his letters, Santa must be struck by the effect that television commercials have had on his young correspondents. Their seasonal acquisitiveness is subject to the will of the advertisers, and dependent upon the most memorable commercials.

Dear Santa, My name is Cheryl. I am eight yrs. old. I want a disney shaker maker, 'matel' saucy pink panther, raggedy ann, floor model organ, typewriter, chines checker, keerplunker, disney flag toss, don't spill the bells, trouble operation, criss cross, london bridge, arms in the pants, rock-em Sock'em, robots, bing, bang, bong, mighty-tonka, winnebago, raggedy ann toothbrush, weebles, marina, weebles camper, walt disney play world, steel cash register, hasbro like bribe, tester totter, watch, play family school, play family village, sesame street play case, Barbie Goin' Campin' set, Barbie country camper, petit doll, 3 outfits, navy pack, gobbleale doll, talking Mrs. Beasley, large doll high chair, Speedy Gonzales, shaggy cat pajama bag, the dogfather, raggedy ann musical jewel, colleco snowflake saucer, hi-rise pogo stick, matchbox service station kit, magic kit, beat the clock, Bye for now. Love, Cheryl.

Well, Santa?



Christine Ekashkiw [illegible] letter to Santa Claus at Quinte Mall post box. Like all children who write letters (and remember to send their return address) she'll get an answer from Mr. Claus himself.

Here's one of unique letters Santa received this year, flattering him by making his hair and beard youthful black instead of white. Youngsters try all sorts of wheedling techniques to get what they want for Christmas.

Christmas Lights Potential Hazard

In case you haven't heard, the Canadian Standards Association earlier in the year recalled certain outdoor Christmas lights because of potential hazard.

Published reports in snow and rain, according to the CSA and Noma and Canadian General Electric, could break down insulation in the wiring causing a fire, burn or shock.

The lights affected are plastic strings, green in color. The lights have a plastic clip opening toward the open end of the socket. On the wire is printed: Cable Tech type PXWF Christmas tree cord outdoor use.

If you have some of these lights, the thing to do is contact Noma Lights, 373 Kenedy Road, Toronto; Canadian General Electric, 185 Dufferin St., Toronto, or Canadian Standards Association, 178 Rexdale Blvd., Rexdale, Ont.

And, of course, don't use the lights.

One energy - conscious reader recommends forgetting lights altogether this year.

The Minister of Corporate and Consumer Affairs, Herb Gray, is asking Parliament to modify the Combines Investigation Act. The proposed changes would:

Make bid - rigging an offence. Currently the Crown must prove that the practice lessens competition unduly, making it difficult to prosecute. This amendment would make bid - rigging per se an offence.

Make double - ticketing, then selling a product at a higher price, an offence. Consumers have complained about the practice particularly with reference to food retailers who add consecutive price tags to goods already on the shelves. It's viewed as an unwarranted taking of extra profits on goods already in inventory that have not been subjected to higher cost.

Broaden the Act's provisions dealing with misleading advertising and comparative price representations. For example, a retailer can't claim an item "Normally sells for 96; Our price $32.95" unless he can show that the higher price is one charged generally in the area. As for misleading advertising, the general impression created by advertising as well as literal meaning will be taken into account by a court if a charge is made.

Outlaw referral selling schemes which offer unsavory purchasers reduced prices if he submits names of potential purchasers.

Bring general services under the jurisdiction of the Act. Until now financial institutions, except insurance, most professions, advertising and so many other businesses which sell personal services and not goods have not been covered.

Bring amateur and professional sports under the jurisdiction of the Act.

It sounds like an amendment every conscientious consumer ought to support.

The big look is the fashion news for spring. Dress by Calvin Klein is in a soft and blouson style with tucked bodice and fit own tie belt. (CP Photo)

Full Float of Fabric:

NEW YORK (CP) — The Big Look is the fashion news for spring. It isn't the deep dolman sleeve of last season but is more subtle.

It's achieved more by a loose bubbly blouson or a full float of sheer fabric above a slender slip, as fashion authority Eleanor Lambert explains it.

It also may be a loose cut top hanging full from the shoulders or from a yoke, or it may be the new wider turnback sleeves.

All these create the illusion of bigness without bulk. And some designers prefer a slim top and a full skirt. Either way it's bigness. Lightweight fabrics are used, of course, so that there is also a fluid look.

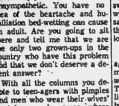
Of all the Big Top looks the blouson is the real fashion story for daytime—and even for evening dresses, but also watch for those turn-back sleeves. They may be the newer short length or to the wrist but they all have a wide foldback. The return of the short sleeve is definitely spring '74.

Leo Narducci has a whole group of matte jerseys in this new big proportion. Everything is free, unconstructed and loose from the neckline down. He likes that relaxed body silhouette under big toppers or with shawls and cardigans.

Jasper calls this Big Top look his leggings and he likes deep sleeves and drop shoulders for his sports clothes. He's fond of the foldback sleeve at elbow length.

Of course, the slim look will be slim or the wearer would look two sizes too big.

Calvin Klein has dropped the shoulder line, rounded the neckline and altered the bodice. His dresses are cut loosely with full cuffed sleeves and tied with their own belt under a blouson look.



The loosely blouzed dress was first introduced by Balenciaga. It first appeared 20 years ago and was a great success. In fact, one of his blouson tops, deeply cuffed sleeves and strict skirt is identical to those that paraded on the New York runway in the spring '74 collection. Balenciaga also introduced the balloon jacket in 1953.

Then came 1957 and the chemise. Dior made a perfectly straight unfitted wool dress and the next year Balenciaga included a double-breasted thin tweed chemise in his collection. The two masters had spoken and millions of unshaped little dresses flowed off the production line in Canada and the U.S.A.

We had several years of unwaisted fashion before shape appeared again, to be divided between a return of the blouson and a tightly belted tunic over a slim skirt. Then the bloused look disappeared in the sixties.

Of course, any blouson look would have been ridiculous with mini skirts. So it's only now, with skirt lengths once again at the knees that fashion can re-introduce bloused effects. There is also just a hint that the chemise may be the next fashion focus. Geoffrey Beene, for one, is rethinking the chemise, in his series of striped crepe de chines, loose fitting from a deep yoke and gently tapering to the hem. The loose fit and the semi-dolman sleeves are within the Big Top look but the general over-all is a chemise effect.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I have the same problem that the engaged girl wrote about. I wet the bed. Your reply was curt and unsympathetic. You have no idea of the heartache and humiliation bed-wetting can cause an adult. Are you going to sit there and tell me that we are the only two grown-ups in the country who have this problem and that we don't deserve a decent answer?

With all the columns you devote to teen-agers with pimples and men who wear their wives' pantyhose and women whose "sing" has lost its "zang" after a hysterectomy, why can't you spare an inch of column space for a serious problem? Is there no answer except long-term therapy?—High Tide In Denver

Dear High Tide: I'm sorry you felt my answer was "curt and unsympathetic." As I told the engaged girl, nine out of 10 bed-wetters are suffering from an emotional problem, and even though the problem is unresolved, the bed-wetting usually stops by age 12 or 13.

When bed-wetting continues into adulthood, it means the problem is unusually severe. I know of no bargain-basement solution or magic short-cut to dry land. A grown woman who swims every night should be willing to do whatever is necessary to put an end to it. And that, dear lady, may mean long-term therapy.

Dear Ann Landers: Six years ago my eldest daughter was married. Her younger sister was married two years later. They both have children and like their husbands very much, but I have had one of the girls and their children home with me a dozen times since January. They just show up and say: "We had a fight. I'm leaving him." Or, "This is it. I can't stay under the same roof with that rat another night."

After a few days a husband will come over and they sit down and talk things over. Before long they kiss and make up and leave.

I have told both girls repeatedly that I don't want them to come running home when they have husband trouble. If they can patch things up in an hour at my house, why can't they talk things over in their own house, where they belong?

Right now my younger daughter is here with her two children and she and her husband are getting reconciled in the bedroom. I am sick of it. What advice can you offer them?—The Neighbor Next Door

Dear Door: They didn't write. You did. The advice is for you. The next time one of the girls shows up, tell her to phone a motel and get accommodations for herself and the children because they can't stay with you.

When your daughters have to pay out real money for lodging and food they'll think twice before they leave their husbands. Without realizing it, you've been encouraging them by providing a place to run at the first sign of trouble. Cut it out.

Meaningful Modern Wedding Vows

By DORIS CLARK

"To love is to place your happiness in the happiness of another."

Thus read the front side of a small folded sheet of parchment yellow paper. Lifting the flap revealed a single handwritten invitation to a wedding, to take place in Muskoka on Thanksgiving weekend, with reception in a summer cottage.

Sylvia and her James wanted their wedding to be something different — not elaborate, but a friendly ceremony and reception with their own young friends; one that they could pay for themselves, without placing demands on either family's financing.

All her life Sylvia had dreamed of being married in a beautiful Muskoka summer resort country in the fall; and in a dress made of white cycle embroidery material. She got what she wanted: a glorious Thanksgiving Saturday with the woods around the family cottage in their finest flaming autumn colors. She made her own dress (inexpensively) and for her headpiece wore a crown of brilliant dried flowers.

The cottage has been in the family for years, a sturdily built two-storey wooden structure perched on a rise at the end of their lake, with a long, wide verandah on the front. The verandah served as diningroom for 60 guests, with the only precaution taken ahead being to tack up walls of transparent plastic sheets for protection from wind and possible rain - - which didn't ensue.

Food was carted up from Hamilton, Ontario, 150 miles south. The bride's mother had made ahead and frozen 12 pies (cherry and apple). Potatoes wrapped in foil, ready for baking in the cottage oven and frozen kernel corn, jellied salads and tossed salads travelled north in car trunks. Thirty-five pound of roast beef (two huge roasts) were roasted in the groom's family cottage oven, nearby.

Tables were decorated with red and orange leaves, and sprigs of pine, tastefully arranged around candles. There were bullrushes, orange "Chinese lanterns" out of a garden. For happy contrast were paper plates in blue and white, paper tablecloths; blue candles, blue table napkins.

Guests came from all directions - - even 200 miles away - - because the whole idea appealed; and because they were good friends of the bride and groom.

A brother of Sylvia took color snapshots of the wedding party, the wedding guests, the food being served, the roast being carved by Jim's father; he snapped the happy couple standing on a footpath in the midst of a golden and red forest and looking very much like stars in a Shakespearean drama. Sylvia with her long dark hair and her flower crown, James looking at her with that adoring Romeo look, his own hair a modest version of today's male fashions.

The service was different too. There were passages read from "The Prophet" and from the 13th Chapter of First Corinthians. And do you want to hear the vows these two imaginative and creative young people said to each other - - with the full approval of their church?

"I take you, Sylvia, to be my wife, to laugh with you in joy, to grieve with you in sorrow, to grow with you in love, serving mankind in peace and hope as long as we both shall live."

Winter's Here

Candle Seller, Andy Connelly is living proof that winter is here for sure. Two inches of snow swirled down on Connelly as he attempted to sell his wares at the corner of Bay and King Sts. in downtown Toronto Thursday. (CP Wirephoto)

NDP Prepared Campaign

OTTAWA (CP) — NDP Leader David Lewis says he "fully expected" the minority Trudeau government would fall this month over the energy crisis.

Although he did not cherish the idea of a winter election, he says the New Democrats began preparing for a campaign after the Conservatives decided to test the government in a non-confidence vote on the energy issue last Monday night.

However, with only three days to go, Prime Minister Trudeau announced a sweeping energy program that Mr. Lewis says "accepted all our policies." The New Democrats were appeased and supported the government against the Conservative motion, which was voted down 135 to 117.

The energy crisis was "the big crisis" in 1973 as far as the NDP is concerned, said Mr. Lewis, reflecting this week on Year One of the 29th Parliament.

He said the corporate-tax measures could have been a serious threat to the Liberals "if the Conservatives were not merely blowing hard about elections."

Opposed only by the New Democratic Party, the controversial income-tax cuts were supported in June when Conservative and Social Credit MPs joined the Liberals in pushing them through the Commons.

Mr. Lewis, whose 31-member caucus holds the effective balance of power in Parliament, says he has a strong feeling the Conservatives have been bluffing since last March about wanting an election because they have not picked up points in public opinion polls.

Even though the strain of a minority Parliament has been wearisome, Mr. Lewis said he feels "very gratified" by the accomplishments of the session that began Jan. 4.

In his view, "the session has accomplished more than the previous 4½ years of Trudeau majority government," parties particularly in the fields of social security and energy.

Until Mr. Trudeau made his energy statement Dec. 6, Mr. Lewis said, he did not know "who her the government would come across" and meet NDP demands. "As a matter of fact, we were preparing the party for an election, even though a winter election is not pleasant, least of all for the leader of a party that does not have any money."

Maritimes Told To Help Themselves

OTTAWA (CP) — A seemingly-exasperated Prime Minister Trudeau told the five eastern provinces Friday to do something themselves before looking for federal help to cope with high oil prices.

"I'm a federal politician . . . let the provincial take some of the responsibility," he snapped at reporters after sparring in the Commons with opposition MPs seeking federal assistance for Quebec and the Atlantic provinces.

Appearing strained and tired, he said provincial premiers should use some of the "cash" they already get from Ottawa.

Federal equalization grants for the poorer provinces have gone up $190 million, he said, and more federal money will flow out of Ottawa in the form of higher family allowances next month.

He did not rule out federal aid at some stage but said none will be offered until after the federal-provincial energy conference, scheduled for late January.

If assistance was offered now, he said, the provinces would show up asking: "What else are you going to do?"

Meanwhile, debate on an emergency bill to deal with threatened winter oil shortages slowed to the point where the New Democratic Party accused Conservative MPs of filibustering.

"They may not call it a filibuster, but that's exactly what it is," said NDP Leader David Lewis.

"They are so wedded to the idea that the oil corporations must not be interfered with under any circumstances that they are ready to put Quebec and the Atlantic provinces in jeopardy."

The bill would establish a special board to ration fuel supplies at the wholesale level and, if necessary, impose individual rationing.

Food Committee Bids Farewell

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons special committee on food prices, which dies at the end of the current parliamentary session, bade a tentative farewell Friday with a report recommending a permanent Commons committee on consumer affairs.

The report, the third the committee has tabled since its formation last January, will be its last if the government decides to prorogue Parliament and start a new session next year.

The committee was set up under the Inquiries Act with a mandate to examine trends in food prices.

Chairman Comments Before Passing Out

ORILLIA, Ont. (CP) — A public education program aimed at dissuading people from driving after drinking proved its point here Friday.

It was the "best committee I ever worked on," said Doug Snyed, chairman of the Alcohol Countermeasures Program committee, just before passing out after consuming eight ounces of alcohol.

Mr. Snyed was one of nine local citizens who took part in a drink-in, sponsored by the Ontario ministry of transportation and communications and the Drug Addiction Foundation.

After two or three carefully measured shots of liquor, the participants began slurring their words and staggering although all said they were not impaired and were still capable of driving home if necessary.

However, breath tests proved differently.

"That's the insidious thing about alcohol," Mr. Snyed said. "The more you drink, the more self-confident you become and more you feel like you could drive your car."

Members of the local police department and the provincial police detachment conducted tests to de ermine the degree of impairment by putting the drinkers through a series of balance and co-ordination tests. All participants failed.

Police Sent To Prison

CHICAGO (Reuter) — Eighteen Chicago policemen Friday received prison sen ences rang ing from six years to 18 months for extorting money from bar owners in one of the biggest scandals ever exposed in the city force. The policemen were members of a "$100-a-month club"—the amount bar owners were alleged to have paid the police to avoid trouble. In all, 57 Chicago policemen have been indicted in the last year and 35 convicted.

PM Claimed Testy

OTTAWA (CP)— In the jundying days of Margaret's second child behind Prime Minister Trudeau's recent testy mocks both inside ad outside the Commons?

Or is it arrogance, as some of his opponents would like to believe, or perhaps simply the strain of leading a minority government in a tense period of problems?

Mr. Trudeau has not said, but some aides have been anxious to explain away some of his stronger remarks and irritable behavior with reporters.

"He's not getting too much sleep," said one aide Friday. "He's obviously bushed."

The prime minister was unusually restrained, sometimes even humble, in the Commons during the months since the 1972 election. But, recently he has taken a combative stance, verbally skewering opposition questioners and sometimes snapping back angrily.

He had a nasty exchange Friday with one of his most persistent hecklers, former Conservative cabinet minister George Hees, who suggested the government has no energy policy.

Replied the prime minister: "George, I think you should go back to the timer when you just contented yourself with being like Gorgeous George.

Mr. Hees said he didn't realize he could get under Mr. Trudeau's skin so easily.

"The honorable member does not get under my skin with the knife he put under the skin of his former leader," Mr. Trudeau snapped.

He apparently was referring to Mr. Hees' resignation from former prime minister John Diefenbaker's cabinet at the height of the nuclear weapons debate which helped bring the Conservative government down in 1963.

In another prickly exchange, Lincoln Alexander (PC—Hamilton West) referred, sarcastically to Mr. Trudeau as "my dear Mr. Prime Minister." Mr. Alexander said the prime minister seems to have "found his old form in the past couple of weeks."

If, as the aide said, the prime minister is bushed from the daily grind of Parliament, he may not get much relief soon. The Conservatives are doing lots of talking on the government's emergency energy bill and the Commons could sit into January.

Mr. Trudeau's recent attitude has been evident to reporters who corner him after the daily question period ends. He has been snappish and unwilling to spend much time answering their questions.

Tuesday, Mr. Hees had words which were much tougher.

"He sits in his chair and sulks." Mr. Hees told the House. "He is an absolute disgrace."

LIP Projects Total $3,674,000 for Hastings

By JIM SMELLE
Staff Reporter

A total of seven LIP projects for Hastings riding has been approved, including three in Belleville, it was announced yesterday by Manpower and Immigration Minister Robert Andras.

The projects range from the setting up of a Hastings County Museum travelling exhibition to establishing a day care centre in Tweed and will create a total of 29 jobs in Hastings riding.

The seven projects announced Friday are part of 234 projects throughout Canada creating a total of 5,570 jobs that have been agounced. This involves a federal contribution of $3,674,000.

Altogether 1,374 LIP projects have been approved by Ottawa for 1973-74. This represents a federal contribution of $27,192,893 and creates a total of 16,700 jobs. Other projects to be approved will be announced later.

The three projects approved for Belleville are:

The setting up of the Hastings County Museum exhibition. This project will create three jobs and involve 168 man-weeks of employment.

The objective is to establish display facilities throughout Hastings County to exhibit on revolving basis projects of an educational find cultural value.

The Queen Victoria Community Services which will employ three for a total of 48 man-weeks.

This project will hire people to act for existing committees in carrying out established and urgent needs that current organizations are unable to manage with volunteers only.

It aims to co-ordinate for the community those projects offered by the Belleville recreation department and private and public organizations, schools and the community.

This projects has three main categories: sports and recreation, arts and culture.

The program is aimed toward all age groups in many areas of interest. Activities although centred around Queen Victoria School are open to anyone in the community.

The third project approved for Belleville is Project Help. This will create 440 man-weeks of employment for three people.

The creative aims to provide services for disadvantaged children within the present school system by instigating individual tutoring and counselling as well as by extra-curricular activities, for example, theatre arts craft.

In Deseronto, the LIP approved project is the completion of a community centre started with a LIP grant for 1971-73.

This project will employ 11 people for a total of 97 man-weeks of employment. It aims to complete the inside of the community centre.

The establishment of a day care centre in Tweed is the project approved for that community. This venture will employ three people for a total of 156 man-weeks of employment.

The aim is to provide a day care centre for Tweed and the surrounding rural community while freeing parents, especially welfare recipients, to seek employment.

Coe Hill has undertaken an ambitious project called Concerned Citizens' Group. This will involve three people working for 364 man-weeks.

Aim of the project is to service the needs of as much of Coe Hill and area as possible. This will be met by remedial work with school children and a craft program for school children, teenagers and adults.

The project will also be a part-time nursery school set up, senior citizens' recreation, the repairing and remodelling of local churches, the publishing of a community newspaper, music, photography and a recreation program available to the entire community.

Another facet of the program for Coe Hill is the remodelling of an old school hall, which will be trusted into a shop.

In Bancroft, the LIP project approved is called Community Opportunity to Participate in Education (COPE).

This particular project will involve 361 man-weeks of employment by three people.

Its aims have been set as an attempt to involve local citizens in providing tutoring for slow learners as well as providing counselling in music and drama designed to create student creativity.

Other objectives are: maintenance of equipment and materials, and learning resources to be set up and available to schools and communities.

Children Herald the Festive Season

The choir from Prince Charles School in Belleville entertained patrons at the Four Seasons Hotel Friday night with Christmas music in the foyer. The 54 grade 4 to 7 students were led by teacher Heather Grant.

Most Teachers Off Tuesday

Most Hastings county elementary schools, public and separate, will be closed Tuesday by a wildcat one-day teacher strike.

The majority of elementary school teachers voted Friday to protest provincial legislation by staying home for the day.

A majority of teachers in 31 of the county's 62 public and separate elementary schools opted to walk out in polls conducted in the schools Friday.

In seven schools a majority of the staff was against the walkout. In two of the seven, the teachers were unanimously opposed. Four schools did not report to the executive of their teachers' federation.

Federation presidents would not identify the schools concerned.

Clare Burrows, president of the local Ontario Public School Men Teachers' Federation, said the seven schools in which the majority opposed the walkout might have inadequate staff Tuesday to handle pupils.

Some teachers who voted against the strike might change their minds when they see the strength of the support given it, he said.

The province-wide walkout has been called by five teacher federations to draw public attention to a bill now before the legislature declaring mass teacher resignations retroactively illegal. The bill was introduced Monday to stave off a January strike by teachers in 16 counties who have become deadlocked in salary negotiations. Denied the right to strike, they have submitted mass resignations in what they frankly declare is a strike action.

Secondary school teachers, whose federation originated the walkout plan, will not make the results of their school-by-school polls known until Monday.

Should the legislation, bill 274, be withdrawn, the strike would be called off, teachers indicated.

The teachers' organizations are not required to notify board offices of poll results, or of those schools that will have a majority of teachers on hand Tuesday.

The elementary teachers were to notify parents of children in each school Friday or Monday of the staffing situation on Tuesday. The secondary school teachers' federation has not announced plans to notify parents.

The Hastings county board of education and Hastings-Prince Edward counties separate school board are under legal obligation to open schools Tuesday morning. Principals and vice-principals, although members of the federations concerned, are considered part of management and must be on hand to open their schools. If too few teachers are present at each school to cope with the pupils, it is believed the pupils will be dismissed.

Part of the onus for discovering what will happen Tuesday morning is being put on parents. Telegrams are being received in newspaper offices outlining advertisements for Monday's edition. They advise parents to check with their local schools on the situation in each locality and end with: "We ask for your understanding in this crisis."

It Took Him 21 Years To Get Into Business

By JIM SMELLE
Staff Reporter

After 21 years at working at Canada Cement in Point Anne, John (Jack) Stewart is finally back to his first love . . . sign painting.

Working out of his shop in Foxboro, Jack retired from Canada Cement rather than move to the plant in Ba'h. Since he was working nights and in his spare time doing lettering for trucks and business signs, he found it natural to devote full time to it, when he retired.

I've always liked painting signs, said Jack. "When I was going to BCI, I was ed to take commercial art. But only the girls were taking it then. I had to earn a letter in football or hockey before I would take commercial art," said Jack.

After leaving school, Jack spent some time in Europe on an athletic tour with the Royal Canadian Navy. He s arted with Canada Cement in 1952, playing on the company's hockey team there.

Jack was distinguished company then. His combination offices and studio in Foxboro house a comfortably furnished reception area with pictures on the wall of some old teammates. One of them is a picture showing a young Bobby Hull who played with Canada Cement and later went on to become the most distinguished citizen to leave Point Anne.

Also in the reception area are trophies and awards from all sports Jack has been active in, from bowling to golfing. Jack still keeps pretty active now, playing hockey a few times a week.

He said he waited before getting into his first love sign painting because he didn't want to start a business unless he had the initial investment first.

"And I wanted to wait till my family was grown up," he said. With Jack's son 22 years-old and his working studio in Foxboro all paid up, he can now devote full time to what he really likes.

"You know"I enjoy getting up in the morning and having some hing to do that I enjoy. There are many interesting aspects to the job and it's flexible enough so that I can work late getting one job finished and,then take time off to play a bit of hockey the next day," he said.

Jack was employed as a storehouse supervisor at Canada Cement.-He lef. there November 30 and started his business full-time December 1.

Jack's signs have been displayed in such far flung places as on the Alaska Highway where he did a sign for a friend in a fishing tour business and at Ste. Hyacinthe, Quebec.

It was at Ste. Hyacinthe that Jack did his largest sign. Altogether it was 180 feet long, 4 feet wide by two 90 feet long sections and it was for Del Monte-Aylmer foods," said Jack.

Local businesses he has done signs for have been Rollins Lumber in Foxboro, Circle TV, Harry's Chuckwagon and Bishop Seeds. As well he has done window decorations for Christmas ones, for various businesses.

Unfortunately, or maybe sense, Jack has been so busy in the week since he has been open that he couldn't find time to letter a seasonal message on his main studio windows.

Jack said he like the sense of satisfaction he gets from doing a sign. Often a customer will give him a free rein to put his creative powers to work at coming up with a logo or company design. This he did for Bishop Seeds.

He has even come up with a name change for a German style restaurant and lounge in Madoc, calling itself Mohan's. He suggested to the owner that it be called Black Forest and the name stood.

Jack says his best ideas come when he is relaxed. "My ideas are dependent upon the mood I'm in. At night when everything is relaxed I come up with a lot of good ideas."

Jack also attempts to make his customers relaxed, many of whom are those he went to school with and have asked him to do work for him while he was working at Canada Cement.

To relax his customers, there is a comfortably furnished waiting room, complete with panelling, television and soothing music. The music also accompanies Jack while he is working on a sign, be it scroll lettering, showcards or even lettering on a truck.

After waiting 21 years, Jack Stewart is a satisfied man doing something he has wanted to for a long while.

Sign Him Happy

After working 21 years at the Canada Cement Company in Point Anne, Jack Stewart, of Foxboro, recently retired from there when the company moved to Bath. Now he can devote his full time to doing something that up to now has only been an enjoyable part-time job . . . sign painting. Here Jack uses his skill and expertise on a sign he is doing for one of his many customers.

Education Beat

Teachers Fear That They're It

Despite acres of print on the topic, it's hard to figure out.

Is there much more money at least enough money to keep pace with the rising cost of living and a bit more to keep up with awards given public servants such as police and firemen.

But their salaries come from taxpayers' pockets and there is almost no more money to spare.

Consider the facts in Hastings County.

Wages of hourly - rated workers went up by 9 per cent last year. Salaried workers' wages rose by 10 per cent. Teachers got an 8.5 per cent increase.

Look at next year. The cost of living may be up by 20 per cent, supplies by 15 per cent and electricity by 18 per cent.

But, the provincial government will allow school boards to increase their expenditures by only 5 per cent.

By arithmetical deduction, something has to give, and the teachers figure they're it.

Saving can be effected by "trimming the fat" - - - eliminating a top - heavy administration in favor of classroom teachers.

Few boards and administrators have had the courage to make that incision. Hastings is no exception. It reduced the number of superintendents sent co - ordinators back to classroom teaching, eliminated the allowance paid.academic assistance and raised the pupil-teacher ratio slightly.

It's an open secret in educational circles that we have one of the best administrators in the province in the person of Eric Runacres and a showcase board of trustees, whose actions are models for the province. Those who criticize have read too much Toronto superficiality and understandably, have applied that situation to Belleville.

So how is Hastings' board and other boards going to make ends meet next year?

Only by trimming staff. As enrolments decline due to falling birthrates and high costs it is clear that the provincial grants will go down. If pupil-teacher ratios are preserved at the same level some teachers will have to go.

That's why teachers want to negotiate contracts for two years - - - class size - - and why negotiations are over the province must be scheduled next year.

Teachers want a weapon to bargain before board negotiators reach the impasse. Without the right to strike they have no weapon except mass resignation.

That's one reason teachers' federations want to exhibit when Education Minister Thomas Wells tried to make mass resignations retroactively illegal last Monday.

The other reason is that the legislation is clearly a violation of human rights. Moderates in teachers' ranks, who would never have considered wildcat strike action before, are now arguing in favor of Tuesday's walkout. They say they are protesting an injustice that could spread to menace everyone in the province.

But that issue might better be fought in the courts after it became law. Teachers' federation were advised to call for strike action next Tuesday. Teachers may not be essential workers, but they are placed in a position of trust as surrogate parents. They are betraying that trust by closing schools. And in closing schools they are alienating the public whose support they need more than ever.

If parents want to get into the action we have a suggestion. Send your kids to school next Tuesday and tell them to stay there until closing time. If the board withdraws buses, drive them yourself.

The sound of the resulting chaos should get through to Queen's Park and impress the cabinet with the public's sincerity in wanting action now.

Then give teachers a union with full bargaining rights and a contract with a strike clause. They are clearly indicating that's what they want. They will lose job security and the income they now enjoy.

But they would be out in the labor market on an equal footing with everyone else.

New Faces Needed On City Boards

New appointments to the city Park Board as the result of resignations will be before city council at its year-end caucus meeting to consider board and committee memberships.

One of the appointments will be to replace Alderman Joe Cossarino has resigned from both the Parks Board and Recreation-Arena Committee so that he may serve on the Quinte Planning Board.

Alderman Cox was named by city council to the planning board to replace Alderman Harold Orr, who was forced by ill health to resign from both council and the planning board.

There will also be an appointment to the recreation-Arena Committee as the result of George Zegouras being named to city council to replace Alderman Orr.

A second member will have to be appointed to the Parks Board to replace Donald Templeman, who had resigned.

Mr. Templeman, a 10-year member of the board, said the reason for his resignation was that he felt it was time the board had the benefit of a new face and new thinking.

Alderman Cox, a member of the Recreation-Arena Committee for the past seven years, said he resigned from the committee to enable him to give fuller attention to planning.

Last Touch

Christmas with a historical twist is just around the corner. The Hastings County Museum on Bridge Street East is celebrating Christmas with a Victorian touch this year. On Wednesday work parties finished decorating the museum with popcorn and cranberry strings, cedar bows and paper chains. The last decorative touch was added by Marg Wiggans, the chairwoman of the Museum's Christmas committee, to the 14 foot balsam fir tree presented to the museum by the Hastings County Council. The museum will start celebrating Christmas this weekend with free sleigh and buggy rides around the grounds between 1:30 and 3 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Oilers Drop 10th of Last 14

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The small of Edmonton's blood is the air in the World Hockey Association's West Division and the pack is starting to bowl.

The Oilers looked uncatchable at the start of the season, but they have lost 10 of their last 14 starts and the 4-3 victory Friday night is an indication of how close the race has become.

Edmonton found some of its old strength in the third period but the effort came too late for a comeback ahead and they dropped a 4-3 decision to Quebec Nordiques of the East Division.

Houston Aeros, meanwhile, rolled over Minnesota Fighting Saints 5-2 for advance to within a single point of the Oilers and Winnipeg Jets took a bloody 1-0 squeaker from Los Angeles Sharks to move into a tie with Minnesota at two points for further back. Two first-period fights set the tone of the game which followed, and the violence surge into the stands at the final buzzer.

Quebec's victory moved the Nordiques into a second-place tie in the East with Cleveland Toros. They trail New England Whalers, who are idle, by one point.

Oiler coach Brian Shaw, meanwhile, was juggling combinations in search of scoring punch.

Quebec goalie Michel DeGuise was a standout all night and used some of his skills to stop Oiler outburst began. Before the first Edmonton goal, he was clearly beaten three times but each time the puck hit a goalpost.

Edmonton centreman Jim Harrison thinks the momentum continued as the Oiler sparkplug by setting up Tom Gilmore for two goals in the first seconds in the final 1½ minutes, both from in front of the net. They were Gilmore's first goals in 10 games.

Shaw yanked goalie Chris Worthy but a wild scramble around the Quebec goal in the final seconds failed to produce tying shot.

Jets 1 Sharks 0

Playing coach Bobby Hull was in the thick of the action at Winnipeg. He drew a major in the first period for exchanging punches with Ron Garwasiuk of the Sharks, scored the game's only goal in the second period, and then climbed into the stands in the role of peacemaker after the game when a quartet of Sharks jumped the boards.

Los Angeles blueliner Bart Crashley led the charge against the fans and was joined by Garwasiuk, Reg Thomas and coach Ted McAskill. Police moved in to stop the punching and stick-swinging.

Hull's goal, his 19th of the year, came on a long shot just as he stepped on the ice midway through the second period. Goalie Gerry Cheevers wisely turned aside 32 shots to earn the shutout.

Jim Sherritt got two goals for Houston at St. Paul, Minn., one coming on a breakaway. Minnesota players and the other with an assist from Marty Howe. The Scottish-born rookie centre returned the favor by setting up Howe's 11th goal of the game, a 10-footer over Saints goalie Gilles Gratton.

It was Houston's eighth victory against a tie and two defeats in their last 10 games.

"We've played 11 times in four years and I'm still trying to figure out what they have over us," moaned Minnesota general manager Gren Gosselin. "I hope we never have to play them in the playoffs because I don't want to show up.

They are a classy bunch of hockey players, undoubtedly. That kid Sherritt seems to fit right in with the Oilers. He'll be an asset to any hockey team the way he's playing."

Gordie Howe got three assists, one by taking the puck away from a Saints defenceman while the Aeros were shorthanded and setting up Larry Lund.

Terry Ball scored two powerplay goals in the second period to monopolize the Minnesota scoring.

Whalers 3 Knights 1

Brian Mavencamp spoiled New England goalie Bruce Landon's shutout midway through the third period from a scramble in front of the net as Hartford downed Indiana aside 46 New Jersey shots.

Tom Earl and Larry Pleau each got a goal and an assist while Rick Ley added the game's only insurance goal from Tim Sheehy with one second remaining. Goalie Al Smith pulled the goalie Joe Junkin.

Toronto seeks sole possession of second place in the East Division tonight in a game at Cleveland against the Crusaders, while the Sharks visit Vancouver Canucks and the Aeros visit Chicago Cougars.

In Sunday's full slate the second-place battle continues as Quebec visits Toronto, Minnesota is in Winnipeg, Houston is idle and Indiana at Houston. Vancouver at Los Angeles, Chicago at New England and Edmonton at New Jersey.

Seals Tie Habs 2-2, Don't Ask Glover How

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Don't ask California coach Fred Glover what happened Friday night.

"If I could explain it, I'd bottle it," Glover gulped after his Golden Seals earned a 2-2 tie with Montreal Canadiens, second in the National Hockey League's East Division.

He figured playing in Oakland might have made the difference and the record backs up his theory. Of the Seals' scanty seven victories this season, eight are in losses and three ties, only one was gained on the road.

It wasn't that the Canadiens had been intimidated by the Seals were within striking distance of the Boston Bruins, only one game, and were off to Boston today to start a road trip that includes against the powerful Bruins, who lead the Canadiens by 30 points.

"That's not so bad," Glover said sarcastically of the Seals' schedule. "It's only our fourth coast-to-coast trip this season." The Seals have played one on the NHL scheduled Friday night.

Tonight, Toronto Maple Leafs try to hold third place in the East with "a home game against New York Rangers who lead the Leafs by one point. In other games, Montreal Black Hawks visit New York Islanders, Vancouver Canucks are at Boston, Detroit Red Wings visit the Penguins at Pittsburgh, Buffalo Sabres visit Minnesota North Stars and Atlanta Flames visit Philadelphia Flyers.

Sunday, in addition to the Canadiens' visit to Boston, the Islanders are at Philadelphia, Cohen Rangers entertain Chicago, Vancouver is at Detroit, St. Louis at Buffalo and Pittsburgh at Atlanta.

The Maple Leafs were expected to be without Paul Henderson, Eddie Shack and Bob Neeley tonight, but all are expected to be back in action by Wednesday in time for the Rangers' visit to Toronto.

One factor that may have made the difference in Oakland Friday night was the continuing slump of Montreal's Yvan Cournoyer. He ended his season on Steve Shutt's first-period goal on a screened shot, but it was the seventh in a row for him, all against weak opposition, that he has gone without a goal.

At one point this season Cournoyer was responsible for 45 per cent of Montreal's scoring nine of the team's first 20 goals. He still leads the Canadiens with 15.

But in two of his last seven games against Atlanta and Los Angeles, he did not get a shot on goal and in seven only one shot against each of the Islanders and Black Hawks.

Coach Scotty Bowman replaced him on the power play with Guy Lafleur, although he returned to power-play duty Friday night because Lafleur has a shoulder injury.

In the second period Jacques Lemaire scored his 11th goal of the season with the Seals short-handed to give the Canadiens a 2-1 lead.

But later in the period Walt McKechnie got his sixth assist season on a rebound from Reggie Leach. The pair switched roles for the Seals' tying goal in the third period. McKechnie's feeding Leach from behind the net.

The Canadiens' visit drew 7,696 fans, the biggest Oakland crowd this season, although there were still more than 4,000 empty seats.

Nighthawks Break Slump, Win 5-1

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sudbury Wolves broke out of a brief slump to take a firmer grip on first place in the Northern Hockey League North Division Friday night by downing Providence Reds 5-1.

The win gave the Nighthawks, who had lost two in a row, a three-point lead over the Reds and Nova Scotia Voyageurs, who were idle over the weekend.

Jerry Byers, Alain Langlais, Dave West, Scott McPhail and Dave Blake Dunlop had a goal each for the Nighthawks, who outshot Providence Reds down to their fifth straight defeat.

The first-period goal by Providence's Pierre Laganiere spoiled the shutout bid by New-boro goalie Lyle Carter.

Selects Take 12-2 Victory

TRAIL, B.C. (CP) — Moscow Selects defeated Trail Smoke Eaters 12-2 Friday night, don't handle the puck well enough to beat Trail's shifty skaters, arms, legs and the tops of their helmets.

Vladimir Repnew scored three goals for the Russians as they glided to their victory over the Smoke Eaters of the Western International Hockey League in a game attended by some 5,000 fans.

With almost effortless teamwork, the Selects opened the game at 2:33 of the first period when Vladimir Vadimir Odinsov and never looked back.

Trail goalie Ken Lockwood in the first period, by Dan McCarthy and Bobby Clarke.

Moscow's Nartaev and Sergei Kotov each scored twice for the Selects with Boris Mikhailov, Vladimir Popov, Sergei Korotkov and Vladimir Dvoiatov adding single goals.

The visitors led 5-2 at the end of the first period and 9-2 at the end of the second. Moscow put the game out of contention with three third-period markers.

Details of International Tournament are Announced

By ALAN TEEWORTH
Sports Staff

Toronto (Special)—Details were released yesterday at a press conference at the Hot Stove Lounge in Toronto of the CCM Tournament, which is to be played from December 26 through the new Year to January 5th.

The tournament, being put on through the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, and sponsored by CCM of Canada, will include six teams, three from Europe, two from the OHA Senior A loop, and one from the OHA Major Junior A circuit.

The teams from Europe are, from Russia, the Wings of the Soviet, from Czechoslovakia, Tesla Pardubice, and from Sweden, the Farjestad Hockey Club.

Competing in the tournament from the Senior A loop are the Brantford Foresters, and the Cornwall Royals. The Toronto Marlboros are the representative from the Metro Junior A league.

The tournament will see a total of 15 games, with a point system being used to determine the winner of the CCM International Tournament.

As well, there will be five, and possibly six exhibition games played by the touring European clubs.

On January 8th, the Russian team will play the top Canadian team in the tournament for the CCM Good Sports International Hockey Trophy.

The team includes several players who competed on the Russian team that played team Canada, among them Jan Shaleter, Vyecheslav Anisin, and Evgeni Simin.

The Swedish team which is competing is the same team that beat two players to the Toronto Maple Leafs this season, Ingy Hammarstrom, and Borje Salming.

On the Czech team are ten members of the National team, among them Stan Pyrl, who has 115 games of International experience.

The one possible exhibition game, still pending final approval, by the Czech team, is the one which may be played here in Belleville.

A foul up to arrangements made is impossible for the touring Russian team to make their appearance here, however the CAHA is trying to arrange the game with the Czechs for the Eagles.

Final word probably won't be known until near the new year, possibly not until the team actually arrives in Canada.

The games has been tentatively scheduled to be played Sunday, January 6th.

The problem stems to arise from the fact that the Czechs have to be home for prior commitments, as do the Swedish team.

The Russians, already on tour in Canada, playing junior teams across the country, will stay only to play the final game against the top Canadian team.

All the games will be played in Ontario this year, as opposed to last year when some of the games were moved out the province. Three of the games will be played on neutral ice, in Ottawa, Windsor, and Orillia between the visiting clubs from Europe.

The final games between the Russians and the top Canadian team will be broadcast on television, to be carried on the Global Television Network.

Jones Gets it From Both Sides

Belleville Bobcat, Norm Jones, found the going a bit rough in Oshawa last night, as did the entire Bobcat team. Here, Jones shot is stopped by Oshawa goalie Rick Walpole and then is sent topping over neighbour Jay Paterson. Bill Cox, Cox was not only a standout defensively, but offensively as well. He scored a pair of goals and added three assists to his teams attack as they sent the visiting Belleville team home on the short end of an 8-4 score. The victory moved the Oshawa team out of eighth place in the Metro Junior B league standings and dropped the Bobcats out of sole possession of first place.

Bobcats Lose 8-4

The Belleville Bobcats had the lead in the lead in last night's Metro Junior B game against Oshawa, but their lead only lasted nine seconds.

That's how long it took Oshawa to tie the game up and four minutes later pull into the lead before their home town crowd, as they defeated the Cats 8-4.

The first period ended with Oshawa ahead 1-0, Jeff Rorke-beck scored past the Crusher Gallant, with Glen Kirkham, Jim Dalgnan and Bill Cox getting first period assists.

Then Richardson and Paul King got the Belleville markers in the opening frame.

In the second period, Jim McGee and Horsbeck scored for the hometown team to put them ahead 7-3 at the end of the middle frame.

Joey Edwards replied for the Bobcats.

Cox scored his second of the night, as did King for Belleville, in the third period.

Eighteen penalties were assessed in the course of the contest including a game misconduct to Tim Yohn of the Bobcats. Yohn will now be absent from the Cats lineup for the next two games.

In other Metro games last night, Pickering edged Peterborough 5-4, Oshawa downed Etobicoke 7-4 and Wexford shutout Markham 5-0.

The Cats' next game is tomorrow night at 8 pm. when they take on Pickering at the Memorial Arena.

Take 9-6 Win From Terriers

Eagles Get Five in 3rd, Fifth Win

By MIKE BRADSHAW
Sports Staff

The Belleville Eagles, fired five unanswered goals in the third period, last night, to come from behind a 6-4 second period deficit and soar to victory over the visiting Orillia Terriers, 9-6.

"Our game plan was just to go out there and outskate them," said Eagles coach Larry Hughes. "Basically we knew all we had to do best them was come up with some heavy forechecking. Orillia has a tendency to make a lot of mistakes when they're under constant pressure."

Charlie Convery, the Eagles' captain, was presented with the Labatt's Player of the Month Award for his efforts last month.

Convery proved himself to be more than worthy of the honor as he led his team to his' successful carriage of the game plan. Charlie took the dogs by the leash, so to speak, and harassed the Terriers into countless mistakes while forechecking. Offensively Convery was consistently as good. On the score sheet, he tallied twice and added three assists, figuring in five of the nine Belleville goals.

Les Colligan was the top Eagles goal getter, however, as he picked up three, a single Godson got two, which included the game and winning goals of the game.

The Eagles came out flying in the first period, controlling the play and keeping Orillia in their own end for the first three minutes. Belleville took a 1-0 lead with just over one minute played in the contest as the persistent forechecking paid off.

After the first three minutes though, the play evened out and at the end of the period the two teams went off the ice deadlocked at 2-2.

Convery got the first Belleville marker and Colligan got the other first period tally.

Dan Lutes and Jim O'Brien scored for the Terriers.

It looked as though the Eagles were going to slack off and drop another one, though, as by the end of the second 20 minutes, Orillia had a 6-4 margin.

"We weren't taking out the third man in the plays," explained coach Hughes, "they always had an open man with a clean shot at the net."

Lutes and O'Brien fired their seconds of the night in the middle frame with Bob Munro and Dough Kelcher adding singles for the visitors.

Ron Riley and Colligan got the Belleville tallies in the second.

With the start of the third period came the beginning of the Eagles attack. The Eagles outshot their opponents 21-13 in the final period with five of those shots resulting in goals.

It seemed that Belleville could do nothing wrong. They forechecked well, backchecked strongly and skated hard and fast.

More important though, they stopped forcing their plays. They looked for the open man and did make good on count.

Only some fine stops by Orillia goalie Brent Ladds kept the final score as low as

Loyalist Win 1st in 2 Years

For the first time in two years the Loyalist Lancers hockey team has beaten St Lawrence College Roadrunners, of Cornwall.

Last night, at the Dick Ellis Rink, the Lancers sent visiting Cornwall team home on the short end of a 6-3 score.

The game, the roughest thus far in Eastern Ontario College play, saw the teams evenly matched with 21 shots on goal but, a total of 26 penalties being assessed.

Both teams received three major penalties for fighting and each was given a game misconduct. In minor penalties however, Loyalist had the edge as they got 19 to Cornwall's eight.

Barry Roantree and Reid Mallory led the Lancers with two goals and two assists each, while Dave Ferguson and Gord Johnston tallied singles.

For St Lawrence, Art Sinfield scored two with the third going to Gary Herrington.

Efficiency at Two Positions Costs Carleton 1st Team Berth

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Doug Double dirty, for Toronto Maple Leafs may have cost Wayne Carleton a first-team berth on the World Hockey Association All-Star team selected today.

Carleton, leading scorer in the WHA, drew enough support in a vote by players announced today to make the first team for the league's all-star game here Jan. 2. But his votes were split between the two positions he has been playing for the Toros, centre and left wing, and he had to settle for a second-team berth at centre.

Carleton, the only player recommended for two positions in the poll, drew 36 voting points at centre, making the first-team spot to Serge Bernier of Quebec Nordiques, who got 21 points.

Gary Jarrett of Cleveland Crusaders picked up 41 points to take the left-wing berth. Carleton drew 15 points at that position.

When general manager Jack Kelley of New England Whalers, coach of the East Division all-stars, heard of the split vote, he dropped Carleton from left wing.

Other members of the first team include goalie Gerry Cheevers of Cleveland, defencemen J. C. Tremblay of Quebec and Pat Stapleton of Chicago Cougars and right winger Tom Webster of New England.

The voting formula assigned five points for first-team votes, three for second and one for third. The player votes were combined into a single substitution from each club, and could not be for any player on that club.

Webster was the leading first-team pick, drawing nine of a possible 11 first-team votes from the 11 other WHA clubs. Tremblay and Stapleton each got eight first-team votes and Cheevers seven.

Stapleton and Bernier are the only two WHA newcomers to make the team. Both played in the National Hockey League last year. Stapleton with Chicago Black Hawks and Bernier with Los Angeles Kings.

Stapleton, player-coach of the Cougars, was a second-team choice on the NHL all-star team in three seasons.

Tremblay, a first-team NHL all-star with Montreal Canadiens in 1970-71, was on the WHA first team named at the end of last season.

Jarrett and Webster were both elected to the WHA second team last year.

Gilles Gratton of Toronto was the only rookie named to the East Division team. Gratton, who played goal for Oshawa Generals in the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A series last season, was a third-team pick.

Makeup of the West Division all-star team is to be announced Wednesday.

The complete East Division team, listed in the order of selection:

Goal—Cheevers; Al Smith, New England; Gratton.

Defence—Tremblary; Stapleton, Paul Shmyr, Cleveland; Brad Selwood, New England; Rick Ley, New England; Dale Hoganson, Quebec.

Centre—Bernier; Carleton, Larry Pleau, New England; Andre Lacroix, Jersey.

Left Wing—Jarrett; Hugh Harris, New England; Rejean Houle, Quebec; Bobby Sheehan, Quebec.

Quarry Takes Quick KO

NEW YORK (AP) — Jerry Quarry, his reputation for ruining the aspirations of fast-rising contenders fortified by a quick knockout victory over Ernie Shavers, appeared close today to a title fight next spring with heavyweight champion George Foreman.

Foreman, who attended a news conference after Quarry stopped Shavers in 2:21 of the first round of a scheduled 10-round bout Friday night at Madison Square Garden, said he would give the Cypress, Ca. lif., bomber a title match.

"I was impressed with Jerry. He should fight for the title as much as anyone," said Foreman. "He's paid his dues."

"I'm ready, willing and able," said Quarry. "Give me a shot."

"I'll give you a shot," said the champion.

Teddy Brenner, Garden boxing director, then signed with Foreman and offered him 3 million against a percentage of the gate to defend against Quarry in March.

However, Quarry may have to wait. Sources close to both Foreman and contender Ken Norton later said the champion would defend his crown against Norton next March in Jamaica. Norton, the second-ranking heavyweight, outpointed Muhammad Ali last March and dropped a split decision to Ali in a rematch.

Quarry, who had four straight victories after ending a short, 1967 retirement, scored his knockout loss to Ali in July, '72, outclassed Shavers.

The 210-pound Shavers, a Warren, Ohio, fighter whose reputation as a puncher was enhanced by a one-round knockout over Jimmy Ellis, couldn't manage only two ineffectual rights before reeling into the ropes after absorbing a left hook to the temple.

Quarry, who weighed 202 and is ranked fourth by the World Boxing Association, hit Shavers with at least a dozen punches and then drove his hapless foe around the ring with a devastating assault before sending him to the canvas with a right to the face.

Shavers arose almost immediately and stumbled into a corner. Referee Arthur Mercante looked at the groggy Shavers and stopped the fight.

"I threw a lot of punches, that's what did it," said Quarry, as he soaked his left hand in a bucket of ice water. "I knew if he came to fight I would knock him out because I'm a good puncher with my left."

Dr. Edwin Campbell, New York State Athletic Commission physician, said he suspected Quarry fractured a bone in his left hand when he fighter to have x-rays taken. Quarry, however, didn't report for the examination.

Shavers joined a growing list of Quarry victims who carried vaunted records into the Garde ring against Quarry and departed sadly. Quarry knocked out Mac Foster, who had stopped 20 consecutive opponents, in 1970, and then made a mockery of the odds by outpointing previously undefeated Ron Lyle last February.

Quarry registered his 29th knockout and improved his record to 43-4-4 while Shavers, who had scored 45 knockouts, dropped to 46-3-3.

Hawley at 499

LAUREL, Md. (CP) — Sandy Hawley needs just one more winner to become the first thoroughbred jockey in history to crack the 500 mark.

The 24-year-old Whitby, Ont., native was aboard two winners Friday at Laurel Race Track and boosted his 1973 total to 499.

He's listed on seven horses in today's program.

Hawley, who campaigns mainly on Ontario Jockey Club circuit, is the leading money winner in a single season Dec. 4 when he placed first three times, giving him 497 for the season. The record, 485, had been held by Bill Shoemaker who set the standard in 1953.

Hawley has had 1,977 mounts this year. Besides his 499 winners he's been second 330 times and third 283 times. His horses have won more than $2.1 million in purses.

Shoemaker had 1,983 rides in his record-setting year and won purses totalling $1.7million.

Ferguson Contends Physical Condition Sharpens Reflexes

MONTREAL (CP) — John Ferguson, former pugnacious left-winger with Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League, has a theory that a harness-racing driver in good physical condition will benefit by off-track exercises that will sharpen his reflexes.

Ferguson, who last performed for the Canadiens in the 1970-71 season, has been a keen advocate of physical fitness since he served as Harry Sinden's assistant in coaching Team Canada in its series against the Soviet Union last year.

Today Ferguson combines a successful business career with a partnership in a top harness-racing stable here.

In his spare time he has taken over as coach of the Blue Bonnets Hockey team, a squad composed primarily of grooms and drivers, that made its debut this year in the six-team Western Industrial League.

By early December Ferguson had spent seven weeks whipping his squad into shape and the team had responded by winning its first five games.

"I work them pretty hard," Ferguson said. "We have one practice a week, plus one league game. When we started the boys weren't in any condition. Now they're really coming around."

Ferguson, who had 165 goals and 158 assists in 500 NHL games spread over eight seasons with the Canadiens, remains convinced the conditioning will pay dividends for his players in their prime occupation.

Among the Montreal drivers playing with the team are Serge Grive, Michael MacDonald, Pierre Lecharite, Claude Patry and the Trudeau brothers—Leslie and Jacques.

And to bear out Ferguson's theory, all have been showing improved track records since joining the team.

"I don't know whether the fact they have been playing hockey has been the main reason for their recent success at the track, but I do know they are in much better physical shape now and their reactions and reflexes have to be sharper," Ferguson said.

Leslie Trudeau supported Ferguson's theory.

"I lost 15 pounds since we started training," the driver said. "As a result I never felt better in my life—my legs are stronger, my wind is better and my back, which was badly wrecked up last year, feels all right."

Leslie says his reflexes have become sharper since he returned to the ice. He said that all members of the team lost weight after the training began.

He said Ferguson, always a rough, tough competitor, has "had our tongues hanging out after every workout."

Ferguson likely will play with the Blue Bonnets team before the schedule ends. League rules maintain that a player must appear in three games during the season to be eligible for the playoffs.

Opening lead—10 ♦

By Oswald and James Jacoby

South's four spade opening was an all purpose bid. He didn't know if he could make it or even if he wanted to get to game, but at the same time he felt that if he couldn't make game, his opponents might well be able to do so in a suit of their own.

It turned out that the bid was well chosen. South could and should have made four spades, but a combination of the right Topening lead; the right return and poor play by South left him one trick short.

There was nothing sensational about West's opening lead. He had eqtals in diamonds. East's play of the ace and return of the six were almost automatic plays.

South was in and it was up to him to carry on. It was also up to him to stop and think for a second, but South wasn't a thinker. He wanted to pull trumps and led his nine spot in the hope that if West held the ace, West would duck. West might have ducked except for one thing. He had no low trump to put on the nine.

So West played his ace and led a third diamond. East ruffed and promptly took the setting trick with the ace of clubs.

Just a moment's thought by South would have alerted him to this danger. It also would have shown him a simple way to avoid it. All he had to do was to lead his singleton heart to dummy's king and discard his last diamond on the ace.

OTTAWA (CP) — The National Arts Centre's theatre department is limited in its 1973-74 season to a two-per-cent increase over last season in its total spending, an arts centre official said Thursday.

Its projected deficit for 1973-74—the short-fall between expected box office receipts and total outlay—is $782,000, an increase of three per cent from last year.

The Canadian Press reported erroneously last week that the deficit this season compared with one of under $450,000 last year. The latter figure was incorrect, last year's deficit being $753,000.

Total expenditure in the current season is expected to run to $1.22 million, compared with $1.2 million last year, the NAC said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Singer Bobby Darin, 37, who underwent heart surgery two years ago, is "doing well" at Cedars of Lebanon Hospital, a spokesman said Wednesday.

Darin entered the hospital Tuesday at his own request. Hospital spokesmen refused to disclose his ailment.

Diabetes Never Actually Cured

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am a diabetic and used to be on pills. My blood sugar has been 85 and 94 lately. Now I've heard several times that about one in ten diabetics doesn't get the sugar from food, that's diabetes.

Most of the time it is possible to control the level of sugar in your blood by diet, or pills, or insulin, or some combination of the these. And that is fine! You seem to be in live an active life.

But that doesn't mean the diabetes is cured. Your pancreas is still in the same condition it was—unable to produce enough insulin.

Some patients by proper treatment and diet get their blood sugar down to a normal level. And they think they are "cured." That is one of the pitfalls of treating diabetes. Some patients not understanding the truth, begin to overeat, and perhaps stop medication. Some of them seem to get away with it for a limited time. But sooner or later, they discover their mistake—the hard way.

The only exception I can cite for you is that occasionally a "temporary diabetes" develops in pregnancy, and then may disappear afterward. Unfortunately in such instances it usually is a sign that diabetes is likely to develop later in life.

Now for your second question. Yes, there are attacks of lightheadedness and weakness in the legs come on? Usually some time after you have taken your pills? Or after you have not eaten anything for some time?

You may be experiencing a period of low blood sugar which can be dan ious. You may have restricted your diet a little too much. If so, eating a little more particularly protein foods, which are converted only quite slowly into blood sugar, may solve it.

Of course there are other causes of giddiness, but your doctor would have to determine that.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Will six small meals a day more effectively reduce a person's weight than three regular meals, total calories a day being kept the same, about 1,000 calories? This manner of dieting seems to appease someone like myself who is a small eater but a sibler.—J.C.

I doubt if it would make much difference. However, if you enjoy your day's food more six meals helps you stop nibbling between meals, then that's certainly in your favor. Nibbling probably causes at least as much delay in overeating at regular mealtime. Maybe more.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband's grandfather used to make a jewel tea for his stomach. What do you think about this remedy? My husband is always wanting me to try it.—Mrs. M.H.

It sounds like something everybody's grandfather might have taken, but I can't see what good it could be.

Addict Pickup Sought

OTTAWA (CP) — Heroin and other hard-core drug addicts should be picked up by police and temporarily held for treatment, the Le Dain commission study on illegal drug use concluded Friday.

A similar experiment might one day be useful for alcoholics, commission chairman Gerald Le Dain said following release of the four-year inquiry's fourth and final report.

"We must use the criminal law system to orient people to treatment," the former Toronto law school dean told a news conference after the report was tabled in the Commons.

Generally, the 1,172-page study says drug laws are tough enough and that the commission favors an "orderly withdrawal approach" from all criminal laws against illegal drug users.

But it also recommends a roundup of some of the country's estimated 15,000 hard-drug addicts who would be locked away for three days for medical tests and from one to three months for clinical treatment.

The idea of the experiment, Prof. Le Dain said, would be to give addicts a chance to assess their problems and consider treatment methods.

But dope addicts refusing treatment should be free to go after the confinement and courts generally should stop pulling drug users and possessers in jail.

Criminologist Marie-Andree Bertrand of Montreal, one of the commissioners, argued that the experiment was too authoritarian to work.

Health Minister Marc Lalonde refused comment on the report, but said the government would consider it when it was mapping out drug policy next year.

Elsewhere in the report, the commission said all heroin addicts should have the synthetic narcotic methadone available to them and that they should be given heroin itself if they do not respond to methadone treatment.

The commission also reiterated its feeling that alcohol is, and likely will remain, the country's most serious non-medical drug use problem.

All five members of the commission agreed, Prof. Le Dain said, that the short-term physical and social effects of alcohol were "much more damaging" than the effects of cannabis drugs such as marijuana and hashish.

Police Favor Report

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Le Dain commission's proposal that police be given the power to round up hard drug addicts for medical examination and treatment drew favorable comment Friday.

Syd Brown, president of the Metropolitan Toronto Police Association, said in an interview he approves of anything that involves police in helping to ensure treatment for addicts and cuts down on the work of prosecuting.

Halifax Police Chief C. O. (Ollie) Robinson was also sympathetic to the idea, although he said addicts should not be detained in police cells.

The proposal for police roundups, contained in the fourth Le Dain report on the non-medical use of drugs tabled Friday in the House of Commons, calls for detention of addicts for up to 72 hours to determine dependency.

Len Blumenthal, a director of the Alberta Alcoholism and Drug Abuse Commission, said the concept of a roundup was welcome as a means of securing treatment for addicts.

"Though enforced treatment is sometimes not as effective, it will still help some addicts get away from their problem—people who wouldn't normally go for treatment," he said.

Mr. Blumenthal said the Le Dain commission plan would require more money for treatment programs and specialized training of police.

Dorothy Rankl, supervisor of the Alberta drug commission's treatment centre in Edmonton, said she agrees with the Le Dain report's idea of in-patient treatment in residential centres.

"That's the greatest need we have now," she said. "When addicts first come into treatment, they're so tense—they have regular panic attacks. That's why 24-hour, long-term care is needed."

Defends Sodium

TORONTO (CP) — Environment Minister James Auld Friday defended the government's action in using sodium to neutralise a sulphuric acid spill on prime farmland at Pelham on the Niagara Peninsula.

Mr. Auld was commenting on a published report that a University of Guelph study found the use of sodium carbonate (soda ash), and sodium hypochlorite to control the spill was wrong because it hardened the soil, preventing moisture seepage.

As a result, vegetation was killed and farmland rendered useless for at least 10 to 15 years.

Mr. Auld said in an interview the government had to act quickly to neutralize the acid and get it directed into lagoons in order to avoid a serious health hazard.

officials of Mr. Auld's ministry used the wrong neutralizer that caused serious soil damage to about 75 acres in the area.

The spill occurred Dec. 1, 1972, when a train was derailed, dumping more than 200,000 gallons of sulphuric acid on the railway's right of way and six adjoining farms.

Debate Daylight Time

TORONTO (CP) — Going on daylight time would not affect Ontario's energy conservation program much, Energy Minister Darcy McKeough said today.

But he told the legislature there may be compelling economic reasons for the province to follow the lead of the United States if that country institutes daylight time next month.

In a ministry report, to the government, Mr. McKeough said there would be some savings on electricity by going on to daylight time during the winter months.

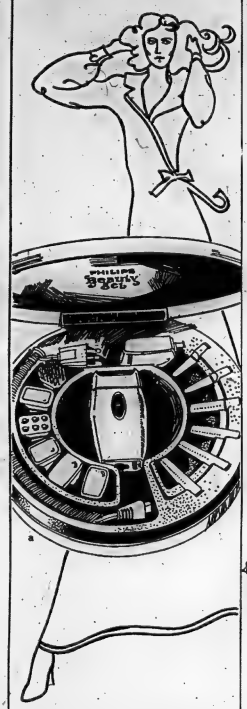
"There may be, although there doesn't seem to be any hard evidence to indicate it, that there would be extra useage of either oil or gas," Mr. McKeough said.

"So our report is to the government that in terms of energy, the effect would be minimal, plus or minus one per cent."

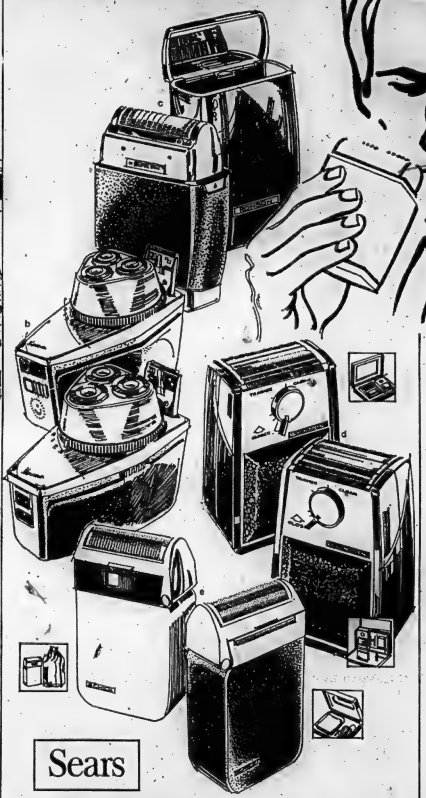
But the energy minister said there are other implications which must be considered.

They are "mainly economic in terms of transportation scheduling, in terms of television timetables, in terms of the stock market."

He added he and his colleagues are concerned about "the industrial dislocation" which might arise if Ontario were on a different schedule than the eastern United States.



Towns May Say 'Stop'



TORONTO (CP) — The ministry of transport and communications announced Friday the transfer to Ontario municipalities of a number of powers at present held by the provincial government.

Provincial Treasurer John White presented the changes to a meeting of the provincial-municipal liaison committee.

Municipalities soon will be able to erect stop signs without the approval of the minister of transportation and communications. They also will be allowed to close county bridges, negotiate agreements with the counties for road work, set the regulations for gas pumps and signs for county roads, designate a highway for controlled access, issue debentures for road construction and have the power to erect signal lights.

Hijacked Jet Flown to Athens

20 Killed at Rome By Palestinian Gurrillas

ATHENS (CP) — Four Palestinian guerrillas hijacked a West German airliner today and flew it to Athens after killing at least 20 persons at Rome's international airport in a bomb and bullet attack.

The four guerrillas sprayed a lounge at Rome's Fiumicini Airport with sub-machine-gun fire and hurled an incendiary bomb into a United States airliner before taking off in the Lufthansa Boeing 727 airliner.

The guerrillas took 11 hostages with them to Athens. They threatened to blow up the aircraft and all the hostages unless the military-backed Greek government releases two Palestinians it holds.

The two Palestinians are being held in connection with a bomb and gun attack at Athens airport last Aug. 5 when four persons were killed and another 55 wounded.

Police in Rome said the death toll was at least 18 and probably higher. At least 40 persons were injured.

The four Palestinians arrived in Rome as passengers boarded as airliner from the Middle East. During a baggage check, they took sub-machine-guns from their suitcases and sprayed a passenger lounge.

Two of the terrorists ran up two boarding ramps and threw an incendiary bomb inside a Pan American World Airways jetliner. Police said the resulting fire killed all 11 passengers in the first-class section of the plane.

The two terrorists then joined their companions aboard a Lufthansa Boeing 727 jetliner.

First reports said one of the terrorists may have been wounded by police fire.

The plane appeared headed for Beirut but was refused permission to land in the Lebanese capital.

The bomb buried in Rome ripped two holes in the Pan American Boeing 707 and set it afire. One gaping hole was visible in the roof of the forward cabin and another in the rear.

Police said there were four hijackers who described themselves as Palestinians over the intercommercial Kiser's radio. Lufthansa officials in Frankfurt said the crew included a pilot, co-pilot, two stewardesses and a woman ramp agent.

The shooting panicked travellers and airport employees. Police evacuated all airport buildings after the attack.

The terrorists struck as three Arabs were being tried in Rome courts on charges of plotting to strike down an Israeli airliner with rocket launchers. They were arrested during a raid on an apartment near the airport last Sept. 5.

That attack was o have coincided with the anniversary of the Palestinian massacre of Israeli athletes at the Munich Olympic Games Sept. 5. Five Arabs were arrested, and two were released pending a later trial.

There were reports that one of the three on trial was an important member of the Palestinian guerrilla movement.

In Beirut, the Palestinian guerrilla leader denounced the hijacking operation as directed against the interests of the Palestinian people.

Kissinger's Hopes For Parley High

JERUSALEM (CP) — United States State Secretary Henry Kissinger met again today with Israeli leaders after telling reporters he is optimistic that the Arab-Israeli peace conference will open in Geneva Friday.

Kissinger arrived in Israel Sunday afternoon and met for 6½ hours Sunday night with Premier Golda Meir and other leaders. He said they talks were "very friendly, very warm, very constructive."

The predominant topic is reported to have been the role to be played by the United Nations at the peace conference. The Arab states, enjoying the support of the majority in the world body, want the talks held under UN auspices. Israel prefers United States and the Soviet supervision.

The U.S. secretary talked early today with Defence Minister Moshe Dayan, then drove through a chilling rain with Deputy Premier Yigal Allon to Mrs. Meir's office.

The Geneva talks were originally scheduled to open Tuesday but have been delayed until Friday. There was no official confirmation here of the delay but it was first reported by U.S. sources and announced by Egypt Sunday.

Despite Kissinger's optimism, there were indications of difficulties in getting the conference going. Premier Golda Meir called her cabinet into special session Sunday night to discuss her talks with Kissinger.

Tax on Higher Incomes Is Raised

LONDON (CP) — The British government, fighting what is described as Britain's gravest economic crisis since the Second World War, today announced a one-shot 10-per-cent tax increase on higher incomes and tight controls on instalment buying.

Anthony Barber, chancellor of the exchequer, also announced that profits made by ordinary home-owners in property sales will be subject to a capital gains tax. Property speculation has been a strong target by trade unions pushing for increased wages.

But there was one bright ray in what is shaping up as the gloomiest Christmas in recent British history. Barber promised there would be no increase in direct or indirect taxation with the exception of the special tax on incomes of more than £5,000 (12,000) a year.

Charter Agreement Completes Air Talks

OTTAWA (CP) — Negotiators have worked out an agreement on air charter issues with United States authorities wrapping up four years of air negotiations. Michel Dupuy, head of the Canadian team, said today.

The charter settlement is the final step in an over-all agreement which includes new air routes and an enlarged customs preclearance system. The air routes and preclearance accords were reached in early September but final approval hinged on the charter settlement.

Government officials describe the air agreement as the "biggest bilateral air negotiations package that has ever been made in the world."

'Wells Denounces 'Mob Rule'

Board Chairmen Join Teachers In Opposing Resignations Ban

TORONTO (CP) — Education Minister Thomas Wells denounced "mob rule" by teachers Sunday following a mediation meeting that was termed a waste of time by school board chairmen and teacher negotiators.

About 150 educationists from 16 school jurisdictions in Ontario responded to the minister's invitation to negotiate. Many said the meeting served only to deepen the crisis.

Officials of teachers' federations and school boards said the meeting killed the principle of local school board autonomy and may act as a brake on their bitargaining settlements.

Both school board chairmen and negotiators for the teachers called for withdrawal of a controversial bill banning teacher resignations.

Geoff Wilkinson, president of the Ontario Teachers Federation (OTF) condemned the bill as "a totalitarian measure, contrary to any democratic notion of civil rights."

Mr. Wells told teachers to stop over-reacting to the bill. He said the government's intention is to prevent a strike by teachers because their services are essential.

The minister decried teachers attempts "to intimidate me," by "taking of rallies of 50,000," demonstrations at Queen's Park Tuesday and at other centres.

Those who oppose the bill should vote against the government in the next election instead of demanding that teachers have the right to strike.

Support of Mr. Wells came from Gerard Barbeau, president of the Ontario School Trustees Council, who said teachers are acting irresponsibly and teaching civil disobedience to students by their example.

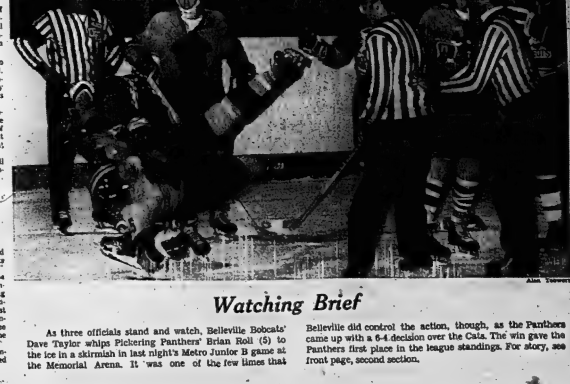
Douglas Dinsmore, president of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers Federation (OSSTF), said Sunday's meeting was a waste of time because the minister offered no new initiative.

"We are shocked," Mr. Dinsmore said. "We told the minister that the only proper place to deal with this bill is before a committee of the legislature where we can appear and be heard."

Douglas Knott, chief negotiator of the Ontario English Catholic Teachers Association (OECTA), said the intention of the meeting is in violation with the rights of school boards to negotiate locally.

He predicted settlements will be hindered by further confusion and dismay following the meeting.

Both Mr. Knott and Mr. Dinsmore said the meeting did not even attempt to avert Tuesday's province-wide walkout that may see two million students left without the services of 105,000 teachers.

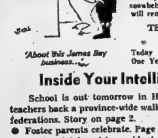


But Mr. Wells claimed partial success for the meeting, at which eight of the 16 disputing jurisdictions accepted his offer of immediate help to negotiate contract settlements.

The 18 disputed areas produced mass resignations by 7,500 teachers last month, to be effective Dec. 31—resignations that Mr. Wells equated with strike action and introduced legislation to prevent.

Sunday's meeting broke into applause when a school board chairman called on the minister to withdraw the bill.

Gerald Pouget, chairman of the Essex County Roman Catholic Separate school board, said the bill is a "travesty of the traditional autonomy that school boards have," and said the meeting was "a complete waste of time."



He described the gathering as "a grandstand play by the minister and it will do nothing to head off the greatest crisis ever in Ontario's education system."

Billy Graham Tells Nixon Change Needed to Stay Free

WASHINGTON (AP) — Preaching at the White House, evangelist Billy Graham Sunday told President Nixon and 270 high-ranking guests:

"We must alter our course if we are going to see many more Christmas seasons as a free people."

"We must reorder our priorities, we must remake the unjust structures that have taken advantage of the powerless and broken the hearts of the poor and the dispossessed," he said.

Dr. Graham described 1973 as "one of the most convulsive years in American history," citing among other things "the fury of Watergate."

"The symptoms of unrest and trouble are not confined to the United States. They are worldwide. Almost everyone I talk to seems to sense that a hurricane is about to break on the world, of cataclysmic proportions."

Asserting that the U.S. is in deep trouble "morally, socially, economically, politically and spiritually," Dr. Graham said its course must be altered if its people are to survive free.

The Yale Whiffenpoofs, a group of 14 Yale University seniors, had been scheduled to sing during the service. They cancelled their appearance last week and their business manager acknowledged that three members refused to make the trip.

To substitute for the Whiffenpoofs, the White House enlisted the U.S. Army chorus.

News Briefs

Fire Kills Two

TORONTO (CP) — John Summers, 41, and Patricia Code were killed and between 15 and 20 others left homeless when fire destroyed a downtown rooming house Sunday. A fire department spokesman said about 12 persons were rescued from the three-storey building before it was destroyed.

Energy Crisis Real

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States energy chief says his biggest job is persuading the public that the energy crisis is real, William Simon, head of the Federal Energy Office, said Sunday the crisis will continue even if Arab countries resume oil shipments to the United States. "We have been on a collision course in energy requirements and demands for many years," he said. "In 1970 production peaked . . . but energy needs will double between 1972 and 1990."

Price Will Rise

JAKARTA (Reuter) — Indonesia will increase its oil prices by at least 25 per cent next month, official sources said today. The current prices range from $6 to $6.50 a barrel.

Principals May Work

TORONTO (CP) — Principals are being urged to remain at schools where teachers boycott classes Tuesday to protest the government's emergency education bill, say the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation (OSSTF). Jack Hutson, an OSSTF executive, said Sunday night one other staff member, to be selected by the teachers, also should remain at each school.

Wells Said Unfit

TORONTO (CP) — Stephen Lewis, leader of the Ontario New Democratic Party, said today that Education Minister Thomas Wells should resign or be transferred to another ministry. "Wells is not fit for the office any longer. "It's inconceivable that a minister can be so grossly unfair and then talk about intimidation."

Nixon Gets Support

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — The latest Gallup Poll indicates the percentage of Americans who believe President Nixon should be forced out of office has dropped slightly after rising steadily since June. Thirty-five per cent of those questioned in a Nov. 30 - Dec. 3 survey said the president should be impeached and compelled to leave office. That poll showed a drop of two per cent from a Nov. 2 - 5 survey.

Ignore Injunction

DETROIT (AP) — Members of Teamsters Local 337 set up pickets at Detroit-area supermarket warehouses early today despite a federal court injunction prohibiting a job walkout. A strike would affect supermarkets serving 80 per cent of the people in a three-county area that includes the fifth largest United States city, officials said.

Watching Brief

As three officials stand and watch, Belleville Bobcats' Dave Taylor whips Pickering Panthers' Brian Roll (5) to the ice in a skirmish in last night's Metro Junior B game at the Memorial Arena. It was one of the few times that Belleville did control the action, though, as the Panthers came up with a 6-4 decision over the Cats. The win gave the Panthers first place in the league standings. For story, see front page, second section.

Teachers Here Join Walkout

Most of Hastings County's public and separate school students will have an unscheduled pre-Christmas holiday tomorrow as their teachers walk out in a protest move.

The majority of the 1,300 public and separate elementary and secondary school teachers will not report to work. They are joining a province-wide walkout to protest a bill before the legislature designed to avert a threatened January strike, by mass resignations, of teachers in 16 counties.

Elementary school teachers announced their decision to walk out Friday. Secondary school teachers announced this morning that the majority of the members of their federation here will not show up Tuesday morning.

Buses will run and schools will open at 9 a.m. as required by law. The principal and one staff member designated by the staff will be on hand at each school, as well as the majority of teachers who voted against joining the one-day wildcat strike.

If insufficient staff is present, children will be returned to their homes for their own safety. Parents who send children to school Tuesday have been advised to make plans to receive them at home again later in the morning.

Teachers are not revealing to the public the exact staffing situation in each school.

The OSSTF division here will hold study sessions for some teachers in private homes Tuesday and a busload of teachers will go to Toronto to join a Maple Leaf Gardens rally.

Emergency transportation arrangements are being made today by administrators to ensure that no child will be left at schools that are dismissed because of lack of staff.

Old-fashioned Christmas

Everything was authentic, including the bone chilling cold as Hastings county museum offered free cutter rides Saturday and Sunday around the museum grounds. Jim Hadih, an Arabian gelding driven by Mrs. Nancy Allin of Sinsel Farms carries a load of youngsters on a circuit. EMJ Stables contributed a mare, Centennial Magic, to pull the second cutter. Sleigh rides will again be available next Saturday and Sunday, from 1 to 3 p.m. at the museum.
